WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Democratic editors are beginning to fear the effect on the party fortunes in the next election being made of Secretary Bryan's Chautauqua speech-making which tended to eliminate him as a Presidential possibility in the minds of the followers of President Wilson and has not caused Champ Clark, Speaker of the House of Representatives Underwood, majority leader in the House, who were overshadowed by Bryan at Baltimore, to shed any tears entirely willing to let Mr. Bryan's influence as an issue get diminished, the Democratic editors are beginning to estimate the effect on the administration of the disposition created by the action of the Secretary of State in lecturing for pay. It is pointed out that before he went upon the Chautauqua circuit Mr. Bryan obtained the consent of the President, Mr. Wilson. To some extent, therefore, Mr. Wilson, who is said to be annoyed by the criticisms of Bryan's Chautauqua activities,

Unaided "the Bright Orb of Day" Fires Two Houses.

[A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 17.—The rays of the sun striking a window pane in a house on Arizona street today were reflected in concentrated form fifteen feet and ignited a lace curtain at a window in the house next door, thus starting a fire which was not extinguished until the homes of Mrs. Mary Maynard and Miss Lily Story were entirely consumed and the house of a barber, adjoining, was partly burned.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Dozens of young women returning from Europe have attracted attention by "swagger" sticks they carried. Inquiries brought out the information that the sticks, which were armed with a short, sharp steel point, had a hatpin beat in the matter of discouraging mashers.

"It is almost impossible for an unescorted girl to walk a block in any Italian city and not be insulted," said Miss Grace Hanley, a pretty Chicago school teacher. "Roman and Neapolitan fops are beginning to find out that any girl with a cane would better be left alone."

Rangers Fighting Desperately to Save Timber in Santa Barbara Mountains.

Girl Makes Dash on Horse Through Blazing Thicket to Escape Death.

Hundreds Flee in Autos to San Diego in Advance of Conflagration.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Two forest fires resulting in the death of one man and the loss of thousands of dollars worth of property, marked the hottest day ever experienced in Santa Barbara and vicinity. The victim was Maj. Charles Anderson, a retired United States army physician, who was found unconscious and burning by rangers. The doctor died within two hours after taken to a hospital.

Dr. Anderson left his residence in Santa Barbara to assist in fighting the flames which were surrounding one of his homes in the mountain side and was working valiantly when overcome by heat and smoke. He fell unconscious into the fire and his clothing was ablaze when rangers rescued him. His hands and face were badly scorched and no hope was entertained for his recovery.

FIRE IN THE FOOTHILLS.

The fire on the foothills of the Santa Ynez mountains broke out at about 1 o'clock and with all vegetation dry as tinder, spread rapidly. Forest rangers and others rushed to the scene and succeeded in confining it to Sycamore Canyon with but little property loss. Just about the time when the rangers decided that the fire was under control, they saw smoke rising from the Hope ranch, the magnificent property surrounding the Potter Country Club and nearly the whole force fled for the new field of action.

On the Hope ranch it was estimated that hundreds of oak trees were destroyed while other vegetation caused a loss that would be hard to estimate. The beautiful Fowler home on a commanding site on the ranch was in danger for several hours, but by back-firing the rangers and volunteers finally saved it.

GIRL RIDES THROUGH FIRE.

An interesting feature of the fire on the mountain side was the experience of pretty Helen Patie who lives with her father in the densest part of the forest. She was down in a deep canyon when the fire started, and did not know it until flames completely surrounded her. She knew her only hope of escape was to ride through the fire and jumping astride her trusty horse made a dash for safety. The horse seemed to realize the peril of both and landed the girl near her home without a burn. Miss Patie's home was destroyed a year ago by a forest fire.

A novelty in fire fighting was witnessed when practically the rangers and volunteers rushed to the fires in automobiles. It was because of the rapid transit that they were able to get the flames under control so soon. Tonight fire was burning in spots both on the mountain and the Hope ranch, but there was not much wind and the rangers anticipated little trouble in handling the flames.

The government thermometer registered the hottest day since the weather office was established here. At 1 p. m. the mercury stood at 108, five degrees hotter than yesterday. The humidity was only 13 and consequently there was not much suffering.

SKETCH OF DR. ANDERSON.

Dr. Anderson, who lived in Santa Barbara most of the last thirty years, came from a noted family of soldiers, dating back to Revolutionary days. His brother, Thomas Anderson, brigadier-general, retired, was the first commander in the Philippines at the time of the Spanish-American War. A grandfather served an officer through the revolution. Dr. Anderson, after having served as a surgeon in the United States army, had been retired many years, but at the outbreak of the war he re-enlisted and served in his professional capacity in the Philippines. He knew no service since the close of that war and had resided uninterruptedly in Santa Barbara. He held the title of major.

Dr. Anderson was remarkably well preserved and his old friends say he had undergone virtually no change the last twenty years, so far as personal appearance is concerned. He was, however, somewhat feeble. Mrs. Anderson and Miss Mary Anderson, the daughter, are the only relatives in Santa Barbara.

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 17. — [Exclusive Dispatch.] Minors who desire to marry while their parents are away cannot obtain parental consent over the telephone and expect the authorities issuing the marriage licenses to recognise such acquiescence as legal." Neither may the city clerks date back marriage licenses. Atty.-Gen. Carmody so informed the city clerks of this State today. "The whole spirit as well as the letter of the law will be violated by communicating with parents on the telephone and procuring authority to sign the license. The practice is certainly illegal. Nor do I find anything in the statute which will permit a clerk to date back a license."

CHARLES DE YOUNG CROSSES DIVIDE.

PUBLISHER OF SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE SUMMONED.

Succumbs After Valiant Fight With Typhoid Fever at Home of His Parents at San Mateo—Young Man of Great Promise in His Chosen Profession of Journalism.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Charles de Young, publisher of the San Francisco Chronicle, died early this morning at the country home of his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. de Young, at San Mateo.

Death came after an illness of more than a month's duration, the last two weeks of which were devoted to a strenuous battle against the ravages of typhoid fever, which finally proved too powerful for medical science to successfully combat or for human determination to withstand.

For several days the members of the family assembled at the country place had known that the end was near and the physicians based their sole hope of restoring their patient to health on his own great vitality and pluck, which did not falter until life itself was gone.

The Chronicle editorially says:

"The death of Charles de Young, publisher of the San Francisco Chronicle, and the only son of one of its founders, M. H. de Young, has cut short the career of a young man who promised to take a foremost place in modern journalism.

"A few weeks before his death he had created for him by his father the position of publisher. He had previously performed the responsible duties of business manager of the Chronicle and while acting in that capacity he had thoroughly acquainted himself with all the details of the various departments of the paper, his activities being in the nature of a preparation for the broader field of general management, which he entered upon later with such brilliant prospects.

"In fitting himself for the arduous work of conducting a great daily newspaper, Charles de Young exhibited a remarkable insight and a degree of application and energy rarely equaled. He brought to the task an excellent education and a marked predilection for the profession of which he was ambitious to become a leader.

"He was untiring in his efforts to secure a thorough grasp of every subject he was called upon to deal with, and never shrank from the labor involved in familiarizing himself with all the requirements of an exacting business.

"As a citizen he made an impression on the community by the active part he took in every movement designed to promote the interest of the city. He was foremost in all projects looking to that end, and the cessation of his energies will be felt and regretted by many council boards.

"But the highest tribute that can be paid to him is that those who knew him best, those who worked with him to help achieve his ambition, will mourn his death most deeply."

SPLENDIDLY EQUIPPED.

Charles de Young was born on Powell street in this city, June 30, 1881. His early education was received in the old Redding primary and Pacific Heights grammar schools. When 14 years of age he accompanied his parents to Europe, where he attended the College de Ste. Croix, in Paris, and later, a day school in Berlin.

Returning to this country, he spent a year at Exeter Academy in New Hampshire, preparing for a college course. In 1901 he matriculated at Harvard University, from which institution he was graduated four years later, receiving his bachelor's degree from the hands of President Eliot.

The educational scheme was mapped out by his father with such piety that Charles de Young found himself, on graduating from the university, perfectly equipped for active participation in the business newspaper field in which his sire had so long been a leading spirit.

After a year's practical experience behind the counters of the Chronicle business office, he was made business manager. It was evident to M. H. de Young that his son was attributed with the administrative ability requisite to cope with the many complications attending the management of a large daily newspaper.

This appointment was made in 1906,

ROYALTY IN WYOMING TO HUNT BIG GAME.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CODY (Wyo.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Prince Albert, ruler of Monaco, en route to Los Angeles, came and saw and was conquered by the little town of Cody today. He is astounded by the overwhelming welcome accorded him, but thoroughly appreciates the genuine hospitality shown him. He would rather be Mayor of Cody, he says, than ruler of Monaco with its alluring, enticing Monte Carlo.

"You are almost too hospitable to me," said the Prince, with a smile. "I really don't deserve all of this honor, but it makes me feel glad just the same. If I were not the ruler of Monaco I should like to be Mayor of Cody, or maybe a County Commissioner. That would be an honor in my eyes."

He expressed himself as above at the rousing welcome extended to him at the opening of the Park County Fair today. At the conclusion of an address of welcome by Buffalo Bill cheers were given for Prince Albert, who responded with a short talk. He paid a warm tribute to Col. Cody, to America and its people.

"The world will remember him long after he is dead," said the Prince, "and I hope the grim reaper will long defer his call for the man who is loved the same in Europe as he is in America."

He again expressed his appreciation of his welcome and said he liked America best of all countries he had visited.

"Everywhere I see that wonderful, fighting American spirit," he concluded, "and I now understand why you people succeed. It's because you know how to hustle and do not know what failure means."

The Prince expects to start for the mountains tomorrow to begin his hunting trip under the guidance of Col. Cody.

TARRYTOWN (N. Y.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Findley J. Shepard, gowned in a Japanese costume, this afternoon welcomed 350 little girls, all members of her sewing class, at a party which she gave in their honor at Lyndhurst.

She was assisted by Mrs. Edwin Gould, the Misses Marjorie and Helen Gould and Master Edwin Gould, Jr. They also wore Japanese costumes. The entertainment was provided in tents and consisted of a lecture on Japan and tricks by several magicians. Afterward all marched to a large tent gayly decorated where refreshments were served. Each child also received a box of candy and a Japanese flag or umbrella.

This was the first party given by Mrs. Shepard since her marriage.

MILLER FILES HIS BRIEF.

Federal Attorney Insists that Judgment Against Convicted Union Dynamiters Should Be Affirmed.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—The government's 730-page brief, giving reasons why the judgments of the United States District Court at Indianapolis, Ind., in the cases of the twenty-eight convicted "labor-union dynamiters" should be affirmed, was filed today in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals by United States District Attorney Charles W. Miller of Indianapolis. The date of hearing will be set by the court at the October term.

George Anderson of Cleveland, one of the defendants found guilty of illegally transporting dynamite and sentenced to serve three years, will be released on a $30,000 bond from the Leavenworth prison tomorrow. The bond, signed by five friends, was filed in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

LONDON PHYSICIANS DECLARE TREATMENT A SUCCESS.

Report Alleges That Platinum Tube Containing Infinitesimal Portion of a Grain Inserted in Young Man's Throat Caused Disappearance of Malignant Disease.

[BY CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Extraordinary success in the treatment of cancer is announced at Middlesex Hospital. The surgeons do not call them cures, preferring to call them improvements, saying that cancerous growths have been made to disappear in an astounding manner.

Among the records, one of the most interesting is that of a man of 27, whose nasal passage and throat were blocked by a growth. A platinum tube containing eighty-two milligrams of radium was embedded in the growth for twelve hours.

After five days there was a perceptible improvement, and at the end of three weks the laryngoscope revealed no trace of the disease, and the man was discharged from the hospital apparently cured.

Operators in Bay City District Say They Will Not Resume Until Union Shows Reason.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BAY CITY (Mich.) Sept. 17.—All coal mines in the Michigan coal mining district were closed today and the operators insisted that they would not be reopened until the differences between the union and Handy Brothers Mining Company, in Bay county, are adjusted. About 2000 men are affected by the suspension of work.

Thomas W. Davis, commissioner for the coal mine operators of Michigan, in a statement today said the trouble was due to the alleged refusal of the union officials to consent to arbitration of differences with Handy brothers when 700 men recently struck, asserting that the operators had refused to pay what was due to them under the working agreement made in April, 1912.

Ten Thousand Grand Army Men in Parade Despite Rain and Mud.

Son of Confederate Soldier Welcomes the Veterans to the South.

Regulars and Militia in Sham Battle on the Historic Missionary Ridge.

BY LIEUT.-COL. J. A. WATROUS, U.S.A., RETIRED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHATTANOOGA (Tenn.) Sept. 17. —[Exclusive Dispatch.] The forty-seventh annual Grand Army parade ended shortly after one today. It was a memorable, a historic parade and one reason why it was such is because it is close to the final parade of the Civil War soldiers who served both from the North and the South. This fact was made painfully clear by the large number of men who carried canes, were bent, couldn't keep step, got out of line and struggled along as we have seen men at the end of a long, hard, day's march through dust, or rain, or mud.

The morning opened with a light rain and it continued until the march began and resumed when it was half over. It was such a forenoon as would have seen a parade of any other class of men including Knights Templars, Knights of Pythias and Elks postponed until the reappearance of the sun and dry streets. Probably not one of the 10,000 men who paraded today would have listened patiently to a proposition to postpone the march because of the rain. The same would have been the case with the Confederates who met here in May, had their day of parade been a rainy day. As young men, their marches in war days were never postponed because of rain, snow, deep mud or zero weather. That is why Chattanooga saw a larger parade of the Grand Army of the Republic than any other city where the encampments will be held in the future.

STARS AND STRIPES.

The line of parade was more generally marked by the American flag than any other line during the parades in connection with the forty-six other national encampments. This, too, in Tennessee, that furnished 100,000 soldiers for the Confederate army. This, too, Chattanooga, for nearly two years occupied as headquarters for a large portion of the Confederate army. It is not necessary to say that those flags were a source of very great and very genuine pleasure to the 10,000 men of the old Union army in the historic parade. They saw no other flag on that line; they have seen no other flag in any part of the city and they will see none during the remainder of their stay. They have heard no unkind references to themselves or against the government of the United States, but much to the contrary.

The open hand of welcome has been stretched out on every side. Southern hospitality has been emphasized every hour of the stay. Southern orators have thrilled the men from the North with their burning words, telling of the unyielding loyalty of the people of the Sunny South—that Sunny South which today constitutes a portion of the great union—that is surpassed in no respect by any other portion of the nation and whose people are as proud of their citizenship and the starry flag as the people of any other portions of the country.

SOLID LINES OF PEOPLE.

In spite of the drizzling rain, the sidewalks were literally jammed with spectators, white and black, old and young and the veterans of the North never marched between solid lines of people who more uproariously exhibited their pleasure than was the case in Chattanooga. Boston, Philadelphia, Columbus, Chicago, Detroit, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Milwaukee and other cities where the old fellows have swung into line and marched their best, never gave them more steady, or more hearty applause than was given here today in this one-time war center, a center for the two great armies at different times, and a center where two great armies clashed on several bloody fields.

I have not overdrawn the picture; if anything, it is underdrawn in all that I have said. Does it not look as if the glad day had come when the people of the East and the West and the North and the South are one people, with hearts beating in unison and everlastingly in love with the American nation, firmly believing in its Constitution, devoted to its institutions and all believing that they are citizens of the greatest and best of all of the nations that he world has ever known?

At Gettysburg, and now at Chattanooga, pains were taken during the mingling of the people of the North and South to treat each other as brothers, as fellow Americans. It was natural. There has been no sham in the friendliness shown on both sides. In nearly all of the different State delegations, there was a greater or smaller number of Confederates in line and they seemed to take as much pleasure and have as much pride in the ceremony as their brethren from the North.

BEAR MARKS OF PRIVATION.

Hundred Destitute Refugees Arrive at San Diego.

Children Look Like Famine Sufferers in India.

Wilson Blamed for Issuing Unnecessary Warning.

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 17.—Destitute, and almost without clothes when they boarded the relief ship Buffalo on the Mexican coast last week, almost a hundred of the 139 refugees arrived here early today on that vessel still bore the marks of the terrible privation which they experienced while in the zone of war. The children had sunken cheeks and great staring eyes, and many of the older ones looked like the pictures of the India famine sufferers.

The naval auxiliary Buffalo arrived at quarantine at daybreak. Its 139 passengers came from Port of Guaymas and from a landing at the mouth of the Yaqui River. Many of the passengers were residents of Empalme, a town not far from Guaymas. Capt. Von Bleicher, commanding the Buffalo, said the danger to Americans in the coast ports of Mexico was not great, but that the refugees were leaving those places in response to the wish expressed by President Wilson.

Hunger rather than bullets caused the most suffering to the Americans who were stranded in Mexico. Most of them managed to obtain food of some sort, but the peaked faces of the children showed that nourishment was scarce. R. W. Vail, American Consul at Guaymas, who makes his home at Los Angeles, was among the passengers.

"I came north because of the illness of a relative," he said. "Otherwise I should have stayed in the south." The consulate is left in the care of V. J. Phillips, an American. He has fifty American citizens to look after, they remaining at Guaymas of their own free will."

AN EXTREME CASE.

What was considered an extreme case was that of J. J. Donovan and family, who came from the Yaqui River country. Donovan is the representative of Charles F. O'Brien of Los Angeles. War troubles ruined their property and forced them to flee for safety. They hid in the brush many times from rebel bands and arrived in Guaymas destitute. All the refugees boarding the Buffalo were heavily armed. They clung to their weapons to the last and were allowed to bring them ashore. The Buffalo is to sail today for San Francisco. Following is the list of refugees landed here:

STATEMENT BY REFUGEES.

The following statement was issued by the refugees, explaining their flight from Mexico:

"On board United States Steamship Buffalo, September 16, 1913.

"We, residents of the Yaqui Valley, desire to make the following facts concerning the exodus of the American and other foreign residents from the Yaqui Valley, Sonora, Mex., on September 7, 1913.

"No uneasiness was felt by the American residents until Consul Vail of the United States, located at Guaymas, Sonora, personally visited Yaqui Valley on September 6, 1913, accompanied by Lieut. J. R. Henley, of the United States marines (in uniform,) and exhibited a telegram dated Washington, D. C., August 27, 1913, and signed by Secretary of State Bryan, which stated that the President earnestly urged all Americans to leave Mexico at once and that the United States Buffalo was then waiting at an adjacent point called Salinas to embark all those desiring to leave. The Consul added his personal advice that everyone should avail themselves of the opportunity and conform to the President's request. Relying entirely upon these representations we have abandoned our homes, together with real and personal property of greater or lesser value.

"Since about March 3, 1913, we have been without train service or mails, and for that reason we could not intelligently judge for ourselves the necessities of the case. Both contending factions in the present disturbances in Mexico have visited the Yaqui Valley, but neither side has committed any overt act toward foreigners nor disturbed our homes or property. Aside from some wandering bands of Yaqui Indians temporarily out of control of the Mexican authorities everything has been peaceful. They have levied on their own nationality for necessary sustenance almost entirely and have only made requests in a few instances on foreign residents and then in a formal manner to cover supplies not available elsewhere, particularly pay.

"While the continued disturbed conditions paralyzed business generally and made it impossible to realize returns upon any crops, thereby creating temporary financial embarrassment, nothing in the attitude of either of the contending parties made the situation any particular menace to our lives or property.

"Despite these conditions we were continuing to harvest crops and preparing land for extensive fall planting. Knowing the attitude of some persons to exaggerate facts for monetary personal notoriety this statement is deemed expedient for all concerned.

"We have left Mexico entirely under the urgency of the United States government, feeling that they had complete knowledge of the situation throughout the republic of Mexico, and not desiring to in any way embarrass our government, we have complied promptly with their request to leave Mexico, thereby suffering substantial financial loss and we also feel that we are therefore justified and are relying upon the United States government to protect our Mexican interests now and in the future."

He Spurns Invitation of Maytorena to Welcome Carranza at Hermosillo—Rebel Ammunition Seized.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NOGALES (Ariz.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Venustiano Carranza is expected in Hermosillo tomorrow and in Nogales on September 20. Rebel Gov. Maytorena telegraphed former rebel Gov. Pesqueira to come to Hermosillo to welcome Carranza. Pesqueira wired back that he was busy and could not go. Maytorena retorted in a withering message that Pesqueira showed no courtesy to "the supreme chief of the cause" by such an attitude. This has left Pesqueira very much worried and he has been running around consulting his friends as to what course he should pursue.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 17.—Gen. Geronimo Trevino, former commander of the Monterey military zone, was today appointed chief of the military Supreme Court, the permanent military tribunal. His arrival in the Mexican capital recently gave rise to reports that he had come for the purpose of succeeding Provisional President Huerta. Jose Maria Lozano, Minister of Public Instruction at the same time, was appointed Minister of Communications and Public Works in succession to C. David de la Fuente who has been raised to the rank of brigadier-general, and is to proceed to the State of Sinaloa as Governor.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) Sept. 17.—Mexican residents here telegraphed today to authorities at Washington protesting against what they termed as inadequate punishment for Young Davis, the American cowboy, who confessed to tearing down a Mexican flag at Pirtleville yesterday. The Arizona State authorities also were asked to take up the case.

Davis was assessed a nominal fine on a charge of malicious mischief. Constable Reese of Pirtleville, also arrested in connection with the case, was found not guilty.

EVERY DOLLAR SPENT

for advertising should, in addition to purchasing a certain amount of general publicity, yield a reasonable per cent. of profit on the investment.

Newspaper circulation without definite value means nothing. To an advertiser one reader who has purchasing power is worth a multiplicity of those without means with which to buy advertised articles.

Many years of undisputed leadership on the Pacific Coast in all the features that go to make up a great modern, metropolitan daily newspaper has enabled The Times to build up a stable, permanent, far-reaching circulation that is much larger and of infinitely better quality than that of any of its local contemporaries.

The Times does not issue a Sunday paper Saturday night, send incomplete editions to out-of-town points, misbrand its editions or resort to any other subterfuge to deceive its advertising patrons, or make its circulation appear to be larger than it actually is.

Every claim made regarding The Times circulation superiority will stand the most rigid investigation; and that its advertising columns appeal directly to buying public, and lessen the cost of selling goods, is indicated by the fact that this paper regularly prints more advertising than any other newspaper in the world.

MEXICAN POLICY IS STAGNATED.

Ships to Stay at Vera Cruz as Long as "Needed."

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—So far as the Washington administration is concerned, it became known tonight no move is contemplated in the Mexican situation at present.

The references to the expiration of the period during which American warships were authorized to remain in Mexican waters caused some discussion. Inasmuch as the ships are permitted to remain another month, or until after the general elections are held, no statement of policy in this connection is likely to be made until that time. Informally, officials let it be known that the vessels would be kept in Mexican waters indefinitely if the United States deemed it necessary for the protection of its citizens.

Secretary Bryan sent a cablegram to John Lind at Vera Cruz advising him of the government's view of the Huerta message, but the contents of the dispatch were not disclosed.

HUERTA'S INTENTIONS.

Huerta's declaration that he hoped to turn over the ad interim government to a successor, while not giving any direct information as to his intention not to be a candidate, strengthened the belief here that he would not figure in the coming elections. These points may be the basis for the resumption of negotiations, but the United States does not intend to go forward with them unless the Mexican authorities are disposed to reopen the parleys.

In some quarters here there is a strong disposition to doubt whether there will be a constitutional election October 26. Constitutionalists point out that with the election only a month away nobody knows who the candidates are or what their platforms will be.

Should an election be held the attitude the United States would take is doubtful. Recognition under no circumstances will be accorded Victoriano Huerta. This is known from unquestioned sources.

POSITION IS EMBARRASSING.

Reports that Huerta intended to secure the election of some friend who subsequently might appoint Huerta to a post in the Cabinet and resign in his favor, is causing some uneasiness, for if the election is constitutional, the position of the United States toward Huerta then might be embarrassing.

It is said to be quite probable, however, that no matter who is elected next month the Washington government will hold aloof for some time until it is convinced that stability and peace have been assured and that the choice of an executive is approved by the Mexican people.

Consul Alger at Mazatlan confirmed today reports of the killing of Morris P. Root of Pottstown, Pa., in the State of Tepic. Consul Alger added that the Governor of Tepic, in response to representations, has promised to send every effort to apprehend the murderers.

CARRANZA REJECTS CURRENCY FROM THE CAPITAL.

Decrees "Shinplaster" Issue Must Be Accepted in the Future and Declares American Gold the Only Medium of Exchange Acceptable in Payment of Public Dues.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PIEDRAS NEGRAS, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With the ultimate expectation of substituting Constitutionalist money for the Mexican legal tender now in circulation, the Carranza government issued a decree today repudiating all currency emanating from Mexico City and adopting American gold as the only medium of exchange which would be acceptable in the future in payment of public dues.

As a consequence of the decree financial circles on both sides of the border were thrown into a state of uncertainty and only the firm stand taken by American bankers in accepting Mexican currency, prevented a panic among the holders.

Simultaneously with the announcement of the decree, a tax of 11 payable in American gold, was placed on every person entering and leaving the country and business between border cities has decreased 75 per cent, today.

Even Mexican silver was refused by the Constitutionalists collectors regardless of the rate of exchange offered. At the Constitutionalist headquarters it was asserted that private information regarding the condition of the reserve fund of the Banco Nacional, was responsible for the order. Messages received from Topolobampo, Sinaloa, indicates that several millions of paper money issued by the Constitutionalists, have been forwarded to this city to be placed in circulation. The bills are in denominations of one, five and ten pesos, and are said to have been printed on the presses of the Sinaloa Hatchet, a newspaper supported by the American colony in that city. Holders of Mexican currency, who are unable to buy foreign drafts, are sending the money to American banks for deposit or sale and bankers predict a slump in the Mexican money market, unless the Mexico city government is able to maintain the present exchange rate.

Grocer and Clothier Arrested by Federal Agent on Charge of Illicit Dealing in Ammunition.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) Sept. 17.—W. M. Schwamm, a grocer, and Isador Blitzky, clothier, were arrested on charges of dealing illicitly in arms and ammunition in a raid late today of C. E. Brenniman, agent of the Department of Justice, who was assisted by troopers of the Ninth United States Cavalry. The government alleges violation of the neutrality proclamation.

Although Schwamm was charged with having purchased 10,000 cartridges less than a week ago, none were found on his premises. In Blitzky's store, however, 9000 cartridges were found. Other merchants were warned not to sell ammunition.

DENVER CONVENTION FAVORS THE EXTREME STYLES.

Retired Military Physician of Illinois Says if High-Heeled Shoes Were to Be Dropped the Feet Would Be Ruined by Broken Arches.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DENVER, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Dress reform was the main topic of discourse during an idle hour this afternoon at the military surgeons' convention. It developed that nearly every surgeon had vigorous ideas on the relation of the dress of the modern woman to health and comfort, and the present faddy extremes are favored by every delegate and even the slits and transparent skirts were not condemned.

Surgeon-General Charles Adams of Illinois, retired, gave the strongest indorsement of high heeled shoes.

"A sudden return to using low-heeled shoes, after using the other extreme for centuries will ruin the feet of every woman in the country," he said. "If women persist in wearing low-heeled shoes we will have a race of women with broken arches."

"If women have to wear slits in their skirts they should wear arctics or leggings under them in cold weather," said Capt. W. D. Lyman. "Personally, I admire the skirts worn nowadays."

"I like the slit skirts," declared Surgeon-General F. R. Marsh of Maryland. "They are pretty and I like to look at them. But something must be worn underneath or the poor women will freeze this winter."

HUSBAND "RAGGED" TOO MUCH.

Judge Says There's Nothing Wrong In It "Per Se" But Grants Wife a Divorce.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Judge Graham was called upon today to decide whether William R. Davenport's penchant for "ragging" warranted Sadie G. Davenport in wishing to be restored to the status of a single person.

"There is nothing wrong in 'ragging,' per se," remarked his honor, glancing over the complaint.

"But it kept him out until 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning," declared the wife. "My husband is publicity agent for the telephone company. He also calls himself an artist, and for three or four months he kept telling me he was going out to attend an art night school. Really he did not go near the school. And one day I found this in his papers."

The plaintiff produced the following note:

"I am in the city for a few days. Ring up West 625 and may be I can see you for a few minutes in the afternoon. If I don't talk much you will know some one is around, and if I am not here just say her brother-in-law rang up. I did not bring the picture, but have it out of the frame all ready for you. Yours, A."

That convinced the judge that "ragging" had lead the defendant into paths where it was impossible for him to act as a good husband, and he granted the decree.

Gray Joins With Blue.

the Auditorium last evening, the address of welcome was made by the son of a Confederate soldier and after the war he was twice Governor of South Carolina. The son of that distinguished statesman and former follower of Gen. Lee, in the great war, is the present Mayor of Chattanooga.

There was no mistaking his earnestness when he said that his father was a Confederate soldier all through the war and believed that he was in the right, "that father taught me in my boyhood to be loyal and true to the government of the United States, and if by one stroke of my pen I could divide this nation into two republics, as it was desired to do by the South in the Civil War, I would not make that stroke." As Mayor, he told the Grand Army, and their associate organizations, that all of the men, women and children, white and black, welcomed them to Chattanooga.

Mayor Thompson is one of those high types of men who are much needed in every community. He is as well equipped for Governor of his State or for United States Senator as he is for Mayor of a city of 100,000. He is a fair specimen of the younger business men of the South who have had much to do in causing the Southern States to blossom as the rose and bringing about prosperity that compares with that of their sister States of the North.

Mayor Thompson has had one privilege that no other public official in the United States has had. Last May he welcomed to the city the soldiers who followed Lee, Longstreet, Johnson, Joe Wheeler, and that array of southern commanders, to Chattanooga when they came to hold their annual encampment. Last evening he extended a similar welcome to the men who followed Grant, Sheridan, Thomas, Sherman, Warren, Logan and other of the great leaders of the hosts from the North.

ONLY ONE SIDE.

Two Confederates had been watching the parade when a veteran from the North approached them with his hand outstretched and said: "Gentlemen, I am very glad to meet you of the other side." One of the gentlemen straightened up and said: "My friend, there is only one side—we are all for the Union, the South as solidly as the North. A way back many years in the past, not a thousand, possibly, we were not in harmony with you people, but we are today."

I mentioned the incident to a citizen of Chattanooga. His prompt reply: "The Confederate spoke for the survivors of the army of the South and for the people generally."

It is a historic fact that reminiscences of men of the opposing armies began in this up-to-date American city away back in 1865. A South Carolina captain, a lawyer, came to Chattanooga to practice his profession. There was still a force of Federal soldiers stationed in and about the city. The Confederate captain wore his gray uniform; it was the only one; he had lost all of his property and was about to begin at the lowest round to build up again. The multitude of the Confederate army had to do the same thing.

BLUE AND GRAY REUNION.

A young officer whose commission was dated early in 1865 did not like to see the captain in his gray uniform; it annoyed him; he had never seen men in line of battle wearing that uniform and he told the South Carolinian to take it off. It is easy to imagine the results. The uniform was not removed and there was something of a row. The civil authorities had the captain arrested. It was decided to jail him. A Federal captain who had seen that gray uniform and heard the yell of the men who wore it in lines of battle on many occasions, hurried into the city, called upon the captain and assured him that he would do his best to prevent his going to jail. He failed, and said: "If you go to jail, I'll go with you and stay with you until they release both of us." That is what he did and South Carolina and Ohio had the first Blue and Gray reunion ever held.

CAMPFIRES.

Big campfires and many receptions are in operation this evening. The roar of cannon and rattle of musketry out Missionary Ridge way, where the battle was fought, remind the boys of old days. Regular army and national guard had an interesting sham battle.

By one of those low tricks the like of which are like to happen on such an occasion, an inexcusable blunder occurred just as the parade was ready to start. A camp of Confederates had been invited to parade with the department of Ohio. The Confederates were in line when a mischief-maker rushed up to their commander and told him he was sent to direct him not to march with the Grand Army. There was great indignation among the Grand Army men at the contemptible trick which has given food for a cheap sensation. No such order was authorized.

FORREST CAMP IS EXCLUDED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHATTANOOGA (Tenn.) Sept. 17.—Enforcement of an order excluding women and civilians from the forty-seventh annual parade of the Grand Army of the Republic prevented today the N. B. Forrest Camp of United Confederate Veterans from participating in the pageant. Clad in their gray uniforms, the southerners were preparing to form in the line of march with Forsythe Post, No. 13, of Toledo, O., when they were informed of the order.

An invitation to join in the parade had been tendered Col. L. T. Dickinson, commander of the Forrest Camp, by Col. Henry N. Hanson, commander of the Forsythe Post. Just when they were ready to take their places, Col. Hanson informed Col. Dickinson that the commander of the Department of the Ohio, Col. W. R. Warnock, had been instructed to bar every one from the parade except union veterans. Col Hanson expressed deep regret over the incident. The Confederate veterans also appeared distressed but as they marched quietly back to their headquarters they were greeted with cheers by the Union veterans.

In a statement tonight, Col. Dickinson said:

"We regretted the incident very much, but I believe our comrades, and especially those in the Forsythe post, were even more distressed. We hold no ill-feeling toward the rank and file of the boys in blue. The boys in blue are with us and for us and we are with and for them. To show that there is no hard feeling against any of them we are tendering an invitation to visit our camp tomorrow night. This invitation is to the rank and file of the boys in blue."

The following explanation of the incident was made in a statement tonight by Commander-in-Chief Alfred B. Beers of the G.A.R.:

"Yesterday I learned that there was a body of women here planning to take part in the Grand Army of the Republic parade. I also understood that these women were from the State of Ohio. For this reason I called the attention of the commander of the Department of Ohio to the following extract from General Order No. 19, which reads: 'Women and civilians are prohibited from participating in the parade, and department commanders are directed to enforce this order in their respective departments.'

"I didn't know that an invitation had been extended to Confederate veterans to take part in the parade and never heard that there was any intention of extending an invitation to the N. B. Forrest Camp, U.S.V. It was certainly not tendered by headquarters, nor was the permission of headquarters asked to extend such an invitation, nor the indorsement of such an invitation by headquarters asked.

"The Forrest Camp of Confederate veterans was excluded in accordance with a general order issued September 2, 1913, barring all persons from the parade except G.A.R. members. This order was based on a custom which has been observed in the past.

"In addition to this, the Confederate camp was not excluded because its members were from Confederate soldiers, but because it is the policy of the Grand Army of the Republic to have only its members in the parade with the exception of sons of veterans who were officially invited to act as escorts."

FIVE THOUSAND ON IMPERATOR.

Brings More Persons to New York Than Ever Traveled on a Single Ship Before.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Hamburg-American liner Imperator, bringing to New York more people than have ever traveled before on a single ship, was docked at Hoboken after dark tonight. It was near midnight before the last of the passengers was through with the customs men and free to leave the pier. On the ship came 4981 persons. The time of passage was six days thirty-four minutes at an average speed of 21.51 knots an hour. In the passenger list were the names of men and women who stand at the top of the social ladder.

There was a ball on board last Monday night and several Wall street men did some figuring. They estimated the dancers represented a combined fortune of a billion dollars. Judge and Mrs. Elbert H. Gary were among the passengers. Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, who entertained Mrs. Pankhurst at Danville, returned full of new ideas for the suffrage cause, and eager to try them out.

She will be at suffrage headquarters tomorrow morning to begin planning the winter's work. She did not believe Mrs. Pankhurst would be excluded from the United States.

"She is not coming here to reside, but merely on a "lecture tour."

NEWARK (N. J.) Sept. 17.—The body of Alice Hopper, 16 years old, who has been missing since Saturday night from her home in Kearny, N. J., was found in the Passaic River at Harrison tonight, her skirts weighted down with stones.

William Tolem, Chief of Police at Kearny, and the girl's relatives, declared that she had been murdered and her body cast into the river. The stones, weighing about twelve or fourteen pounds, had been placed in the lap of her outer skirt, drawn up to form a basket, the hem being knotted at the rear of her waist. Chief Tolen said he did not believe she could have placed the stones and tied the knot.

SCORE TRAMPLED IN PANIC.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PUEBLA (Mex.) Sept. 17.—A score of women and children were trampled, some of them being seriously hurt, in a panic which occurred in the Plaza yesterday as a result of pistol shots fired during the celebration of Independence Day. The Plaza was crowded with people, who came to listen to the music by a military band. The descriptive selection rendered required the firing of shots to make it realistic.

Believing this to be a signal for an uprising of some sort, men in the crowd sprang up and shouted to the people to save themselves. There was a rush, and women and children, who were seated on all sides, were thrown to the ground and trodden underfoot. The band frantically played in an effort to restore order.

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Vice-President H. Schwerin of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, has left for New York there to confer with Julius Kruttschnitt, of the Southern Pacific receivorate, and others relative to the future life of the steamship company.

Schwerin, it is understood, will be back for a couple of months when he does return he expects to bring with him the plans for the Pacific Mail and an announcement will settle finally the question whether the Southern Pacific is prepared to allow to the Panama Pacific despite the government's refusal to permit the contracts to stand through the Panama Canal.

The government has already announced that it will refuse to permit any railroad-owned steamship to utilize the canal. The Pacific Mail has been anything but a profitable subsidiary of the Southern Pacific considering its not being allowed to be barred from the canal, will form no part of any petition of an extraordinary character. Steamship men say that the Pacific Mail can continue to operate after the canal is opened if the Southern Pacific will consent to waive the annual deficit for it. The annual deficit for it. The question of the rail directors on this point is what Schwerin seeks to learn.

If the railroad retains the steamship company Schwerin will convert the vessels into cargo

SULZER TAKES REVENGE.

Tammany Candidates for Legislature Defeated in New York State.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The impeachment of Gov. Sulzer and his fight for direct primary reform played an important part in yesterday's Democratic primaries in New York State. The Governor's friends claim that these issues were responsible for defeats the regular Democratic organization suffered in several leading districts.

In Buffalo and Rochester, two of the best cities outside of New York, the regular Democratic organization which lined up with Tammany in the Sulzer impeachment fight was badly beaten. In Albany county former State Comptroller Nathan L. Miller, clerk of the Senate, a firm Sulzer adherent, came to bat after the party leadership had refused to indorse him. There is no doubt until the official count is made.

In New York City the Sulzer victory was not apparent. Only one of the Democratic district leaders in the city was bolstered and this contest was not ideal.

Sulzer's threat is made to force Democratic Assemblymen must be for during his direct primary campaign, recalled today when primary returns showed that four of the Democrats who voted against the Governor for impeachment were defeated for renomination in Buffalo and Democratic nominees for Assembly in Monroe county, which includes Rochester, were declared by the opponents of Tammany Hall. One of Monroe's five representatives in the Assembly at present is a Democrat.

The primaries held by the other parties had no State-wide issues to distinguish them.

Republicans Abandon Obstructive Tacti

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The administration currency bill was passed by the House and sent to the Senate tomorrow. In order to complete the detailed consideration of the measure and leave nothing but formal vote for tomorrow, the House sat tonight and concluded the consideration of proposed amendments.

An eleventh-hour revolt against the will of the caucus and the leadership of the Banking and Currency Committee, spread among Democrats on the House tonight. It threatened for a time to reach serious proportions and the party leaders finally got the situation in hand again.

GLASS IS WORRIED

Chairman Glass of the committee and other leaders who stood by the bill were plainly worried, although the predicament afforded unexpected amusement to the Republicans, particularly to Progressives and Socialists. The revolt lasted through many speeches on the Democratic side, several from across the aisle and one vote on which more Democrats deserted the committee than had previously stood as a standard on any of the important questions brought up before. The amendment by Representative Murray of Georgia, which is designed to maintain the parity of gold and silver as money at a parity and insure the retention of the gold standard, caused all the trouble. Some Democrats professed to see in it a revival of the old issue of bimetallism and others charged that the committee by adopting such an amendment was making a gratuitous insult to four-fifths of the Democratic party. That latter charge was pointed out, was settled shortly after 6 o'clock.

WITHERSPOON BALKS

Representative Witherspoon (Democrat) of Mississippi was the first to announce himself with such an amendment tacked on to the bill he would bolt the caucus and vote against it.

"I never will vote for it," he declared at last, "for I am an honest man. I challenge the right of the committee to bring in such an amendment as this," said Representative Witherspoon. "Somebody is playing politics, trying to humiliate four-fifths of the Democratic party. It is useless to deceive me, Mr. Wilson and Mr. Bryan. I talked with Mr. Bryan today and he told me he was against this amendment."

Representative Murray of Georgia, who framed the amendment, declared that it was an honest effort on the part of Democrats to indorse each other's views. The amendment, he declared, was not intended as a club to force anyone to vote for the bill.

"I want to say now," he shouted, as he started walking toward the Democratic side of the chamber, "that the people of this country will not follow you when they go to the polls next November on this bill."

STIRRED BY MURDOCK

Representative Sherley pounded his desk and declared in the troubled waters only to have them stirred again a moment later by Representative Murdock. Mr. Sherley said that the amendment could do no harm and might do good in that it was time for Democrats to forget what was behind and remember what was before.

"Republicans are playing politics with you," was the taunt of Mr. Murdock. "They propose to get a segregation on the amendment and then defeat it in the House and put you Democrats on record. It's a trap that they are asking you to walk into—if you want to walk into it go ahead."

At the conclusion of Mr. Murdock's speech Representative Wingo announced that he would demand a vote on the separate votes on the Murray amendment and the bill. The demands paid little head to the "noes" and the vote stood 184 to 64 for the amendment.

Bryan Accused of Writing in Weird Money Theories.

Republicans Abandon Use of Obstructive Tactics.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The administration currency bill will be passed by the House and sent to the Senate tomorrow. In order to complete the detailed consideration of amendments and leave nothing but the final vote for tomorrow, the House sat late and concluded the voting on proposed amendments. No material changes were made in the bill.

An eleventh-hour revolt from the ranks of the opposition and the leadership of the Banking and Currency Committee, spread among Democrats of the House tonight, it threatened for a time to reach serious proportions, but party leaders finally got the situation in hand again.

CLASS IS WORRIED.

Chairman Glass of the committee and other leaders who sided with the vote plainly worried, and their excitement afforded unconcealed amusement to the Republicans, and especially to Progressive Leader Murdock. The revolt lasted through many speeches on the Democratic side, several from across the aisle, and a vote on which more Democrats joined the committee than had left the party on any of the mooted questions brought up before. An amendment by Representative Foss of Illinois, designed to maintain all legal money at a parity and insure the retention of the gold standard, caused some of the trouble. Some Democrats wanted to see in it a revival of the old issue of bimetallism and openly stated that the committee in indorsing such an amendment was offering a direct insult to four-fifths of the Democratic party. That issue, they pointed out, was settled sixteen years ago.

WITHERSPOON BALKS.

Representative Witherspoon of Mississippi was the first to announce that he had such an amendment tacked to the bill he would bolt the caucus and vote against it.

"I never will vote for it," he shouted, "for I can an honest man."

"I challenge the right of the committee to bring in such an amendment at this," said Representative Wingo. "Somebody is playing politics and trying to humiliate four-fifths of the Democratic party. It is useless—it is plain. Mr. Wilson and Mr. Bryan are in accord with Mr. Bryan tonight—not this amendment."

Representative Murray of Oklahoma declared that it was an insult for Democrats to indorse such an amendment.

"I want to say now," he shouted, looking toward the Democratic committee table, "that the people of this country will not follow you to the polls next November on this issue."

BURIED BY MURDOCK.

Representative Sherley poured oil on troubled waters only to have fire stirred again a moment later by Representative Murdock, Mr. Sherley said that the amendment could do no harm and might do good, and that it was time for Democrats to find out what was behind and reckon with it.

"Republicans are playing politics with this," was the taunt of Mr. Murdock. "They propose to get a separate vote on the amendment and the bill in the House and put you Democrats on record. It's a trap that they are trying to get you to walk into—if you want to walk into it go ahead."

At the conclusion of Mr. Murdock's speech Representative Wingo announced that he would demand two separate votes on the amendment and the bill. The Democratic rank and file hung their heads in shame when the vote stood 194 to 38 against the amendment.

THE TARIFF WORK SECRET.

Conferees Decide Not to Make Public Any More Agreements of Conference Committee.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Democratic members of the Tariff Conference committee now engaged in adjusting differences between the two bodies on the tariff bill, decided today not to make public any further reports until the conference work is completed. Publication of agreements as they have been reached in the last few days has brought many demands upon the conferees for the reopening of certain schedules, and they have determined to maintain silence.

Conferees of the Senate and House will tonight the work was progressing more rapidly than he had expected and he thought a report could be submitted by the end of this week. There was a long debate today on the wheat and flour provisions of the bill, House members contending to the Senate amendment placing a duty of 10 cents a bushel on wheat coming from a country that imposed a duty against wheat from the United States. This question was not settled.

Action was effected on the chemical schedule by which the rates fixed by the Senate were increased and an agreement reached on the glove schedule, which carries the increases in force by the Senate.

The Senate agreed to the Senate amendment placing on the free list photographic films and plates, and the Secretary of the Treasury was directed to admit all imported photographs or pictures.

The duty on photographic paper is slightly reduced.

BRYAN IN.

Trade Slow for the Week and Secretary Refuses to Boost It.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Vice-Minister Chida, the Japanese Ambassador, conferred with Secretary Bryan today on the issue pending between the United States and California alien land legislation.

The Japanese government sent the ambassador to the United States to confer with Secretary Bryan on the issue pending between the United States and California alien land legislation. It is understood Ambassador Chida brought whether an agreement could be reached to forthcoming. Secretary Bryan declined to discuss the ties, is responsible and the question is being raised whether the objection to his subordinate's conduct will in any way be visited upon him. subordinate's conduct will in any way be visited upon him.

ADVISING BRYAN.

Mr. Bryan having lessened his chances of securing the Presidential nomination in 1916, for that is the view taken by the Democratic politicians, the latter are anxious he should cease his lecturing before the effect upon the President becomes too pronounced. Various kinds of advice have been offered to the Secretary as to what he should do, but his disposition is to continue on the Chautauqua, and he will live up to his contract unless Mr. Wilson directs to the contrary. He resents the criticism being made of him not only by the American but by the foreign press, and insists he not only has a right to devote his spare time to swelling his income to the amount necessary for him to discharge the obligations resting upon his office, but that he is not neglecting the public business and will not permit any of his engagements to do so. He has been in Washington practically every day since inaugurating his series of lectures, jumping out and back to the points where he has been billed to speak. Moreover, he has been in touch by telegraph with the State Department, and it is asserted, public business has not been in the slightest degree disregarded. He has had time to consider the Mexican negotiations, the California question with Japan, his peace proposals with foreign nations, the Panama Canal tolls with Great Britain and to pronounce a trade policy as a substitute for "Dollar Diplomacy." More, it is insisted the man could not do, were he sitting every moment at his desk in the department.

OFFER BY NEWSPAPERS.

Perhaps nothing that has occurred has gotten Mr. Bryan's "goat" more than the offer of the New York World this morning to contribute $1000 annually to make up the deficiency the Secretary says is necessary for him to live on in Washington and which he has arranged to obtain through his lectures. He did not like the criticism leveled at him when he first started on the Chautauqua circuit, but having been criticised all his life and flourished on it, he felt it made little difference and believed his explanation that the cost of living was responsible for his action would satisfy the people. He was greatly irritated by the advertisement of the Secretary of the Pennsylvania Chautauqua announcing that he would appear as a star attraction, along with Yodlers, jugglers and the Florentine concert band, and by telephone sharply rebuked this enterprising advance agent. The other day he alleged that only the "tory" press really objected to his course.

Following upon the heels of this statement, however, has appeared the offer of one of the foremost Democratic newspapers in the East. When asked about it today, he replied abruptly, his tone showing annoyance:

"I have no comment to make."

Democratic Senators in the city are inclined to treat the offer as a joke.

"Get out." was the laughing response of Senator Reed of Missouri, to an inquiry as to his opinion on the matter.

VARDAMAN IMPATIENT.

Senator Vardaman of Mississippi, who is one of Bryan's closest friends, grew impatient when the offer was brought to his attention.

"It is none of the world's business," he said, "and I suppose Mr. Bryan will treat the incident with the silence it deserves. He has the right to employ his own time as he sees fit. It is a matter which he will settle with the American people.

"No good can come of the persistent discussion of this affair, and it would be in my opinion, much better if the newspapers would devote more of their attention instead, to matters of serious importance to the public welfare."

ADVOCATE HIGHER SALARY.

Many members of Congress believe that the dignity of the office Mr. Bryan holds calls for an increase in his salary.

"Even though Secretary Bryan feels that he is right in mounting the lecture platform as an 'attraction,' sandwiched between tyrolean yodlers and dancers,' said Congressman Britton of Illinois, "I believe that Congress should provide for him. The Secretary, I understand, is forced to do his own marketing, and buys provisions as cheaply as the common laborer. This is a deplorable situation. If he cannot live on the salary now paid the office of Secretary of State, the government, and not the New York World, should stand for the deficit."

SUGGESTS CONTINGENT FUND.

A contingent fund to make up the difference spent by Secretary Bryan on living expenses, was suggested by Congressman Nolan of California. He declared this fund should be available at all times, either in the case of Bryan or other members of the Cabinet.

"The newspaper has overstepped its rights," said Congressman Foster of Illinois. "Although the affair seems more or less humorous, I think the paper goes too far when it attempts to dabble in government business. Mr. Bryan is entirely right in spending his vacation as he chooses."

PROGRESSIVE CHAUTAUQUAN.

Congressman Murdock, Progressive leader, and himself a Chautauquan star of no mean dimensions, had nothing to say.

"I'm a friend of both of them," he said, referring to Bryan and the World. "I'm not talking."

Congressman Humphreys of Mississippi grinned. "Isn't that awful?" he questioned. "I think it's impertinent."

Congressman Cline of Indiana and Russell of Wyoming declared that "Bryan would be selling out" if he accepted the World offer.

DAUB HARRISON'S TOMB.

Vandals Break Down Enclosure and Deface Memorial at Ex-President's Last Resting Place.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CINCINNATI (O.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Judge Alfred K. Nippert of this city, a trustee of the William Henry Harrison Memorial Association, today was notified that vandals had recently broken the door of the enclosure and daubed, with some unsightly substance, the tomb of President Harrison at North Bend.

The memorial association is raising a fund to be used in keeping the tomb in order, and a further object is to turn the monument over to the government should the heirs to the farm on which it is located consent.

Miscreants have, on several former occasions, committed acts of vandalism at the tomb, apparently through sheer wantonness, and it is difficult to guard against these outrages owing to the isolated location of the monument and grounds.

Washington.

SNEAK JOKER INTO TARIFF

Democrats Favor the Wearers of Silk Stockings.

Discriminate Against the Poor Man Using Cotton.

Conferees Fail to Remedy the Flagrant Injustice.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] As a result of "concealed jokers" in the Simmons-Underwood bill, Democratic revision of the tariff bill affords little if any relief to the men, women and children of the country who wear cotton socks and stockings.

The bill, as it passed the House, contained a "joker" in the interest of the hosiery manufacturers. Apprehending it to be so plain in character that it would attract public attention, the Senate changed the paragraph and continued the "joker" under another form. Still the concealed protection was too apparent and the Conference Committee has tried once again.

The phraseology adopted by the committee is deft, but the fact remains that the protection accorded to the domestic cotton hose manufacturers will be as prohibitive under the proposed law as it was under the Dingley law, and as it is under the existing law. Nor is this the extent of the advantage derived by the domestic cotton hose interests. They have been granted far greater consideration than has been given to the manufacturer of cotton underwear and wearing apparel of every description. Moreover, there appears to be a discrimination in their favor as against the manufacturers of woolen and silk hose.

The House bill provided that hose valued at less than 70 cents a dozen pairs should be taxed 30 per cent. ad valorem, and hose valued at over 70 cents a dozen pairs at 50 per cent. ad valorem.

The Department of Commerce says there are no hose valued at less than 70 cents a dozen, or even at 70 cents a dozen, imported. Thus, if the House bill had been enacted into law, the higher rate would have been imposed on a class of stockings much worn by the poor people, averaging $9.1 cents a dozen.

The Senate deemed it inexpedient to be too generous with cotton hose manufacturers. It therefore changed the House provision so as to make hose costing less than $1.20 a dozen to bear a duty of 30 per cent. ad valorem. Over $1.20 it declared the duty should be 50 per cent. ad valorem. As already stated, there is but a single class of hose falling in value below $1.20 a dozen pairs.

The treatment of this class of hose considerably bothered the conferees. They were not willing to make too great a reduction in the duty which should apply to it, and yet they conceived it important not to adopt the high rate of 50 per cent. ad valorem which the House bill proposed, so they made a new classification and agreed to impose a duty of 40 per cent. ad valorem.

As the bill now stands, the duties determined upon will be as follows: Hose under 70 cents a dozen, of which none is imported, will be taxed 30 per cent. ad valorem.

Hose valued at between 70 cents and $1.20 a dozen pairs, of which there is only one class, will be taxed 40 per cent. ad valorem.

Hose valued at more than $1.20 a dozen pairs will be taxed 50 per cent. ad valorem.

According to the figures of the Department of Commerce the aggregate annual value of imported hose averaging $1.6 cents a dozen pairs was $764,704.

The next higher class of hosiery, also worn by the average man and woman, has a value of $1.36 a dozen. The imports of this class reach $742,950 annually.

Under the agreement reached by the conferees, these hose will be taxed 50 per cent. ad valorem.

The value of stockings above the $1.36 class yearly imported is $1,300,000. They also will be taxed 50 per cent. ad valorem. The average duty imposed under the existing law on all hosiery is 72.66 per cent.

The conferees claim, as a result of their work, the average duty will be 47½ per cent. Even at this rate, however, it is not figured by experts that there will be any great increase in importation.

It is difficult for experts to understand why the Senate and the conferees should fix upon $1.20 a dozen pairs as a dividing line for a classification. Had this line been placed at $1.50, it would have covered practically all the classes of hosiery worn by the average citizen. The higher grades are all valued at more than $1.50.

The conferees apparently are unable to explain why an additional burden of 10 per cent. over the House rate should be placed on the wearers of the ordinary cotton stockings valued at 89.1 cents per dozen pairs.

DISCRIMINATION APPARENT.

The discrimination in favor of the hosiery interests is the more apparent when the hosiery rates are compared with those imposed upon cotton knit goods, such as underwear, shirts and the like. These goods, made of the same material as the ordinary hose, carry a flat rate of 30 per cent. Senator Simmons, chairman of the conference committee, said today that this duty was adopted because a graduated schedule had been provided for hosiery while a flat rate had been adopted for knit goods. He did not state why there is a graduated schedule for hosiery and not a graduated schedule for other cotton wear.

The cotton hose manufacturers also have "put one over" when the treatment extended to silk and woolen hose is considered. Woolen hose will be taxed at 40 per cent. ad valorem, if valued at over $1.20 a dozen pairs, and at 20 per cent. if under $1.20. Senator Simmons declares a 40 per cent. tax on wool is a higher tax than 50 per cent. on cotton. Just how he reaches this conclusion is not understood by the experts.

SILK HOSE FAVORED.

Silk hose will bear a rate of 50 per cent., the same as all classes of cotton hose. Mr. Simmons claims this is a relatively higher rate, silk being a luxury.

There is reason to believe that when the conferees make their report the jokers in the cotton hosiery schedule will be subjected to sharp criticism by the Senators and members who have made a special study of this item of the tariff.

DUTY ON BLANKETS.

Under the agreement reached by the conferees, free blankets have proved an irridescent dream. The House bill fixed a duty of 25 per cent. on woolen and cotton blankets. The Senate, less generous than the House, decreed that all blankets valued at less than 40 cents a pound should be free, and all over that value should bear a duty of 25 per cent.

This protected the wool manufacturers of New England, but alarmed the cotton blanket manufacturers, particularly of the South. It is understood the Senate conferees accepted the House provision so that blankets will pay a duty of 25 per cent, as against a duty of 45 per cent. on cotton and about 40 per cent. on wool.

House Adopts an Important Amendment to the Currency Bill After Long Debate.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The House today adopted an amendment to the administration currency bill limiting the Federal reserve banks in their loan activities to transactions with the government. It was designed to prevent those banks from competing in commercial business with the member banks.

For two hours the House debated the note issue section and rejected a score of amendments. The proposal to make the reserve notes government obligations was attacked by the Republicans as "greenbackism." The provision making the notes payable in gold or lawful money was subjected to a fire of charges of disregarding the gold standard and "writing into the bill the principles for which the present Secretary of State has contended since the financial battle of 1896."

The Democrats held firm, however, and the section passed unamended.

BLAZE IN SIERRA MADRE CAUSES PANIC IN PASADENA.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PASADENA, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Late tonight the forest fire in the Sierra Madre Mountains was making rapid progress up the canyon of the Big Tejunga, with disastrous results. William Hoyt, known as the hermit of the Tejunga, who has lived for thirty-five years in a cabin far from the other ranch houses, was reported burned to death in his dwelling.

The report reached M. E. Shelly, who has a ranch just outside the mouth of the Tejunga Canyon, in the evening.

"It is apt, however, to be wrong," he said. "It is difficult to get any reliable information here concerning what is transpiring. Word that Hoyt was burned is being carried about."

The fact that one of the two telephone lines in the Canyon was out of order and probably burned out, made it difficult tonight for any word to be sent out of the canyon.

TWO FIRES IN CANYON.

Shelly reported at 10 o'clock that there appeared to be one fire in the canyon about three-quarters of a mile long near the mouth, and another six or seven miles up the canyon, much larger in extent.

Forest Supervisor Charlton early this afternoon appealed to the Pasadena City Water Department for more fire fighters, and a truck loaded with men was sent to the canyon of the Tejunga in charge of Deputy State Warden John Opie a few hours later. None of the fire fighters who were first to leave the city have yet returned, despite the fact that many of them have worn out their shoes, and are in a state of physical exhaustion.

The fire is making rapid progress toward the Arroyo Seco, but it was reported at Switzer's Camp in the arroyo last night that no alarm is felt there, as the fire in order to reach that point would have to cross an area of ground that has already been burned out several miles in width.

OAKWYLDE THREATENED.

Oakwylde Camp, in the Arroyo Seco, is threatened by the fire coming down Dark Canyon, at the mouth of which it is situated. J. R. Phillips, proprietor of the establishment, climbed to a ridge overlooking the fire and on his return to the camp telephoned to Pasadena that the fire was in Washout Canyon, a small, deep, heavily-wooded canyon, where it is one of the hottest blazes of any that have yet been reported. Phillips said that several miles intervene between the fire and the Arroyo Seco, and that there is practically no danger of its getting into the arroyo.

The conclusion reached by those in the Arroyo Seco who climbed to high points to observe the fire was that it will take several days for it to get into the arroyo, if it does at all, and that it is not likely to cross the burned area between it and that canyon.

RANCH HOUSES MENACED.

Several of the ranch houses in the northwest end of La Crescenta Valley were again menaced yesterday afternoon, but residents of Little Landers now believe that they are out of danger.

The excitement that the fire has caused in Pasadena was heightened by the report that another forest fire has broken out on the slope of Mt. Baldy. Those on the summit of Mt. Wilson last night declared that there was no fire to be seen. All of the rangers who patrol this district are now fighting the fire in the hills north of La Crescenta Valley.

Enveloped in Flames.

of the flames may not be determined until the fires subside. Not until this morning would the fire wardens admit that the blaze had passed beyond all control, but all day the fire has jumped ahead so rapidly that it has been impossible for the fighters to keep far enough in advance of the line to accomplish any good with back fires. At 1 o'clock it was conceded that the main fire, which is sweeping in a southwesterly direction across the mesas and canyons toward the ocean would only be checked at the water's edge. To the north of this city the sky is black with the smoke from the conflagration and ashes were falling in the outlying residence districts most of the day. Fully a thousand men are on the fighting line, recruits being constantly added from San Diego and neighboring small towns.

SWEEPS FROM RAMONA.

From Ramona the fire has swept across to the Poway grade, jumping canyons in almost incredible time, and gathering in volume as it burned. Hundreds of men worked along the Poway grade early this afternoon to start a back-fire, hoping to check the main blaze there.

At 2 o'clock they were obliged to abandon their positions, and it was then that all hope of checking the fire was given up. Efforts were made to check the Pamo Valley fire at Vineyards with little better success. Reports tonight from Ramona state that a number of houses on the edge of town are burning, among them the shack of D. C. Collier. The fire has advanced along the Santa Ysabelle River, and is burning toward the San Pasqual Valley, in which are located a number of large ranches.

Autos loaded with women and children from the fire zone came in this afternoon, the families of the ranchers being obliged to leave, some of them only when the flames swept within a hundred yards of the houses.

Forest Supervisor Kinney states the fire to be the worst in the history of this district, and the end is not yet in sight. Worn out with nearly five days of continual battling with the flames, the men are on the verge of collapse, and unless the wind changes tonight there is no prospect of a letup.

LA JOLLA THREATENED.

La Jolla, eight miles north of here, is only a little south of the path of the fire, and while there is little danger of the flames getting directly to the town, the rain of cinders and ashes is hourly becoming more threatening. Tonight the sky to the north and east showed a red glare against the dense pall of smoke. Wire communication with Ramona is very uncertain, only one line being open. Beyond Ramona and Pamo Valley all communication is cut off with the ranchers, and their fate is unknown. A second fire started this afternoon in Mission Valley, near the Gibson ranch, and swept along the south side of the valley, threatening Bonnie Brae, a subdivision only a mile beyond the limits of San Diego. It is still advancing, covering the lower part of the hills below the Mission Cliff Gardens, and a fire-fighting force of residents, headed by one company and apparatus from the city department, is fighting to keep it from coming over the top of the grade.

The origin of this later fire is unknown. Should this fire get over the edge of the valley, it will reach the choicest residence part of San Diego, Mission Hills, Inspiration Heights and the State Normal School being located in that vicinity.

FLAMES DRIVING INTO THE SESPEE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OXNARD, Sept. 17. — [Exclusive Dispatch.] The forest fire that entered Ventura county from the Castaic Canyon is spreading. Its front is now over five miles wide. The fighters sent against it at first have been exhausted and four autoloads of relief men have taken their places. The Lechter resort in Pirue Canyon was threatened, but the buildings were saved. The Donlin ranch was burned over. The cattle were removed ahead of the fire, which surrounds the property of the Ramona Oil Company. If the east wind continues, the fire will be driven over into the Sespee region.

FIRE IS RAGING AT SAN BERNARDINO.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN BERNARDINO, Sept. 17.—Repetition of the great San Bernardino Mountain fire of 1911 is imminent, according to reports received here today from the Cajon Pass country, where a fire has gained great headway and is being driven into the mountains, where a vast area of timber is threatened.

An urgent call was sent to Forest Supervisor Charlton to return the rangers which were sent to reinforce his army of fire-fighters in the Crescenta Valley, near Los Angeles.

HURRY ORDERS TO RANGERS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN BERNARDINO, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Three of the rangers in the local mountains tonight received orders to hurry to Pasadena to aid the fire-fighters in the hills north of that city. They will take the early train out in the morning.

FLAMES THREATEN APPLE ORCHARDS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICO (Cal.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Flames which have been raging for three days in the jungle of brush on the ridge between Rock and Pine Creeks, about twenty miles northeast of here, swept today toward Richardson Springs, the well-known resort, and bore down on Cohassett, a foothill apple section. Two score fire-fighters were rushed from Chico in automobiles to fight the flames back from valuable property.

The fire jumped the Cohassett Ridge into Mud Creek Canyon, on which Richardson Springs is located, and is burning a few miles above the springs. Every man at the springs was called out to check the fire's progress down the canyon. Up to today, the fire confined itself to grazing land and brush land of little value, but unless the wind changes before morning, it threatens to lap it way on to valuable orchard property and big timber.

About 10,000 acres have been burned over and the fire front is ten miles across.

THE HIGHEST FOREST FIRE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BANNING (Cal.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] All available men are being drafted into fire-fighting corps and rushed to mountain fires devastating the valuable watershed near the source of White Water River. The fire started today in an almost inaccessible part of the Angeles National Forest, twenty miles northeast of Banning, 10,000 feet above the sea, and is believed to be the highest fire in National Forest annals, being only a few hundred feet below the summit of Mt. Grayback. The locality is visited by an occasional hunter.

The fire is presumably the result of an unguarded camp fire. The mountains burning are almost perpendicular and almost impossible to scale. The fire from this city appears to be sweeping west to the White Water River and endangering the water shed of the Morongo Indian reservation, valuable ranches and the Banning water shed.

AID IS RUSHED TO TEJUNGA CANYON.

Yesterday afternoon R. H. Charlton, supervisor of the Angeles Forest Reserve, who has been on the fighting line since last Saturday, 'phoned into local headquarters from Hoyt's ranch that the wind had been blowing a gale in the Big Tejunga Canyon for two days, and that the fire had been driven in all directions. It was so hot that the men could hardly stand it, and after working one night wanted to be sent home. He said the sides of the canyon were precipitous and almost inaccessible. He expressed the view that if the wind died down he would be able to handle the fire.

Later in the day Supervisor Charlton 'phoned for a quarter of beef to feed the fire-fighters at Haines Canyon, and it was taken in an automobile from this city by Dr. Homer Henson of the Tejunga Water Company. The fire was reported within a mile of Dr. Henson's house, when the information was received. In answer to a request from the Supervisor, fifty canvas water buckets and carrying cases were dispatched with Dr. Henson for service in the vicinity of Hoyt's ranch.

At 2 o'clock a 'phone message was received from San Bernardino, to the effect that a fire had broken out in Cleghorn's Canyon, a branch of El Cajon, and that it was burning fiercely. Ranger Johnson and a force of men from San Bernardino had gone to the scene of the blaze.

FEAR ANGELENO CAUGHT IN FIRE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA MONICA, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] More than a score of cattle perished in the fire which has been sweeping Escondido, Solstice and Dry Canyons, according to word brought down from that section this evening by D. Hanson, an employee of the Dunn ranch. The fire has gained great headway, the few fighters retiring after a battle of ten hours against the southward spread.

Considerable anxiety is felt regarding the absence of Dr. Paul Bresee of Los Angeles. He and a party of three men went hunting into Escondido Canyon last Saturday, and they have not been heard from. Servants at the Bresee home in Los Angeles tonight state that the doctor had not returned.

FOREST RANGER ROSS BETTER.

He Is Rapidly Recovering From Injuries Sustained by Fall Into the Big Tejunga Canyon.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MONROVIA, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Forest Ranger Norman Ross, who was injured yesterday afternoon when he fell into Big Tejunga Canyon, is rapidly recovering from the effects of his mishap, according to a telephone message received this afternoon by his mother, Mrs. Hattie Ross, of this city. The message was from Forest Supervisor R. H. Charlton, who said that Norman had succumbed to the smoke and heat while fighting fire, and had fallen to the bottom of the canyon. Mr. Charlton called up Mrs. Ross to reassure her as to her son's condition. It was reported here earlier in the day that Ross's condition had proved so serious that he was being brought to his home in Monrovia, but these accounts, Mr. Charlton said, were exaggerations.

Forest Guard James Quiggle of this city is still on the line of fire. The last report from him was on Monday evening, when Mrs. Quiggle received word that he hoped to be home the following day. Further outbreaks of the flames have kept him busy, however, at the front.

MAN HUNT ABOARD LINER.

Officers Seek Escaped Prisoners on Vessel Bound for Australia—Man Thinks It's a Ferryboat.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17.—A futile man hunt and the rescue of three who found themselves involuntary trans-Pacific passengers on the British Royal Mail liner Moana after she had started for Australia, marked the vessel's departure today.

The vessel was well out toward the heads when detectives overtook her in the pursuit of Robert Bradley and R. E. Graham. Bradley and Graham, the former awaiting trial for murder and the latter a convicted burglar, sawed their way out of the Alameda jail. When the detectives were leaving the vessel Chester R. Hayes stepped forward.

"I'm wondering if this is a ferryboat to Oakland," he announced, and while they were helping him into the launch alongside after the explanation, appeared Mrs. Nelson Roundsvell and little Evelyn, her 6-year-old daughter, who had boarded the boat to say good by to a friend. Mrs. Roundsvell and her daughter followed Hayes into the police launch.

Thus Rules New York Judge, Who Declares Intoxication Does Not Necessarily Incapacitate for Business.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Merely getting drunk on a job once in a while does not necessarily mean that a man can't attend to business. This utterance was made in the Supreme Court today by Justice Guy.

Thirteen-year-old Margaret Mary Kavanagh, through her attorneys and her guardian, asked for the appointment of a receiver for an apartment-house at No. 125 West Forty-ninth street, now managed by an uncle, Jeremiah Kavanagh. The girl's attorney told the justice that she wanted her uncle removed as manager of the estate of her grandfather, the late Capt. Patrick Shaw, because, she charges, he was addicted to drink and had not been keeping careful track of rents.

"Well, I declare," said the justice in surprise. "Does the mere fact that a man gets intoxicated from time to time necessarily incapacitate him from attending to business properly? I should say it did not, and I see no reason for the appointment of a receiver on the grounds urged here today."

Both sides submitted briefs, and Justice Guy announced he would reserve his decision.

WHALE DAMAGES STEAMER.

Four-Foot Hole in Bow of Danish Vessel Compels Boat to Enter Port for Repairs.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. JOHNS (N. F.) Sept. 17.—A collision with a whale caused such serious damage to the Danish steamer Vladmir Reitz that the vessel was forced to put in here today for repairs.

The accident occurred Monday afternoon about 250 miles east of St. Johns. The crew of the steamer saw the whale approaching at terrific speed, but could not alter the ship's course in time to prevent the impact. The whale struck the steamer head on, knocking a four-foot hole in the bow.

The accident is believed to have killed the whale, which sank immediately, its blood discoloring the water over a large area.

DECLARES PANAMA CANAL MENACES BRITISH TRADE

Birmingham Professor of Finance Tells His Countrymen That New Waterway Will Put Old Industrial Methods on the Scrap Heap by Adding Enormously to the Commercial Facilities of the United States.

[BY CABLE AND A. P. TO THE TIMES.]

BIRMINGHAM (Eng.) Sept. 17.—Speaking on "Some of the Economic Effects of the Panama Canal," Prof. A. W. Kirkaldy told the British Association at its session today that such effects could be easily exaggerated. "So far as the outside world is concerned," he said, "the greatest effect of the opening of the canal will probably be to get commerce and trade out of the groove, and cause an all-round modernization of business methods. The old will have to be scrapped, friction among the factors of production will have to learn to work harmoniously together. Socially and economically this will effect a very great result. Is it what America dreamed of when she entered upon this stupendous undertaking?"

Mr. Kirkaldy is professor of finance at Birmingham University and a recognized authority on economic questions. In his address today he treated his subject under the two general heads of local effects and effects on world-trade. From the industrial point of view, he said, three questions arose: who shall supply certain markets, who shall perform the service of transport, and what routes shall shipping take. The principal factors on the balance of advantages on which the foregoing questions would be decided were, distance; tolls on the route; freights and the possibility of continuous freight-earning; fuel stations; insurance rates; the political factor; rates of exchange; investments of capital and banking facilities; the human factor—manufacturing and commercial ability, experience of trade and markets, and present possession.

"The canal," he said, "will add enormously to the commercial facilities between the various regions of the American continent and the adjacent islands, hence important developments may be expected. The West India Islands will enter upon a new period of prosperity, especially when the internal combustion engine takes the place of steam and oil replaces coal. English business and fiscal methods will have a great effect on making the West Indies important to shipping, and thus assist the development of local industries, especially the export of raw material. The comparatively unprogressive states of Central and South America will undergo remarkable developments owing to increased immigration of Europeans and increased trade. These local benefits will be the chief, and ample, justification for the construction of the canal."

EFFECT ON WORLD TRADE.

Of the effect on world trade, he continues: "America realizes the importance of the coal trade to the United Kingdom; there will be a strenuous attempt to displace British coal throughout the world in order to give American shipping the advantages at present enjoyed by British. If successful this will deal a mortal blow at our mercantile marine. Thus the British coal industry must realize the situation, and both the capital and labor interested resolve to hold the market at all costs until the fuel question—coal or oil—is finally settled.

"The published scheme of tolls which frees American coasting ships raises an international question. If the canal be worked on business principles, higher tolls will be exacted from other shipping; this will either cause a grievance, or decrease the tonnage using the canal. The question might be made domestic instead of international if America charged equal tolls to all, and gave bounties to such shipping as it wishes to favor."

EFFECT OF DISTANCE.

As to the effect of distance, he thought that on Australasian and Far Eastern markets it would be considerable, as the mileage run by a steamer was a serious factor in cost of service. In this shipping offered a contrast to railways, for when trucks were loaded, length of haul had but little effect on cost of service.

"Taking London and New York as the typical European and American ports," he said, "the markets of the world fall into three classes—(1) countries in close proximity to the canal; here the effect will be greatest and, in many cases, the use of the canal a necessity. (2) Australasia and the Far East. At present there is a choice of routes to these markets; Panama will offer another alternative. (3) Ports not directly affected.

"Class two is receiving most attention from those estimating the effects on world trade. There is a parallel equidistant from London via Suez, and from New York via Panama. On the south coast of Australia this is Port Lincoln, Adelaide being the nearest great port. All Asiatic ports west of Japan will continue to be nearer to London, e. g., Manila will be 2000 miles nearer. But all Japanese and New Zealand ports and all Australian ports east of Adelaide will be nearer New York. If it costs 2s. to transport one ton of goods 1000 miles, distance saved will give American manufacturers an advantage of from 2s. to 7s. 6d. per ton on all goods supplied to ports between Melbourne and Wellington, N. Z.

"Tolls—Panama differs from Suez here. Suez had an immediate monopoly; with Panama there is in many instances a choice of routes, and high tolls will defect tonnage.

"Freights—To benefit American shipping, freight must be available both out and home. To benefit American manufacturers freights must be low. At present Europe supplies Australasia with manufactured goods, and the shipping goes via Suez. This route gives a maximum of trading possibilities and great facilities for coaling. The Cape route, too, offers to fully loaded steamers the advantage of cheap bunker coal. For the homeward voyage from Australasia a partly loaded steamer goes via the Horn to pick up cargo at ports like Montevideo. The canal would not attract these ships. When Panama is open will all-round-the-world service be organized? Great Britain is in a better position to do this than any other country. The rumors current recently that an existing shipping combine was trying to arrange an amalgamation with one of the oldest far eastern shipping companies were probably due to the hope of being able to commence such a service, having some of the chief trades of the world as tributaries, from the moment that Panama is available. America hopes to open up new markets, e. g., West. This now contrates at London, but there is a tendency towards decentralization and if America develops the world industry, she will get a real market without necessarily concentrating at Panama Canal.

"Fuel stations—This will be one of the decisive factors, and will be the keenest commercial rivalry. The American government is planning to supply good coal at either end of the canal at 12s. per ton. The price of coal on the Suez route is at present much dearer; to maintain the Suez route in its integrity the price of cheaper coal is a necessity. When oil replaces coal the British empire's sources will be ample to maintain its commercial position, but this may not in the meantime be passed in jeopardy, or disaster may occur.

"Insurance rates will probably be the same on both routes.

"The political factor—The results of the imperial ties in Great Britain, America and Germany should be noted.

"Preferences granted by the dominions have materially benefited British trade. The possession of the Philippines has displaced Spain from the position of chief trader there in favor of America. The importance of this factor can be traced in the case of Japan and China, where local government comes into play in many notable instances.

"Rates of exchange—Thus Japan has a silver, Europe and America a gold standard. Rates of exchange affect trading relations. The whole question should be carefully studied. About seven years ago, when a Japanese merchant could get exchange on the west coast of America at a rate of 119 taels for $100 gold, he paid him to import flour; but at present rates, namely, 140 taels for $100 gold, the same trade to greater advantage. This factor works independently of trade routes.

"Investments and banking—Great Britain is a great creditor state. Her advances have been really made in goods, and though the interest is to be paid in gold, it cannot be recovered by bills in terms of goods, so that investors get their return in gold. The British, too, have banking establishments all over the world. London is the great money place for international trade. All of this gives England a very great advantage. Germany has followed in England's footsteps. Finally, the Britisher is roughly speaking, the man in possession, and though at one time it seemed economical, at present it is very wide awake. He has many advantages: (1) For the transit services; cheap economically sized ships, carefully organized trading facilities throughout the world, and the knowledge and experience which enable him to retain old trade and be the first to enter new ones. (2) So far as retaining the market for manufactured goods is concerned he has an unrivalled labor force endowed with hereditary skill; he can cull the pick of the raw material, there is his knowledge of markets, and a fiscal policy which favors England as a buyer of raw and semi-manufactured materials; finally, British goods are known all over the world for their quality. Honest goods and honorable dealing on the part of the seller are their own backers."

Dr. Clark Burnham was summoned and declared that the patient was in such a weak condition that he must stay in bed for several days yet.

Secretary Lane remained out of doors today against his doctor's orders. In view of his [illegible] condition the physician had ordered absolute rest.

"The heat of the past two days has been rather trying for Mr. Lane," explained H. A. Hoyt, his private secretary, later.

"Mr. Lane went out for a little walk, found himself overcome by the heat, came home and rested.

"As soon as the weather changes we expected to return down to Monterey for a few days, perhaps a week or night's stay."

BRITAIN "CALLS" JAPAN.

Will Countenance No Military Action in Connection With the Incident at Nanking.

[BY CABLE AND A. P. TO THE TIMES.]

TOKIO, Sept. 17.—China's acceptance of Japan's demands in connection with the killing of several Japanese at Nanking is confined thus far to minor points. No answer has been received to the demand for an apology for insults directed against the Japanese flag and uniform or to the demand for the dismissal of Gen. Chang Hsun from the Governorship of Kiang-Su province.

Before presenting the demands the Japanese Foreign Office notified Great Britain regarding her attitude in the event of military action being taken, and learned that Great Britain would view it with apprehension. Such action would be likely to encourage the partition of China and the powers. The British government promised its support to Japan diplomatically at Peking in the event of indemnity and an apology but refused to countenance military action.

One thousand women marched in procession to the Knights' Hall and the Binnenhof, where Parliament was sitting. A deputation was sent in to see the Premier. CHATEL-SARRASIN (France) Sept. 18.—A hard-fought battle in which 120,000 men are declared was fought near here today in the presence of President Raymond Poincare. It was the closing feature of the French maneuvers. The Northern Blue army and the Southern Red army had been fighting in various parts a series of preliminary engagements. Today brought the two bodies face to face with a front extending for twenty miles in the valley of the River Gimone.

Fifty cavalry, artillery and infantry were assembled in preparation for the decisive battle, while aeroplanes were flitting over the respective positions endeavoring to discover the commander's intentions.

President Poincare, with Eugene Etienne, Minister for War, observed the battle from a hill near this town. He was surrounded by a brilliant staff and accompanied by the military attaches of the foreign embassies. The President repeatedly expressed his admiration for the endurance and fighting powers of the troops. Many of the infantry regiments marched thirty to thirty-five miles yesterday, in addition carrying the full active service equipment, weighing over fifty pounds.

Death of DeYoung.

and for seven years Mr. De Young proved his fitness for the responsible position he filled so brilliantly.

Mr. De Young's close application to business, and the cheerful manner in which he sacrificed personal interests to those connected with the Chronicle, have often been commented upon by those associated with him. Day after day, as business manager, he could be found at his desk hours before men in other lines of commercial activity began their day's work, and night after night he remained at his post until the rumble of the machinery told him that the first edition had "gone to press."

Just a few weeks before stricken with the disease which caused his death, Charles de Young was made publisher of the Chronicle, M. H. de Young gladly shifting some of his burden of responsibility on the willing and able shoulders of his son.

Charles de Young was proud of his home city, and was always ready to put his shoulder to the wheel and do his utmost to advance its interests. Any enterprise that would present San Francisco to the world in a favorable light was sure of his support. He was an active member of the board of directors of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition and of the Executive Committee of the Portola festival, of which celebration he was one of the founders.

ERRAND FOR ROOSEVELT.

May be Sent to Induce Germany and England to Exhibit at the Panama Exposition.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Col. Roosevelt may be the special envoy of the United States to England and Germany to secure the participation of those countries in the San Francisco exposition.

It became known tonight that while no formal tender had been made to Col. Roosevelt, prominent Californians identified with the exposition had suggested to the administration that the former President might be persuaded to go to London and Berlin before he sails next month for South America.

It was stated on good authority also that both President Wilson and Secretary Bryan approves the idea, but are withholding a formal offer until they know the outcome of the negotiations now being conducted in Europe by J. F. V. Skiff, director-general of the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

The interest of the administration in securing foreign participation is not alone to celebrate the opening of the canal to civilization, but to make of the Panama-Pacific Exposition a forum for the cause of universal peace.

UNCLE "ALEC" MEETS COMRADES

Ex-Mayor of Los Angeles Recalls War Time Experiences With the Members of His Regiment.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CEDAR RAPIDS (Iowa) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Back among the boys in blue with whom he fought in sixty-one, George Alexander, three times Mayor of Los Angeles, tonight told his old comrades of the Twenty-fourth Regiment about his experiences at Vicksburg and other conflicts in which he participated during the war. Mr. Alexander came all the way from Los Angeles to attend the biennial reunion of his regiment, which is meeting here today and tomorrow. He was principal speaker at the campfire session tonight. He joined Company E from Tama county, and after the war lived at Belle Plaine and Dysart before going to California. He told his old cronies how he left Iowa in 1886.

Hard Pressed.

HEARSES AS MEAT WAGONS IN THE ENGLISH STRIKE.

[BY CABLE AND A. P. TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Great Britain will know tomorrow whether or not she will have to undergo another national transport strike. Actuated by a demand from Birmingham, the strike situation is serious. The executive board of the National Union of Railway Men will meet at the headquarters in the morning to discuss the advisability of calling a national strike. Birmingham has taken Liverpool's place as the strike storm center. Seven thousand men are now out on strike. The stoppage of freight traffic is complete; even local deliveries are impossible.

A labor leader of Birmingham said today that no matter what action the executive board took, the passenger employees would join the strike movement tomorrow. Already several hundred engineers and firemen have struck, and freight is piling up. The various trades are beginning to suffer losses as a result of the disorganization of traffic. The directors of the Manchester ship canal have declined the offer of mediation made by the Mayor of Selford, declaring that they cannot grant any advances at the present time. The railways at Birmingham are refusing to receive any more consignments. Hearses are being utilized to carry meat from the depots to the butchers, as not a single railway dray is working.

At Dublin the unrest is increasing. Trade in Dublin is almost completely paralyzed. It is feared that as soon as the slender strike funds of the Irish union workers are exhausted dangerous outbursts will occur. The strike fever is spreading to Wales and Ulster.

DRAWING NET ABOUT SCHMIDT.

Whitman to Take a Hand in the Investigation.

Detectives Find Priest Hired Another Apartment.

Dentist Accomplice Formerly Practiced in Chicago.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—That Hans Schmidt, the Jekyl-Hyde priest, whose double life was exposed Sunday when he was arrested and confessed the murder of Anna Aumuller, after killing the girl and dismembering her body in a Bradhurst-avenue flat, hired another apartment in which he presumably planned to conceal himself, was developed from police discoveries today.

Evidence also was found linking closer, and for a longer period than had been supposed, the lives of Schmidt and his alleged counterfeiting partner, the unlicensed dentist, Dr. Ernest Muret.

The latter, papers found in his office by official searchers indicated, had left London for some offense committed while practicing medicine there, and had practiced in Chicago under the name of "Dr. Arnold Held," leaving that city and dropping the name of Held some time subsequent to July, 1909. Although Muret has said he met Schmidt only six months ago, evidence has appeared that they had business relations as long as two years ago and that the dentist long had knowledge of Schmidt's counterfeiting experiments.

WHITMAN TAKES A HAND.

Dist.-Atty. Whitman returned to the city today from a brief vacation and took the Schmidt investigation in hand. Coincidentally the Federal officers stepped into the case with warrants for Schmidt and Muret, charging that they had in their possession implements with which to make counterfeit money.

The detectives still scouring the neighborhood in which Anna Aumuller was murdered found today that three days after the crime a man resembling Schmidt, but giving another name, rented an Eighth-avenue apartment, for which he paid a month's rent. Two suit cases which were left there contained photographs of Miss Aumuller and Schmidt, as well as numerous little feminine belongings evidently those of the murdered woman. Baby clothes made up and embroidered and material for many other garments—enough for a complete outfit for an infant—were among the contents of the grips. Some of Schmidt's things were there, too—clothing marked with the name "Van Dyke," one of his aliases; a false mustache and false goatee and numerous other articles.

SPOILS SCHMIDT'S PLANS.

Schmidt may have intended to remove all the bloody, telltale evidence of the Bradhurst flat to his newer quarters, but the discovery of Anna Aumuller's body and the consequent police search in the neighborhood where the girl was killed spoiled his plans, the police believe.

Several interesting discoveries resulted from the search of Dr. Muret's office today. That he had practiced in Chicago under another name was indicated by a certificate issued by "the American College of Mechano-Therapy," to "Dr. Arnold Held." Attached to the certificate is an excellent photograph of Dr. Muret, with the attestation of a notary that he was the person described in the certificate, "living at No. 476 North Clark street in the city of Chicago and practicing medicine." The certificate bears date of July 1, 1909. A physicians card bearing Dr. Muret's name with a London address also was found as well as letters addressed to "Dr. A. Held" in Hamburg, Germany, and to "M. Ernest" in London.

LETTERS FROM LONDON.

Some of the letters bearing London postmarks were signed "Vera," the writer describing herself as "your loving wife." One urged him to come home as he had nothing to fear from "the detectives."

"You can come back in safety if you wear a false mustache and spectacles," another passage in the letter read.

Muret finally admitted under questioning today that he had known Schmidt at least a year. Their acquaintance began when Schmidt consulted him as a patient, he said, and a friendship developed.

Schmidt frequently came to the dentist's office to change from clerical garb to citizens' clothes, Muret told the prosecutor. In an earlier statement to Police Captain Henry, Muret admitted, according to Henry, that he knew Father Schmidt was making preparations to print spurious bills.

"I advised him not to do this," said the dentist, "but he continued his work along this line, not paying the least attention to what I said."

CHARGE FISH WERE DRUNK.

Montanans Arrested on Charge of Doping Finny Denizens of Stream With Fishberry.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MISSOULA (Mont.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mayor James M. Rhoades, J. M. Swango, John Thornton and John Russell, all city officials and prominent business men, were placed under arrest tonight charged with violating the fish and game laws of the State as result of an investigation conducted by agents of Atty.-Gen. M. Kelly.

The officials enjoyed an outing recently and one of them sprung what he termed an innovation consisting of mixing a large amount of ground meat with "fishberry," a toxic substance which produces a condition akin to intoxication when eaten by fish, rendering them wobbly and helpless. The Mayor and his party are supposed to have been found angling with a hook and line, and an investigation disclosed that the trout of the Bitter Root River about ten days ago were fed to their fill with "fishberry" and meat, and later the hilarious fish were scooped by the score, the officials using their hats and old shirts to flag the finnies. Too much of the booze berry apparently was doled out, and too many trout full to the brim got by the netting party and floated down stream. These fish died and the wholesale slaughter of trout which mounted into the hundreds, led to an investigation by game wardens.

The Mayor's fishing party offered to plead guilty and pay their fines if their names were not divulged, but this the Attorney-General refused and Mr. Kelly himself hied to Missoula personally to take charge of the prosecution. Each of the men furnished cash bail for their appearance in court at Hamilton. Much delay ensued in ordering their arrest as a surveyor had to be pressed into service to determine in what county the fish had been "jagged." The fish berry feeding having taken place within a foot of the dividing line of the counties. The arrests caused a sensation.

Mayor Rhoades tonight asserted his innocence declaring he merely was the chauffeur for the fishing party.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 17.—Official announcement is made of the settlement of the frontier question between Bulgaria and Turkey in Thrace. The frontier starts at the mouth of the Maritza river and ends north of Midia on the Black Sea. Turkey retains Adrianople, Demotika and Kirk-Kilisseh, while Bulgaria retains Tirnovo, Mustapha, Pasha and Ortakei. An agreement has been reached on the subject of nationalities.

An ironical note is struck in one clause of the protocol to the effect that the provisions of the treaty of London not modified by the present protocol shall remain binding on both parties.

BLAZED TRAIL FOR COMMERCE.

Important Work of the Consular Service.

Men Are Both Political and Business Agents.

All Appointees Have to Pass Test of Fitness.

[Washington Post:] From an insignificant beginning to a position of utmost importance in the commercial field is the proud record of the consular service of the United States. Though the members of the consular service have done a great work in the development of the international business of the United States, they are not under the civil service and depend entirely upon the action of the President, and their positions could be abolished by an executive order. Past Presidents of the country, however, have noted the need of such a service, and have striven to improve it, and it is supposed that all Presidents in the future will do likewise. Moreover, it will not be long before the consular service will be a better organized department, many believe.

Perhaps no one is more fitted to discuss the value and the needs of the consular service today than Wilbur J. Carr, director of the service, and in this connection he says:

"Those of us who read the Daily Consular and Trade Reports every morning gain the impression in the course of time that the only reason for a consul's existence is the gathering and reporting of trade information published in that document. I have even heard traveling Americans condemn the entire consular service in the most severe terms because the consul at their last stopping place had failed to invite them to dinner, which was their understanding of why consulates were maintained.

"It is a fact that a large part of the time of American consuls is directed toward investigating and reporting upon trade conditions abroad; discovering opportunities for the sale of American products; aiding American salesmen by advice, introductions, and in other ways to obtain orders for American exporters. The activities of our consuls in these directions are well known through the published reports.

MUST STUDY POLITICS.

"But consuls are not alone commercial agents. They are also political agents of their government, reporting upon the political affairs of the region in which they reside to their government and their diplomatic representatives, and in this manner assisting to protect the national, as well as the individual interests of the United States and its citizens. Many important and necessary functions are performed in connection with the merchant marine, such as settling disputes between masters and seamen, relieving sailors in distress, etc.

"As agents of the government consuls are charged with many duties connected with issuing passports, authentication and legalization of documents, granting of certificates of various kinds, and the registry of births, marriages and deaths. As officials, acting in a ministerial capacity, they perform various kinds of notarial acts, including the attestation of documents, the administration of oaths, and the taking of testimony; they act also as protectors, and in some circumstances guardians, of the interests of their fellow nationals, to the end that they may peacefully follow their commercial or other pursuits in foreign countries, that their property may be protected, and that in case of death their estates may be conserved. Occasionally they act as arbitrators or judges, and in some of the less highly civilized countries they exercise the judicial authority of the United States over American citizens and their controversies. As sanitary police agents and administrators, they protect the people of this country from the introduction of infectious or contagious diseases through their systematic reports upon health conditions and the inspection and study of the sanitary history of vessels leaving foreign ports for the United States. The enforcement of the pure food law, in respect to imported merchandise, begins abroad in the American consulate, as does the enforcement of the customs laws of this country.

OLD REGIME NOT PARTICULAR.

"From what has been said, it would naturally be supposed that the men selected to discharge the duties of consul would be men of a high order of ability, of irreproachable character, and of personal aptitude for the work to be done. Yet it is a fact that until a few years ago consular positions were given to men of all kinds and descriptions, from retired business men who wished to live abroad as government officials, broken-down clergymen and politicians, to the man with a shady reputation in his own community. These men went abroad, drew their salaries, worked when they pleased, conducted themselves much as they pleased, and when their party lost control of the government at home they came back in order that the winning party might fill the offices with its own men, in precisely the same manner.

"In spite of the looseness of the system many excellent men were appointed, but results could not be obtained because there was no organization; no responsibility of the individual officers to any one other than to those at whose instance they had been appointed; and no reward for meritorious service, nor penalty for inefficient service. There was not even machinery for the occasional inspection of the offices.

"Congress, in the spring of 1906, passed a law classifying the Consulates in grades according to salary, providing for five inspectors who should inspect all the consulates once in every two years, and requiring that every one receiving $1000 or more should be an American citizen. The law did not undertake to regulate appointments according to fitness, as the commercial organizations had requested, and so the President issued a general order requiring every candidate for a consular position to be examined in at least one foreign language, the commerce and resources of the United States, international, commercial and maritime law, commercial geography, political economy, and other subjects, and as to his general fitness to discharge the duties of Consul. Original appointments after examination were restricted to the two lowest grades and all higher posts were required to be filled by promotion from the lower grades on the basis of efficiency.

"Since 1906 nearly 300 men have been examined under the new regulations for positions of one kind or another in the consular service, but only 211 have been found eligible.

"Now, you may ask, what results has this new organization brought about over those which were attained by the old one? Perhaps the most striking illustration that can be given of the increased activity of the service is that the commercial reports of consular officers have increased from about 4500 before the reorganization to about 32,000 for the last year. They are of better quality and of more practical value than the reports made under the old regime, and this is not only the opinion here, but it is also the opinion of the experts of foreign governments whose business it is to examine them.

"But the Consuls have not confined themselves to writing reports. They have gone further, and have sought to discover opportunities for the introduction of American products into their districts. They have assisted Americans to obtain contracts for various articles produced in this country, the aggregate amount of which may safely be put at several millions of dollars. You may call this 'dollar diplomacy' if you like, but I think it is creditable to our Consuls, for without their active interest the contracts would doubtless have gone to other countries; and lest any one should misunderstand, it is proper that I should explain that the consular service gives precisely the same attention to the small firm as to the large one—in fact, it has found its greatest field of usefulness to be with that class of business as yet unable to maintain an extensive organization such as is maintained by some of the larger and more experienced firms.

"Nor is it alone in the commercial field that the new consular service has shown its value. In the protection of Americans traveling or engaged in various enterprises in foreign countries the new service has shown itself to be unusually effective. During the disturbed conditions in Mexico, for example, the consular service has been one of the chief factors in the protection of our people and their interests in that country. This is equally true of other sections of the world in which there have been in the last few years revolutionary or political disturbances involving the interests of Americans.

UNITED STATES SHOULD OWN OFFICES.

"Another important matter, and one deserving consideration, is the need of appropriations for acquiring residences for our diplomatic and consular officers. We should own the residence and office occupied by the American diplomatic representative in every capital in the world. It should not be a show place, but it should be decent, respectable, and representative of so great a country as this. Likewise in the East, in the unhealthy climates, in the places where comfortable places are not obtainable, we should own residences and offices for our Consuls. By so doing, we should gain vastly in prestige, both locally and in the eyes of the world; we should increase the efficiency of the foreign service; we should be doing the right and proper thing by the officers that are sent abroad to represent this country, and, furthermore, the investment, if we should care to consider that point, would be a good one. There is pending in Congress at this time a bill appropriating half a million dollars for the purpose of acquiring legation and consular premises at a number of places, and which has the recommendation of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. It should become a law at this session and thus enable the first step in the direction of acquiring homes for American diplomatic and consular officers to be taken.

"By administering the consular service according to the strict principles of the merit system, and having those principles written into the law, maintaining the offices in an efficient and dignified manner, and providing government-owned offices and residences at places where they may be required, we can attract to this field many of the best young men that this country produces, and increase the efficiency of the foreign service organization manifold.

"I venture to suggest these subjects because of my conviction that upon the interest and support of our commercial organizations will depend the preservation of the present efficiency of the diplomatic and consular service as well as the improvements which our increasing commerce and growing international relationships from time to time require. It seems to me, moreover, that there is no object more worthy of active support than that of building up and maintaining a strong, efficient and representative diplomatic and consular service."

Why Not Schools for Men?

[American Magazine:] No man ever feels the need of education so much as the man who sees opportunity for advancement open before him but who does not dare to take it for fear that he cannot rise to it. It is useless to say anything to such a man about neglected opportunities, and it is equally futile to say the same thing to the youth who is neglecting his studies. The first cannot go back and live his boyhood over, the latter cannot comprehend his danger, nor will he believe in his own possibilities, nor can he really study intelligently things for which he is not sufficiently mature. The few who mature early enough in life to go through technical schools or colleges are provided for. Can we not provide men's schools for those who mature normally?

SUN WARSHIP IN ENGLAND.

A Strange Sect Visits Stonehenge at Each Summer Solstice and There Performs Its Curious Adoration.

[Literary Digest:] A sect called the "Sons of Men," said to be of Tibetan origin, has been worshiping since 1905 in the prehistoric stone circle of Stonehenge, Eng., generally believed to be a temple of the sun. This fact is thought by some archeologists to corroborate the solar-temple hypothesis of Sir Norman Lockayer, the date of the summer solstice having been chosen by the new sect to pay their homage to the great luminary. The services held by the Sons of Men at Stonehenge are thus described by V. Forbin in La Nature Paris (June 21):

"If we are exactly informed, it was for the first time in 1906, on June 22, that a group of five or six Asiatics were surprised by soldiers engaged in maneuvers on Salisbury plain, while, prostrate beneath the trilithe, they recited mysterious litanies in their own language.

"The incident found no mention in the press. But the pilgrims returned in larger numbers year after year, always on June 21 or 22. This persistence finally attracted public attention and that of the papers, whose reporters ascertained the following facts:

"These pilgrims, Hindus, Arabs, and Persians, belonged to a religion of relatively recent origin, whose name may be translated 'The Universal League of the Sons of Men.' Founded, apparently, in Tibet, it has made rapid progress among the upper classes in Asia, notably in India, Arabia, and Persia; and it already has numerous adherents in Europe. In England it is professed by 2000 or 3000 persons, who meet to pray in several houses, transformed into temples; among them two in London, one in Manchester, and one in Liverpool.

"In 1912 the Daily Mirror sent one of its best staff photographers to take pictures of the strange ceremonies at Stonehenge.

"As generally understood, the Sons of Men have selected the summer solstice for their sun worship. The pilgrims were led by priests called the 'Sacred Five,' who were clad in ample robes of purple, covered in part with white and gold surplices, and wore strange turbans on their heads. Among them, two were clearly Mongolians.

"The assemblage met at the stones before dawn. While awaiting the sunrise, men and women remained prostrate before the great altar stone, reciting prayers, each in his own tongue. The translation of one of them is as follows:

"'I believe that nature is the reflected majesty of the powers, and above all of the omnipotent power behind the great whole.

"'Believing in the omnipotent power, I believe in the great conception of the infinite called Allah, universal majesty and truth, and infinite love, who dwells in our heart. I believe in the growth of all things toward good, and also in the intentional evolution of all things toward the better, and toward the best.

"When the first rays of the sun finally gilded the front of the monumental trilithe, the chief of the sacred five asked in a loud voice:

"'Brothers, know ye wherefore we are met at this time in this sacred inclosure?'

"And the faithful answered solemnly:

"'To proclaim our recognition of the power of Allah, universal majesty and truth, and infinite love, according to the commandments of the sacred five, the great souls, angelic messengers of Allah to the Sons of Men.'

"The ceremony was kept up until sunset, during which time neither the priests nor the faithful seemed to be at all disconcerted by the smiles of the curious, who had gathered near by to observe this strange festival of the sun."

CHINESE IDOLATRY.

People of the Flowery Empire Have no Religious Reverence; Worship Is a Matter of Business.

[Chicago News:] How the Chinaman regards his idol is told by the Rev. John MacGowan: "The Chinese is a person utterly devoid of reverence, sentiment or devotion in his religion. With him it is a matter either of fear or business, but mainly of the latter. A house is plagued with sickness, which is put down not to bad sanitation or other natural causes, but to the presence of evil spirits. This leads to a visit to the nearest temple to get the idol to drive them away. A new business is going to be commenced, but before doing so it is deemed essential to get the support of the idols. If one idol says it will not succeed, another is appealed to for its opinion, and if it is favorable it is at once accepted as the correct one.

"Should the venture turn out a failure, no reproach of any kind is uttered against the god whose prediction has been falsified. The man takes the blame upon himself. His character has not been pure, he says, or he was born under an evil star, or he was naturally unlucky, and so was bound to fail in anything that he undertook.

"Men never dream of thinking about their idols as we do about God. No affection is shown for them. It is most amusing to watch the faces of the Chinese when you ask them if the idols love them. The eyes gleam, the face broadens into a wide grin, and soon hearty laughter is heard at this most facetious and side-splitting joke."

Class Distinction in Germany.

[New York Sun:] The municipality of Wiesbaden, Germany, has dismissed its police Chief for the reason that he maintained relations "not responding to the dignity of his high position" with persons belonging to the "lowest social classes."

The "lowest social class" of people with whom the luckless official was associating happens to be his own nearest relatives.

According to the decree of the Municipal Council, a man who comes from very humble origin ought to stop seeing or receiving in his house his father and mother unless he prefers to run the chance of losing his job for not keeping up the "dignity" imposed by his high position.

The Chief has appealed against this decision to the authorities in Berlin.

Use for Condemned Criminals.

[New York Times:] Apropos of the recent suggestion, commented on in your columns, that condemned criminals be used for medical research work, I submit the following, which shows that the idea is not a new one:

In the middle of the sixteenth century the first anatomical museum was founded in Wittenberg, Germany, by the talented Leonard Fox. In 1549 the faculty was given the power to dissect bodies of executed criminals. Over the door of the museum was this inscription, which suggests itself to me as being a good motto for this new school of social therapeutics:

Qui vivi nocuere mali; post funera prosunt.
Et petit ex ipsa commoda mortis salus.

Here wicked men are found at last in useful ways.
And here death shows us how to lengthen out our days.

NEARLY HALF DOLLAR CUT OFF LAST YEAR'S FIGURES.

Waiting Man at Depot Run Down by Train—Chief Asked to Look Out for Alleged Wife-Murderer. Master Mariner and Bride Cruising Waters of Channel Islands.

SANTA BARBARA, Sept. 17.—Santa Barbara property owners are delighted over the fact that the tax rate in this city, including State, county and municipal, will be 48 cents less than last year, the total as fixed by the City Council being $2.50. This reduction comes in the face of probably more civic improvements than have been under way in Santa Barbara for years.

The rate decided upon by the City Council and the County Supervisors follows: State and county, $1.46; school district building fund, 4.8 cents; High School district building fund, 1.2 cents; High School maintenance, 24 cents; district school fund, 4 cents; kindergarten fund, 14 cents; manual training fund, 12 cents; city tax rate, $1.40; grand total, $2.50.

LEG BROKEN.

J. D. Pflinging lies in the Cottage Hospital suffering from cuts on the face and head and a broken leg as the result of being run down last night by the north-bound local passenger train at the depot. Pflinging is a car repairer and was on the track waiting for the arrival of a south-bound train when the other struck him. He was unconscious for an hour, and it was thought he would die. An examination at the hospital developed the fact that the man was not fatally hurt.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Chief of Police Row has been asked by the San Luis Obispo authorities to be on the lookout for John Melida, who is charged with attempting to murder his wife by shooting. Though the man emptied four shells into the body of his wife, it is said she is not considered in a dangerous condition.

Capt. Henry S. Short, a well-known local mariner, and his bride are spending their honeymoon on a cruise of the channel islands. They were married last Sunday at Grace Lutheran Church, and left the same day on Capt. Short's boat, the Charm, for the islands. They expect to be away two weeks before returning here to make their home.

Expert investigation on the electric light situation in Santa Barbara, with the expectation of reducing the charge from 10 to 8 cents, will be taken at once under the order of the City Council. A Los Angeles expert will be employed to make a probe of the rate question. Meanwhile the gas rate fight still rests in the Federal Court. While the decision is pending the public is paying $1 for gas. Judge Wellborn having refused the company's request that the rate be advanced to $1.25.

The finding by a jury in Salinas yesterday that Miss Katherine Coughlin is sane is of local interest, owing to the fact that the woman has sued Peter Storni, a Santa Barbara constable, and Miss Mamie V. Oehner, County Superintendent of Schools, for $15,000 damages, alleging that they caused her arrest without a reason. Miss Coughlin was forcibly removed from a county school, and she resented it by taking action to recover damages. Her suit here will be tried next week.

BUNCO MEN SCORE.

Roll and a Watch Lost by Battle Creek Man Who Tries to Shear "Rube."

James Wodard, a prosperous business man from Battle Creek, Mich., registered at the Alexandria Hotel, celebrated his arrival in the city yesterday by contributing $30 and a gold watch to bunco men.

In the lobby of the hotel he made the acquaintance of "Doc," a prepossessing stranger who suggested that they take a walk. At Sixth and Olive streets yesterday afternoon they met a "rube." The stranger suggested, inasmuch as the "rube" flashed a big roll of money, that they "frame up" on the "rube" and take his money away, intending, of course, to merely teach him a lesson and then give it back. Wodard agreed.

The successful game was not a new one. It was the old, old story of matching coins. "Doc" always held heads and Wodard held tails. "Doc" got all the money. Wodard lost all his cash and then "soaked" his watch. Finally the "rube" was cleaned. "Doc" gave Wodard a wink, told him he would meet him in the lobby of the hotel, and then, apparently frightened by the well-simulated anger of the "rube," who threatened to shoot both men, ran, closely pursued by the "rube."

Wodard didn't know what to do. While he was standing there another stranger rushed up to him and explained that he was a deputy sheriff. He had been informed, so he said, that there was gambling being carried on in the street. If Wodard wanted to avoid arrest he had better "beat it." Wodard "beat it" and went to the hotel. He is still waiting for "Doc."

RACE AGAINST DEATH.

Frantic Mother Rushes Injured Child in Baby Buggy Through Crowded Streets.

With a baby carriage utilized as an emergency ambulance, a frantic mother ran through the downtown streets last night, avoiding passing motors and street cars, to get aid for her injured child.

Baby Lucille Motter, living with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Motter, at No. 456 East Third street, played with matches. At the Receiving Hospital she was found to have sustained dangerous burns on the chest, arms and legs. The father's hands were badly burned in saving the life of his daughter.

The hospital ambulance and the patrol wagon at Central Police Station were out on other calls when the parents telephoned for help, so the mother bundled the injured child into a baby carriage and started for the hospital. Unable to hold the carriage because of his own injuries, the father ran by the side of his wife.

PEACE IN EVOLUTION.

Lord Haldane's Address Was Much Needed by the American Nation as Well as Other Nations.

[Chicago Tribune:] Wise words, most profitable for the meditation of the American nation, are the following from the lips of Viscount Haldane, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain: "It would be a very sanguine person," he said, when asked his opinion of the influence of the peace palace at The Hague, "who can see the dawn of international peace. It is useless to look ahead toward the permanent cessation of war in the near future. We can only do our best and trust to the progress of opinion. The coming of the millennium of peace must be an evolution like everything else, but some day we must come to the realization of the fact that we can settle our differences in a better way than by quarreling with each other." Americans need the hint badly. We are national optimists, because we have been favored by nature and by fortune. The pressure of imminent national peril does not compel us to look facts in the face or closely to fellow changing conditions. We are idealistic as well as materialistic and commercial. Therefore we neglect the need of national defense and are over ready to save money by believing in the millennium.

Peace on earth was preached 2000 years ago. Mr. Carnegie is not going to establish it over night.

Useful "Empties."

[Tit-Bits:] When the nightly exodus takes place from that busy daily hive, the city of London, many a careful suburban householder is to be seen taking home a judicious purchase of fish made in the marts of Leadenhall and Farringdon, and carried in a convenient bag supplied by the tradesmen. Did he trouble to examine that bag, as likely as not he would find the word "Chicago" stamped on it. Of course we don't import fish—at any rate fresh fish—from Chicago, but we do import vast quantities of meal from the Windy City on Michigan's shores, and these bags are made out of the meal sacks, which it does not pay to return.

As for the two-gallon tins in which paraffin is exported, one wonders what the natives of Africa would do without them. With a hole punched at either side of the open end to accommodate a handle, they make the handiest pails imaginable; as saucepans, stewpans or clothes boilers they are a conspicuous success; while cut open and flattened out they take the place of galvanized iron on the sides and roofs of huts in many a Kaffir location.

Ralph Sterling Ferris, who married Fay Postern, a young actress, in San Francisco lately, will be obliged to return to this city by October 6 to be tried for manslaughter. Chamber of Commerce Outing.

The president and secretary of the Chamber of Commerce were authorized yesterday by the directors to arrange an outing for members to take place in the next few weeks. The outing will probably take the form of an excursion to the harbor and a minute inspection of the work, both in the inner and outer harbor. A smoker to new members, to take place at an early date, was sanctioned by the directors.

Argument Scheduled Today.

It was expected that the argument in the habeas corpus writ involving the squad of Mexican Federal troops interned at Ft. Rosecrans would take place before Judge Wellborn yesterday, in the United States District Court, but by reason of the delay in trying a civil case in the court at San Diego the hearing will take place this morning. On account of the importance of the matter, it is believed the argument will require all day.

Miss Beulah Wright, dean of the College of Oratory, U.S.C., during the past summer has consulted with leading teachers and authorities in the East on the subject of story-telling. While Miss Wright's pupils have for two years past supplied all the branch public libraries of the city with attractive story-tellers, during four months each year, she is now equipped to give even a broader scope to her instruction. The university announces two sections in the course, covering every phase of the fascinating art.

RUSSIA WOULD DICKER.

Representative of Czar's Volunteer Fleet Seeks Exchange of Products with Southern California.

With a ready-made market assured for the Industrial Bureau, Dr. I. M. Goldstein, a representative of the Russian government, arrived here yesterday, and was accompanied on a trip around the harbor by L. D. Sale, chairman of the Foreign Trade Committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

Goldstein, according to statements last night at the Alexandria, is looking for an opportunity to trade Russian agricultural products for machinery and other manufactured products, and is here primarily in the interest of the Russian volunteer fleet, a subsidized shipping concern, now operating boats from Odessa to Vladivostok.

"We will send our ships across the Pacific if we are assured we can trade products of the fields for products of the loom, the crucible, and the cunning artificers in metals and wood," said Goldstein.

DAY-LONG DANCE OF THE RED FIENDS OF FIRE.

Fifteen Conflagrations in Six Hours; Department Is Exhausted.

Sixteen Men Injured and Overcome—Loss Nearly Quarter of a Million—Sanborn Building Gutted. Whole Block Laid Waste at Ninth and Santa Fe. Terrific Drain on City's Water Supply.

THE following presents a concise summary of the fires within the city limits between the hours of 9 o'clock a.m. and 3 p.m., the busiest day in the recent history of the fire department:

Number of fires, 15; last night 4. Total 19.
Total loss (approximately,) $300,000.
Total insurance (approximately,) $115,000.
Total number of men fighting, 336.
Injured and overcome, 16; last night, 6. Total 22.
Pieces of fire apparatus used, 64.
Miles of hose laid, 6.
Number of buildings destroyed and partially destroyed, 19.
Gallons of water used (approximately,) 75,000,000.

Fire shared with the heat in a general assault upon the city yesterday. While the mercury was highest, the fires were thickest, each establishing a new record for the year and probably for a decade. Never have the fighting forces of the city experienced such an exhausting day.

Every piece of apparatus housed in the fire barns was on duty. Every man in the service, who was not positively ill, was assigned to duty. Work was found for every department scattered with precautionary broadness throughout the municipal territory. In some instances those farthest removed from the shopping district were busiest.

More men in the department were injured yesterday than in any fire within five years. Heat and accident overcame them in the greatest fire of the day, the partial destruction of the Sanborn block, No. 536 South Main street, where the flames fought hand-to-hand with the choicest assortment of fire apparatus that the department could marshal into line and to fight was a draw for four hours. At the end of seven hours, the flames were still settling about the basement, ready to leap to the adjoining buildings if given the slightest license.

DEVASTATING DAY.

The big downtown fire was the climax of all the devastating day. At 9:15 o'clock in the morning, the alarms that rang down three springs in the alarm boxes began with a small house fire in the suburbs. With the district tremendously inflammable, the alarms followed, volleying at times into double and triple alarms. During the early afternoon, 70 per cent. of the city's apparatus was centered in the two fires at Fifth and Main and at Ninth and San Pedro streets.

Assistant Fire Chief O'Donnell, in charge of the department during Fire Chief Eley's visit in the East, said last night that if another big fire had started the fire department would have been helpless and the flames would have been permitted to practically run their strength.

The intense heat of the day added to the tremendous exertion of the firemen caused a condition that was almost unbearable. Dozens of firemen were forced to stop in their work and rest, dizziness and exhaustion threatening them with unconsciousness.

Hundreds of acts of heroism were performed that were shrouded in smoke and forgotten in flames.

At the Receiving Hospital the unfortunate were gathered for relief. Hour after hour the ambulance raced between the big downtown fire and the hospital, a monotonous gong-clanging announcing a new sufferer until the wards were choked with men who shivered with the cold in reaction from the terrible heat they had endured.

HOSPITAL A BEDLAM.

Scenes of hysteria and madness as pitiable as the exploits of the firemen were heroic, made bedlam of the hospital wards. Carl Miller, the first victim to be brought to the hospital was insane with exhaustion and wild with grief that he had not saved his brother and his personal friend, "Hickey."

"Let me go and get Hickey out," he would scream. "They can't get out, they'll die, and me laying here! Let me get Hickey, he's down there, and my God, no one knows it but me! It's a third-alarm fire, and me lying here. Let me go, oh, God, let me save Hickey."

Hickey and his brother were safe, but under the hallucination of their danger, he raved for an hour, breaking great cords that bound his hands to hold him. As each new patient would be carried into the ward, he would scream, and call again to let him save Hickey.

Carl Miller, a fireman, collapsed on the second story of the Sanborn building and fell to the ground. He

MACBYRNE INDICTED.

State Turns a Trick Through Grand Jury to Circumvent Efforts of Defense to Get Habeas Corpus Writ.

Jim MacByrne was indicted by the grand jury yesterday under the name of James W. Byrnes on a charge of obtaining money by trick and device. Bail was fixed at $10,000. The defendant will probably produce that amount and secure his release.

The complaint pending in Justice Reeve's court will be dismissed. The indictment will render the efforts of the defense lawyers to free their client on habeas corpus futile. In the meantime, Deputy District Attorney Shannon will be able to get into communication with important witnesses who were decoyed by MacByrne and Rial, according to the contentions of the prosecution.

The defendant was taken before the grand jury but it is presumed he took advantage of the immunity section in the Penal Code and refused to testify.

The next step will be to take the defendant before Judge Willis for arraignment and plea. This morning Attorneys Appel and Horton will argue for a reduction of bail for Rial, who is still in the County Jail. He is held in default of $10,000 bonds. Judge Willis will hear the motion.

Club Men of This City Fall Easy Victims.

Career Now Appears Ended Ingloriously in Jail.

Club members and business men who met "Rex Beach" during his recent visit to this city have probably enjoyed telling their friends "what a good old sport Rex is." But if any of them happened to cash one of the checks presented by the pseudo Beach, otherwise known as [illegible] Johnson, they are more likely trying to forget that they ever read "The Net."

Of the career of Johnson in this city many stories are float and some of his victims were not aware of the deception until the reported arrest and incarceration in San Francisco was added to the result of investigation by the Nick Harris detective agency.

On May 8 he cashed a check for $5 at Desmond's and again on May 10. Both checks were made out to Ernest Johnson, and apparently indorsed by Rex Beach. Later he cashed a check for $10 at Bullocks. He told several persons that he customarily used the name of Johnson in traveling to escape notoriety.

Growing bolder, he went to banks, and, giving his name as Johnson, displayed a bank book showing a large balance in a Canadian bank. He gave his local address as the Hotel Alexandria. Detectives from the Harris agency were set to watch him. They had just discovered that he was not registered at the Alexandria either as Johnson or Beach, when he disappeared.

HOTTEST DAY IN TWENTY YEARS.

Government Mercury Within Degree of Record.

And the Weather Man Says More Is Coming.

Something Stirring in the Ice-Cream Line.

Yesterday was the hottest day experienced in this city in twenty-two years, a maximum of 108 degrees being reached shortly after 1 o'clock. From early morning the sun's rays bored down with scorching intensity, untempered by fog, clouds or ocean breezes.

The big thermometer at the United States Weather Bureau registered 88 deg. at 7 o'clock. Two hours later the 100 deg. mark had been reached and passed. The mercury continued to climb until, soon after 1 o'clock registered 108 deg. Not until after o'clock last night did it sink to 100 mark again.

The hottest day ever recorded this city was July 23, 1891, when mercury climbed to 109. Once be in 1885, 108 was recorded, but in past twenty-two years no record approaches that of yesterday.

Because of the heat four sch were dismissed for the day, Gr Gardner, Los Feliz and Custer-aven At the last-named, where the bu ings are of the bungalow type, thermometer registered 106 be noon and the children found it uncomfortable to properly attend their studies. This is said to be first case on record where sch were closed in this city because heat.

ANOTHER SCORCHER.

F. A. Carpenter, in charge of government bureau, says the co tions indicate another hot day to with continued dryness of the atm phere. The lack of humidity one of the most conspicuous featu of the heat yesterday. The aver here is 60 per cent., but at no t during the day was it as high as per cent.

This absence of humidity made heat more endurable. It occasio some discomfort but was neither pressive nor dangerous as is the c in the East when high temperat and suffocating humidity freque combine to claim scores of victi It was a typical desert day such occur many times every summer the desert regions of the southw and which the residents of those c munities learn to endure with co placency, knowing that such hea not dangerous.

Carpenter says the hot wave caused by the "distribution of pr sure." There is an area of very h pressure over the middle west one of low pressure on the Pac Slope. The interchange of air c rents produces dynamic heat. As distribution continues to be unequa divided there is little hope that weather will be cooler for a day two. Carpenter says the nearby f est fires had little or no influence the temperature in the city.

From all parts of the city co records of high temperature record by thermometers of all kinds variously located. In the pit of big market place at Sixth and A meda streets, where the sun's r beat down with intensity and are flected from surrounding buildings, mercury wavered between 129 a 131 for more than two hours. R ords of 110 and 115 were repor from many places, although in so of the downtown buildings the te perature did not go much above at any time. Three thermometers Fourth and Los Angeles streets corded 112 in the shade at noon.

Projected solution of the congested traffic problem.

This is the way the new elevated railroad from the Pacific Electric station to junction with the San Pedro-street line will look when completed. The Board of Public Utilities yesterday recommended to the City Council the granting of a franchise to the railroad company for the new road.

NEAR THE VALE OF SHADOWS.

EX-SHERIFF BURR BELIEVED TO BE PASSING AWAY.

Only a Matter of Days or Hours Is the Sad Word from the Ranch Home of Notable Los Angeles County Figure Widely Known and Beloved.

John Burr, known to every "old-timer" in Los Angeles county, which he served as Sheriff for several terms; beloved for his sturdy integrity and ability, is believed to be dying at his ranch home near San Fernando. "It is only a matter of days and perhaps of hours," is the word which was given inquirers last night. But his friends still hope.

Burr is about 65 years old. He came here when the West was young, and always took a keen delight in its "growing up," his Scotch ancestry standing him in good stead in the pioneer days, and his own canniness having much to do with his success in business and politics.

He made several campaigns over the county and is known far and wide for his likes and dislikes, always strong; for his characteristics, originality and good stories. During one of his campaigns he imported several thousand cockleburrs, and every Burr adherent wore one of the stick-tights attached to his coat-tail. With such original schemes he kept the political pot boiling, and usually got the votes. His friends are many and loyal, and his serious condition is a cause of their keen regret.

He has been particularly interested in the development of the San Fernando Valley, for which he glimpsed a great future.

Our First Elevated.

TO WHISK THE BIG RED CARS THROUGH THE AIR.

Board of Public Utilities Votes Unanimously to Grant Pacific Electric Forty-Year Franchise for Tracks on Stilts from Sixth and Main to San Pedro, Taking Crush of Traffic from Main and Seventh Streets.

A KEY was molded yesterday which will unlock the streets of the business district to greater traffic fluidity when the Board of Public Utilities voted unanimously to recommend to the City Council today that the Pacific Electric be granted forty-year franchises for its proposed elevated structure from the rear of the Main-street station to connect with the new San Pedro-street line.

This structure, which will cost, with the right-of-way, close to $500,000, will permit the Pacific Electric to take nearly all northern and southern division cars off Main street, and is, according to President Shoup, the first step in an extensive system of elevated structures which will eventually remove 75 per cent. of the company's cars from the city streets.

In recommending the granting of franchises to permit the carrying of the proposed "elevated" over Los Angeles street, Maple avenue, Wall and San Julian streets, the Board of Public Utilities changed the clearance at San Julian street from twelve to fifteen feet, and recommended to the Council that the franchises contain provisions which will secure the noiseless operation of equipment over the structure and the esthetic construction of pillars and the painting of the structure as a whole.

"Some light and pleasing color," said the board in its recommendations to the Council, "should be used where it is carried over public streets or highways." The board is to decide on the colors to be used.

NO ADVERTISING.

The board also recommended that "no advertising nor advertising signs shall be used or displayed in or about the stations, stairs, or other parts of the structure, aside from those which relate to the company's own business."

President Shoup, of the Pacific Electric, stated last night that contracts for the steel to be used in this structure will be let as soon as franchises are absolutely assured. He further stated that it was a source of regret to him that the San Pedro street line will be completed long before this structure can go into commission. Work on this line, which will run from Aliso street to Seventh street, has been rushed lately to nearly 50 per cent. of completion.

TO RELIEVE MAIN STREET.

The object of the Pacific Electric in building this elevated structure is to take as many Pasadena, Long Beach and southern division cars off Main and Seventh street as possible without having recourse to an auxiliary station, and to provide for the large increase in traffic which will result from the opening of the new through line to San Bernardino. The design of the structure which was submitted yesterday to the Board of Public Utilities is an evolution from five previous plans.

The elevated structure will carry four tracks from the station to Maple avenue, under umbrella sheds, where they will become two and continue thence to grade connection with the San Pedro street line. A passageway from the Main-street station will connect with the umbrella shed loading platform.

"It will assure regularity of service, take many cars off important business streets, and secure greater freedom from street accidents and the like," said President Shoup, last night.

The franchise for the "turn-out" at San Pedro is to be merely temporary on recommendation of the Board of Public Utilities, as the Pacific Electric intends to eventually extend the structure on east to the river and informed the board that such is its intention.

NO AID FROM APPELLATE COURT FOR HUMAN BOMB.

THE Circuit Court of Appeal has affirmed the judgment of Superior Judge Willis in sentencing Carl Warr, who carried an infernal machine into Central Police Station, on the morning of November 12, 1912, to twenty years at San Quentin.

Exception was taken to the conduct of the State in asking prospective jurors whether they believed in the doctrines of members of a certain political party known as "direct action," which signified that physical force was approved as a means to secure the desired ends. The court held that this was not reversible error. Objections to other statements of the prosecuters to the jury were overruled for the reason that at the time no exceptions were taken in behalf of the defendant. The court says Warr introduced no testimony which contradicted in any degree the narrative of his performance as told by witnesses for the people.

In the case of Agnes McGrory and other heirs-at-law of William McGrory, against the Pacific Electric Railway, on appeal from Superior Court Judge Wood, the verdict of the jury giving the family $20,000 was not disturbed. McGrory was killed in a collision between a Pacific Electric and a Southern Pacific Railway train. The court held that the age of the dead man and his ability to secure employment that paid him at least $1000 a year, justified the expectation implied by the verdict.

In the suit brought by Michael C. Browne against the San Gabriel River Rock Company, on appeal from the judgment of Superior Judge Bordwell, the decision of the lower court was affirmed. The plaintiff had secured a judgment enforcing rescission of the contract for the sale of stock of the corporation. The cause of action was based upon the alleged fraudulent representations made by the agent of the company that the stock was "non-assessable."

mendment to County Liquor Ordinance on Way.

ill Prevent Delivery in All Proscribed Districts.

atural Sequence to New Law Regulating Wineries.

An important amendment or addition to the county liquor ordinance is being drafted by County Counsel Hill at the request of the Board of Supervisors. It will probably be passed as an emergency measure to become effective immediately upon its passage.

The amendment will prohibit wagons of Los Angeles liquor dealers or liquor houses dealing in liquors from delivering to dry districts in the county. Hereafter those who live in prohibition sections and desire native or other wines will either have to come to the city or have it delivered by a railroad.

The Supervisors state that inasmuch as the present ordinance prohibits wineries in the dry districts from selling even in wholesale quantities to customers in the dry districts, they consider it unjust to allow wagons from local liquor houses to sell in the districts.

County Counsel Hill stated yesterday that there is another reason for amending the ordinance and that is to prevent the importation of intoxicants "behind pigs."

The District Attorney has instituted dozens prosecutions of so-called "pig" where alcoholic beverages are appealed to members and Deputy District Attorney Richardson has secured convictions before juries.

The ordinance will be tested by Paul Schenck, attorney for a club proprietor who was recently fined $100 by a country justice of the peace upon conviction of selling liquor without a license. This appeal will not settle the question, however, and several lawyers are anxious to have the higher court rule on the questions involved.

It is the belief of County Counsel Hill that the ordinance will stand the brunt of an appeal and he is confident that liquor shipments to illegal points will be traced with greater ease than heretofore.

Until the amendment is passed the ordinance makes it impossible for a winery owner to sell wine to his neighbor, but that neighbor can come to Los Angeles, purchase wine, possibly made at that same winery, and have it consigned to his place in sealed packages.

The wineries can still manufacture and transport the product in their own vehicles into Los Angeles for sale but they cannot load cases of wine into cars sidetracked in the winery yards.

In spite of the apparent inconsistencies and the hardships worked by the ordinance, it will be maintained because the districts affected voted "dry" at the last general election.

There is no reason why grape growers cannot sell their grapes to wineries, but the wineries are being closed up in the main on account of the difficulty in transacting business. A few large concerns will doubtless continue to make light wines, transport to the city and ship from here.

The validity of the ordinance has been once sustained in an opinion rendered by Judge Finlayson, but when the amendment prohibiting local saloons from selling in the dry districts goes into effect in all probability another test case will be instituted.

KILLED BY THE HEAT.

FULLERTON, Sept. 17.—Theophilus Jones, aged 64, a well-known resident of this city for twenty-seven years, fell dead while at work on the B. C. Baxter ranch, near Anaheim, this morning. This was one of the warmest days of the year in this part of the county and it is said Jones died of the heat. He had been at work only a few hours when he fell over dead. An hour later the body was found by Baxter. Jones had fallen forward on his face.

Day Long Dance.

sat as he rode to the Receiving Hospital until the ambulance passed Second and Broadway. There a particularly hot blast swept the street and Miller wilted. He was not sane for hours.

SANBORN FIRE.

The fire in the Sanborn block, where practically all the injuries and prostrations occurred, started in the Pierce Desk Company's portion of the building. It is a three-story brick structure, housing a number of enterprises. Fed by the finest fuel in the desk company's stock, the blaze ate through into the first floor, where the stock of the Julius Salomonsen Clothing Company was on display. This stock was valued at $50,000, and carried $30,000 insurance.

Aloft, the Los Angeles Paint and Paper Company, which recently suffered heavily by fire, had leased the top loft and a small stock is reported to have been installed. There the fire centered with the most intense fury, baffling the combined attack of forty hose lines and two water towers.

The fire was particularly difficult to fight owing to the thick smoke that shrouded the building, blotting out the vantage points the fire-fighters gained. Steam added to the thickening clouds, and rank vapors and fumes from burning chemicals in the basement put a poisoned breath into every cloud.

The building, which is gutted, is valued at $25,000. It is partially insured. The contained stocks, aside from that of the clothing company, were valued at $40,000 or more, making the total fire loss about $125,000.

WHOLE BLOCK BURNS.

Spontaneous combustion in a pile of sawdust belonging to the Scott Shaving Company started a blaze yesterday afternoon which wiped out practically the entire block bounded by Ninth and Tenth streets, Santa Fe avenue and the Santa Fe tracks. The estimated loss on the storage yards, stables, several small dwellings and shops totals about $13,000. About a third of this is covered by insurance.

The shops of the Consolidated Pipe Company adjoins the Santa Fe tracks and the seventy employees of the place, under the leadership of Charles E. Clark and several officials of the company, with their buckets and small hose, extinguished hundreds of sparks that fell on the roof. Other places in the vicinity, all of them of wood, were protected in the same manner.

The sparks from one of the fire engines, working a block away from the real blaze, caught the roof of the dwelling of Santos Ramides, No. 1430 Santa Fe avenue, and caused about $100 damage before it was extinguished with hose from the residence and other adjoining properties.

The principal fire spread with great rapidity from the shavings and sawdust piles, ignited a barn of the Scott Company, in which a number of horses were kept, and burned one of the animals to death. It then spread to several small dwellings belonging to Croake & McCann, occupied by colored persons, and then on to the stables of the Santa Fe Horse Market. The horses were all rescued here. Kelly & Doyle, owners of the place, estimate their loss at $3000. It next attacked the blacksmith establishment of Smith & Armstrong, consuming it and causing a loss of $1500. The Hill Rubbish Company lost about the same amount. The Scott Shaving Company is controlled by the firm of Trus & McLinn, and the loss amounted to $6000, partly covered by insurance.

In the entire block only the small frame building occupied by the Episcopal city mission, clothing bureau, and the California Winery was saved by the efforts of the firemen. It was but two hours before the entire area had been burned over and the fire extinguished, except in the depths of the sawdust and rubbish piles.

By last night heavy inroads had been made on the city's water supply. "It was the greatest demand we ever had to meet," said Superintendent Mulholland. "The consumption jumped 15,000,000 gallons. We used 75,000,000 gallons during the day, several million gallons more than was ever before used by the city in one day.

"It wasn't altogether because of the fires, for the heat caused people to use water more freely than under ordinary conditions. We are not alarmed except for a few small districts that we may not be able to supply if the heat continues tomorrow."

At 7 p.m.—Shed at Eighth street and Grand avenue. Slight damage.

At 10 p.m.—Two cottages on North Avenue 65. Loss, $1800.

EVENING FIRE CAUSES PANIC.

HOTEL GUESTS FLEE TO STREET WITH BAGGAGE.

Proprietress Retains Composure When, While in Her Bath, She Discovers Flames—Defective Wiring Causes Blaze—Dog Saves Clothes.

Fire in the Leonide Hotel, No. 512½ South Main street, caused a panic among the 150 guests at 6:30 o'clock last night, and frightened men and women rushed into the streets in all sorts of attire and carrying all descriptions of baggage.

Mrs. F. M. Page, proprietress of the hotel, apparently was the only person to retain her composure. She was in her bath when the commotion broke forth. Peeping from the room, she saw the corridors beginning to fill with smoke, while men and women were everywhere frantically calling to each other and trying to escape with trunks, suit cases and other belongings.

Mrs. Page calmly dressed, filled a suit case and walked from the building as though prepared for a journey.

C. J. O'Neil, Engine Co. No. 16, who had been injured earlier in the day in another fire, was burned about the face and eyes while fighting the flames at the hotel.

C. C. Hopkins, a fireman on the same engine company, also was burned about the head and face.

Jose Reyes injured his right hand and was taken to the Receiving Hospital.

Quick work on the part of firemen prevented the spread of the flames and confined them to the roof, but the whole interior of the building was damaged by water.

The arrival of the police and firemen reassured the frightened guests, and many returned to their rooms when assured that there was little danger.

The street in front of the hotel was crowded with trunks and other baggage, and the flames, shooting high in the air from the roof of the building, attracted a throng which crowded the streets.

During the excitement the watching crowd saw a large collie dog emerge from dense smoke that poured from the hallway, carrying a bundle of clothing in his mouth. He refused the proffered help of patrolment, but took kindly to the offer of Mrs. A. A. Willey, a clerk, who, not knowing what else to do, brought the dog to Central Police Station, where he is awaiting his master or mistress as the case may be.

The fire apparently originated from defective wiring.

The flames had gained considerable headway before being discovered. Jack Holland, a waiter who has a room on the second floor of the hotel, was taking a bath when the fuse in the wiring of the room blew out. He investigated and found almost the entire roof in flames.

J. H. Bohme, driver for Engine Co. No. 3, who was overcome by smoke at the afternoon fire, refused to give up, and responded with his company to an alarm at Eighth street and Grand avenue last night at 7 o'clock. He fainted when he tried to get down from the wagon, and was taken to the Receiving Hospital by H. C. Winkler, also of Engine Co. No. 3.

While helping to put his companion on a cot, Winkler also collapsed, and is in a critical condition at the hospital.

The fire at Eighth and Grand did little damage, although F. B. Yonker of Engine Co. No. 23 fell from a ladder and injured his back. He also was taken to the Receiving Hospital.

Two small fires, one at No. 919 and the other at No. 921 North Avenue 65, damaged cottages at those numbers at 10 o'cloc klast night. The damage to the residence of Mrs. Mary Hamilton, No. 921 North Avenue 65, was fixed by her at $1000. The damage to the other cottage, occupied by Mrs. Margaret Taylor, amounted to $500.

Two Kinds of Danger.

[Detroit News:] Familiarity with danger sometimes breeds contempt for it. It is a curious fact that employees who are engaged in work that involves peril of fire or explosion have to be restrained by strict regulations for their own good. But fire and explosion are not the only hazards. Some of the institutions that seem farthest removed from danger are really places of considerable hazard. A small private bank in the village of Clarkson looked about the last place in the world where an inmate might consider himself in danger, but danger was there. The temptation to enjoy a smoke at the risk of lives and property and the loss of employment to 100 fellow-creatures differs only in form from the temptation to grow rapidly rich by unlawful use of money deposited by trusting fellow-citizens for safe keeping, a small rate of interest and the promotion of the business welfare of the community.

PHOENIX BANS MEXICAN FIESTA.

Attempt to Derail Trains Is Made at Maricopa.

Governor Resents Criticisms of Pardoning Habit.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Sept. 16.—Though today is "Las Diez y Seis," the Mexican national Independence Day, in celebration is in progress in Phoenix, the first such lapse for probably 1000 years. There is a reason. Just a year ago several knife-wielding Mexicans ran amuck and severely stabbed Chief Moore of the police force and another officer, while an American lad on the outskirts of the crowd was killed by a stray bullet. A couple of months ago other Mexicans murdered another officer, while he was on duty in the Southern Pacific freight yards. Sunday night, José Minrio Lopez, resisting arrest in the western part of the city, was accidentally shot and killed by Policeman Ray Morrill, who possibly remembered the events of a year ago. The Coroner's jury has declared that the shooting was accidental. It followed a Mexican brawl that had brought the policeman to the scene. A friend of Lopez, A. Grijalva, is in jail for attempting to lasso a few Americans. In her company, for the police made over 101 arrests, mainly of Mexicans, yesterday, in connection with the visit of Ringling's circus. So the city has been kept peaceful and any possible trouble has been captured as it came. Ordinarily the Mexicans make little trouble for Americans here and are easily handled by the police in the streets common among themselves.

HOP TRAIN WITH TIES.

Yesterday afternoon a south-bound train on the Maricopa branch was wrecked near Alicia station, by a pile of ties that had been heaped upon the track, apparently only in mischief and without any desire to derail or rob, for the spot is in the open and the ties were seen long before they were reached by the train. Around the tracks of a number of small pools, that led toward a Pima Indian village, and so it is presumed that the destitute may be charged to hungry boys. Agent Thackara, in charge of the Indian reservation, is investigating the matter.

Gov. Hunt has become interested in a plan for building a bridge across the Gila River at Sacaton agency, connecting the northern and southern portions of the Pima Indian reservation and affording also an alternative route for travel between Tucson and Phoenix. It is believed that Congress will appropriate funds for the bridge, as has been done for bridges across the Salt and San Carlos rivers near San Carlos, on the Apache reservation.

The Governor does not accept unsparingly the mass of criticism voiced by the State press against his prison reform and anti-capital-punishment principles. He objects especially to the assumption that a saturnalia of homicide has followed his suspension of death sentences passed upon murderers. In rebuttal he has prepared a tabulation showing that during the eighteen months of his official incumbency there have been in Arizona only sixty-nine murders, compared with seventy-nine during the 18 months prior thereto.

ACCOUNTING DEMANDED.

A new and uniform system of accounting has been demanded by the State Corporation Commission of all water supply companies within the state, the change to be made November 1. A similar order is to be issued soon, covering the operations of electric and gas lighting companies.

An unusual pardon just issued by the Governor is that of Thomas E. Wilson, who was convicted of grand larceny in Tucson last February and for which was sentenced to an indeterminate one-to-ten-year term in the State Penitentiary. Investigation has determined that O'Brien lied when he said his age as 22 and that he was only under 18, the lowest age by law permitted within the penitentiary. His commitment, therefore, was illegal. Wilson misstated his age that he might the better keep his misdeeds unknown to his parents, who live in Hartford, Ct.

The high and grammar schools of Phoenix began their fall terms yesterday, with an initial attendance that shows previous records. The schools are overcrowded, but ample room is to be afforded soon by completion of a number of large grammar and primary school buildings in different parts of the city.

Arrangements for a large bird exhibit at the State fair are now being made by the Arizona Poultry Association, which will also have a special show in Phoenix next January.

"FIFINETTE" DEPORTED.

Woman Because She Cannot Stay Long Enough to Collect on Notes Given Her by Lover Prince.

Mrs. Greta Melcher, alleged affinity of Prince Sulkowski, bade farewell to the city yesterday afternoon, and is now well on her way to New York, where she will sail on the Amerika for Hamburg, Tuesday. The Federal authorities paid the woman $12 for her attendance on the sessions of the grand jury, and turned over to her the notes given her by Prince Sulkowski. The letters incriminating the latter in practices that made him liable to the immigration laws are held awaiting action of the Department of State.

Mrs. Melcher cried when informed recently by Capt. Connell that she must go back to Vienna. She said she had come to collect some of the notes from friends of Prince Sulkowski in this city, and desired to stay until she could realize on them.

CLOSE ENOUGH.

It was enough to make a person's jaw drop, thought R. J. Gray yesterday, to see one of the new X-ray dens up the Plaza way.

There's false teeth dropped out and fell down a street car, and now he is doubling police aid in their recovery.

Gray, who resides at No. 426 Vernon road, was entering the city when the sight that interested him sprang into view. He leaned out of the car window and in surprise opened his mouth. The teeth were worth $100.

SIX YEARS AFTER.

[Homer Croy, in Collier's:] It's now six years since I left college, but it seems to me as if I have been out in the cold world since Lafayette's farewell tour. I had always understood that as soon as you got a college degree the waiting world went behind and patted you on the back, but I have since found that this is merely a pretext to get in a good position to kick.

After I had personally seen to the framing of my degree, I sat down and wrote a number of dignified letters to different prominent firms, telling them that I had just finished my college career and would be willing to entertain a proposition from them, providing that I had Saturday off, an assistant that I could depend on and a capable stenographer to look after the detail work. I enclosed a list of my grades, calling particular attention to my work in invertebrate anatomy and to my thesis on "The Cellular Structure of the Amoeba." The firms wrote back that they had all the stenographers they needed, and that they preferred girls, anyway.

I quit looking for a position and began hunting for a job.

When I still was in English A, I scorned $25 a week and pitied the poor man who had to support a wife on $50 a week. In getting my first job after leaving college I walked 1345 miles. It paid $12 a week, with night work only Wednesdays, Thursdays and Friday. My greatest responsibility was to get down early, open up and see that the fire buckets in the halls were kept well filled. I was so glad to get my first week's wages that I divided it in three pockets and wondered how a man with only a wife could fritter away $50 a week.

There was Puss Fleming. He was as strong as an ox and had the wide-awake expression of a double blank domino. Puss had muscles like the colored chart in front of a physiology, but he was as out of place in the classroom as a maiden lady of 63 at a structural ironworkers' convention. If you shook your finger at him suddenly and asked who was Gutenberg, who invented printing in 1450, he would say: "The man who found Stanley in Africa. He suffered many hardships." He could name off the Presidents of the United States down to Jefferson gibly enough, but after that he would be pretty sure to have Capt. Lawrence and Paul Revere taking turns sitting in the first chair of the land, with Kit Carson in the Cabinet.

Just the opposite was Charley Eglehoff. Charley had a head the size of a globe in the primary department showing 8 Coin, Iowa, and had the general tendency of a bed slat to put on flesh. His forehead was as high as your hand, and he cried all night if he got below 98 per cent. He could repeat off the Kings of England like a poem and worked plane geometry in his head. He said that the atomic theory was more interesting than "Ben Hur," and had learned the encyclopedia by heart down to Carthorse Everydales. He pressed his suit by putting it between the mattress and bed springs every night, and had a theory that knocked the nebular hypothesis all hollow. Before he was a senior every boy in college had promised to vote for him for President. We called him by his first name so it would feel natural when we dropped in to see him after the 4th of March. We would slap him on the back in the East room in a few years and say: "Hello, Charley, old boy—remember the time Hud Phillips put molasses on your chair at the club? Looking well, Charley. Guess you must be pretty busy, Charley. We're proud of you, Charley, old man. Well, remember me to the missus, Charley. So long, Charley."

We did hope that he would give Puss Fleming a job around the White House at something like putting seals on legal papers or covering the canary at night.

How things change! Charley Eglehoff is now superintendent of schools in a town so small that you would have to have a map the size of a horse blanket and put one finger at the letter P at the top and another finger at the figure four on the side of the map and bring your fingers together to find the place. He is well liked and has five children. He is now as far as Ulysses-Wubb, and rusty circles show on his trousers, as if he were too absorbed in knocking the nebular hypothesis hollow ever to put papers over them.

The other day I heard that Puss Fleming was in Chicago and dropped in to see him. I wondered what he was doing in a big city all by himself, and decided that I wouldn't go around until after lunch so that Puss wouldn't feel embarrassed. An office boy in uniform met me, with reading on his collar. It said "The Fleming Company." The name Pendleton Fleming was on the door that led down an aisle and under his name were two words, "Private Offices." I thought that was going a bit too far. A porter in uniform was prowling around with a feather duster, three kinds of patent dustless cloths and a chamois skin, trying to find a flyspeck.

"I'd like to see Mr. Fleming," I said, thinking how funny mister sounded.

"Has he an appointment with you?" asked the boy.

I almost laughed in the boy's face—the idea of Puss Fleming being of enough importance to make an appointment with anybody.

"No, I just dropped in to see him. How long has he had a job here?"

"He organized the company five years ago, I believe. I'll speak to one of his secretaries and see if you can go in."

A girl came out to see me, looked me over suspiciously, and asked a few questions. She explained as diplomatically as she could that Mr. Fleming—Mister again—was a very busy man, and as so many got in to see him under some pretext or another and then tried to sell him authorized histories of the Balkan War or mines in Peru, she had to be very careful about the callers she granted interviews to.

"Have you known Mr. Fleming long?" she asked.

"Grew up with him and lent him a towel the week he couldn't get back his laundry. We're old college chums, don't you see?"

"Yes, his old college chums drop in every day—to sell him something," returned the girl suspiciously. "You're the third one this morning. The last one had the only autographed edition of the writing of Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, complete in twelve volumes, half morocco, including a handsome photogravure of the President himself and a full oak book rack, all for the price of the books alone. When did you see him last?"

"Not since the time he went to sleep in calculus and his elbows slipped off the chair arm and he landed on the floor."

Finally I worked into the girl's confidence and was let inside Puss' private office. Puss was signing papers with seals on one hand and holding the telephone to his ear with the other. He hadn't slapped me on the shoulder until two telegrams were put on his desk for immediate answer. While he was ordering a new propeller for his yacht I looked at my watch and remembered about that important engagement. He started to see me to the door, but had to stop to give orders to three assistants and answer a cable from his London office.

New Tunics
Trimmings, Garnitures
Our collection of new dress trimmings is especially beautiful—and embraces the preferred styles in European novelties—which are imported directly by the Ville de Paris. Beaded and metallic effects on net, beautifully embroidered in wool or artificial silk in rich colors, are dominant features for adorning evening and reception gowns. Shown in bands, edges, galloons, all-overs and flouncings.

Just Received From France—
Net or Chiffon Tunics
The shipment comprises the latest ideas in tunics. Some have foundations of chiffon, others of net, in sky blue, pink, lavender, maize and black. Particular mention is made of

Two Special Values
Tunics at $8.50

Lot 1. Made of net or chiffon. Beautifully designed in silver beads or bugles. The color assortment includes: Light blue, pink, American Beauty, lavender, maize and white.

Tunics at $12.50

Lot 2. Very new and novel in the fashionable coat effect, made with white net foundation, artistically designed in silver beads and ornamented with delicate sprays of chiffon roses in pink, blue and maize.

As these tunics are imported directly by the "Ville"—we save the middleman's profit—and therefore sell them at prices considerably less than houses that buy through importers.

Another prominent feature of the new trimmings is the extensive use of Tassels, Girdles, Buckles and Pendants.

We are showing a large variety of these small, but important dress accessories. Beaded effects are very popular, but tinsel and artificial silk are also in great demand. A line of black silk braid loops and ornaments, edged with fur, are decidedly new.

The more exacting the fashions are in dress trimmings—the more certain you are of finding them at the "Ville."

PHOENIX BANS MEXICAN FIESTA.

Attempt to Derail Trains Is Made at Maricopa.

Governor Resents Criticisms of Pardoning Habit.

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Sept. 16.—Though today is "Las Dies y Seis," the Mexican national Independence Day, in celebration is in progress in Phoenix, the first such lapse for probably thirty years. There is a reason. Just a year ago several knife-wielding Mexicans ran amuck and severely stabbed Chief Moore of the police force and another officer, while an American lad on the outskirts of the town was killed by a stray bullet. A couple of months ago other Mexicans murdered another officer, who was on duty in the Southern Pacific freight yards. Sunday night, Manuel Lopez, resisting arrest in the western part of the city, was accidentally shot and killed by Policeman Roy Morrill, who possibly remembered the events of a year ago. But a Coroner's jury has declared that the shooting was accidental. It followed a Mexican brawl that had brought the policeman to the scene. A friend of Lopez, A. Grijalva, is in jail for attempting to lame a few Americans. He has company, for the police made last 101 arrests, mainly of Mexicans, Sunday, in connection with the visit here of Ringling's circus. So the city has been kept peaceful and any possible trouble has been captured as it arose. Ordinarily the Mexicans make little trouble for Americans here and are easily handled by the police in a manner common among themselves.

HOP TRAIN WITH TIES.

Yesterday afternoon a south-bound train on the Maricopa branch was wrecked near Alicia station, by a pile of ties that had been heaped upon the track, apparently only in mischief and without any desire to derail or rob, for the spot is in the open and the ties were seen long before they were reached by the train. Around, on the truths of a number of small ridges that led toward a Pima Indian village, and so it is presumed the deviltry may be charged to Indian boys. Agent Thackara, in charge of the Indian reservation, is investigating the matter.

Carl Hunt has become interested in a plan for building a bridge across the Gila River at Sacaton agency, connecting the northern and southern sections of the Pima Indian reservation and affording also an alternative route for travel between Tucson and Phoenix. It is believed that Congress will appropriate funds for the bridge, as has been done for bridges across the Gila and San Carlos rivers near the San Carlos, on the Apache reservation.

Governor Sloan does not accept unflinchingly the mass of criticism voiced by the State press against his prison reform and anti-capital-punishment principles. He objects especially to the assumption that a saturnalia of homicide has followed his suspension of death sentences passed upon murderers. In rebuttal he has prepared a tabulation showing that during the eighteen months of his official incumbency there have been in Arizona only sixty-nine murders, compared with seventy-nine during the six months prior thereto.

"He organized the company five years ago, I believe. I'll speak to one of his secretaries and see if you can go in."

A girl came out to see me, looked me over suspiciously, and asked a few questions. She explained as diplomatically as she could that Mr. Fleming—Mister again—was a very busy man, and as so many got in to see him under some pretext or another and then tried to sell him authorized histories of the Balkan War or mines in Peru, she had to be very careful about the callers she granted interviews to.

"Have you known Mr. Fleming long?" she asked.

"Grew up with him and lent him a towel the week he couldn't get back his laundry. We're old college chums, don't you see?"

"Yes, his old college chums drop in every day—to sell him something," returned the girl suspiciously. "You're the third one this morning. The last one had the only autographed edition of the writing of Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, complete in twelve volumes, half morocco, including a handsome photogravure of the President himself and a full oak book rack, all for the price of the books alone. When did you see him last?"

"Not since the time he went to sleep in calculus and his elbows slipped off the chair arm and he landed on the floor."

Finally I worked into the girl's confidence and was let inside Puss' private office. Puss was signing papers with seals on one hand and holding the telephone to his ear with the other. He hadn't slapped me on the shoulder until two telegrams were put on his desk for immediate answer. While he was ordering a new propeller for his yacht I looked at my watch and remembered about that important engagement. He started to see me to the door, but had to stop to give orders to three assistants and answer a cable from his London office.

Our collection of new dress trimmings is especially beautiful—and embraces the preferred styles in European novelties—which are imported directly by the Ville de Paris. Beaded and metallic effects on net, beautifully embroidered in wool or artificial silk in rich colors, are dominant features for adorning evening and reception gowns. Shown in bands, edges, galloons, all-overs and flouncings.

Just Received From France—

The shipment comprises the latest ideas in tunics. Some have foundations of chiffon, others of net, in sky blue, pink, lavender, maize and black. Particular mention is made of

Tunics at $12.50

Lot 2. Very new and novel in the fashionable cost effect, made with white net foundation, artistically designed in silver beads and ornamented with delicate sprays of chiffon roses in pink, blue and maize.

As these tunics are imported directly by the "Ville"—we save the middleman's profit—and therefore sell them at prices considerably less than houses that buy through importers.

Another prominent feature of the new trimmings is the extensive use of Tassels, Girdles, Buckles and Pendants.

We are showing a large variety of these small, but important dress accessories. Beaded effects are very popular, but tinsel and artificial silk are also in great demand. A line of black silk braid loops and ornaments, edged with fur, are decidedly new.

AFTER HIM.

Now lead us to the empty-headed idiot who set the country singing about the good old summer time. We would like to soak him with a snowball, if we had any snow to waste.

PROGRESSING DOWNSTAIRS.

The Progressive party in New York, according to the New York Sun, is not progressing up to the heights of constructive realism, but is progressing down the back stairs to the cyclone cellar.

PARTY TO CRIME.

A Cuban contractor testifies that he made Gov. Sulzer big loans while Sulzer was in Congress and that the latter never paid him. This is a political joke, no matter how bad Sulzer is. Loans of that kind are not extended with a view of having them returned. They are given because they will not be sent back.

MODERN LAWN.

Luther Burbank can now take a back seat. An eastern horticulturist has invented a movable lawn. Strips of rubber cloth covered with a flexible, highly fertile substance on which the grass seed is sown. When it is grown the lawn can be picked up and carried into the house and moved without exciting a sneering remark from a neighbor that "Burgins can't be very well off; he mows his own lawn."

ROAD CENSORS.

The Trustees of Santa Ana say that Chester must reform the dress of its women or quit. The Trustees want them to dress more rather than better. What the singing and dancing girls wear is good enough, but there is not enough of it. We are inclined to be a little lenient with the chorus and the chorus. These things never think about what they are. They are entirely frank in their offerings and nobody has to look unless he wants to. Each man is his own moral censor and each woman is hers. It is up to you to be naughty or nice. Perhaps you could be both. We have heard of such things.

GOING TO SOUTH AMERICA.

The snake dancer is not travel-gorged, but the results of the election in the Third Progressive District of Maine do not encourage him to give lunches at Oyster Bay to committees who may call upon him to devise means to prevent the dread disease of "sitting together" from spreading and having the same effect upon the dwindling corporality of the Progressive party that a tapeworm would have upon the liver of the Earl.

The Big Bull Moose has announced his intention to take a trip to and through South America, accompanied by a big hunting and a leaf specialist. He will ascend the Amazon to its sources. He will take in Janeiro, Sao Paulo, Buenos Ayres, Cordoba, Bahai Blanca, Valparaiso and Santiago. He will leave New York October 4. The Times wishes him the pleasantest kind of a trip. May no Amazonian alligator open its jaws to take in the canoe that contains him. May no monkey drop cocoanuts on his cabeza as he tramps through an African forest.

HOW QUIET.

Do not imagine that the rupture and dissensions in the Associated Charities organization give you the right to turn down the proposition when it comes up to you.

The city has its poor just the same, and the only way to reach them is by organization. This makes it lighter on everybody and makes sure that the right people are being helped in a systematic way. The tendency and mismanagement, or even personal intent of one official or set of officials, does not affect the system. It is a surgical operation which safeguards and guarantees health. Society gets sick in spots of places and needs radical treatment. Nevertheless, the orderly method of doing things must persist. If all of this hadn't been found out and this muss had not been kicked up you would have come through with your contribution without a question, and the money would not have gone to the wrong people.

CONVICT-MADE GOODS.

Congressman Nolan has leaped into the limelight with a bill prohibiting interstate transportation of convict-made goods. The bill provides for a label on convict-made goods and inflicts penalties upon the shipper or transportation company that aids in the interstate transportation of goods manufactured in prisons. The theory is that goods produced in prisons should be for governmental consumption only.

It does not appear that the proposed law would be of any benefit to California workmen, for most of the goods made at San Quentin are sold and used in California, and not because the Federal law would not intervene.

A ban on eastern prison-made goods would stimulate production of similar goods both by private corporations and by prison operatives in California. The prison operatives could not compel the maintenance of a "closed shop" at the prison, but manufacturers could not compete in the matter of production with convict-made goods.

Congressman Nolan probably does not really expect that Congress will enact the law he proposes. It is doubtless offered as a sop to Buncombe.

THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE BATTLE OF CHICKAMAUGA.

Fifty years ago this day every ford and bridge on the northwest bank of Chickamauga Creek was guarded for fifteen miles by the forces of Gen. Rosecrans, with hundreds of union banners floating above them. The Confederates were in force at different points on the other side. One of Bragg's brigades managed to cross at a point beyond the Federal line. Col. Dan McCook made a reconnoisance on the evening of the 18th, burned Reed's bridge, then the only available point at which a recrossing could be had, and reported the situation to Gen. Rosecrans. That officer, on the morning of the 19th of September, detailed Gen. Thomas to proceed to Reed's bridge with a view to capture the Confederate force.

The movements which followed developed the relative position of both armies, which previously had not been known, and the battle of Chickamauga was begun. Bragg was at first successful. The rebel general, Stewart, moved his division, struck the Union forces under Johnson and drove him from his position in disorder. Then they compelled Palmer to retire, and when Van Cleve came to his support he also was beaten back. Then they assaulted Reynolds's troops and overpowered them. The rebels swept everything before them.

By this time Gen. Davis reported with his division. He moved at once to the front and checked the rebel advance. Gen. Wood with his forces came to his assistance and our lines were reformed. The rebel forces, under command of Gens. Cheatham, Stewart and Walker, were forced to retreat to their original line. Sheridan moved to our left in support of our new line. He drove the rebels back, recaptured the Eighth Indiana battery, which had previously been taken by the Confederates, and captured a large number of Longstreet's soldiers.

Bragg now changed his plan of battle. He ordered Polk to cross the creek with his division at the nearest ford. Hill, with his corps, received similar orders.

It was now half past two in the afternoon, and the rebels made another desperate assault on the Union right. Hood's corps, with Bushrod Johnson's division, moved forward in heavy masses and furiously assaulted Reynolds's and Van Cleve's divisions. This time the Union forces did not yield. They stood their ground, and with six batteries poured canister into the advancing Confederates, together with a heavy infantry fire. Still the rebels continued to advance. They pierced our right center and approached the Widow Glenn's house where Rosecrans had established his headquarters.

Rosecrans now ordered Negley from the right under McCook, and Brannan from Thomas's left, into the fight. They moved rapidly to the attack and with cheer on cheer hurled back Hood and Johnson, driving them inch by inch until darkness ended the battle at this point, with the Union forces victorious.

Thomas reformed our lines and concentrated the troops on more commanding ground in the rear. Johnson's and Baird's divisions occupied a new position on the extreme left, with Palmer and Reynolds on the right, with Brannan to the rear and right as reserves. While these movements were being made the Confederate forces under Cleburne and Cheatham assaulted Johnson first and then Baird with tremendous force. The fighting continued until after dark with tremendous losses on both sides, with the Union troops victorious.

The troops on both sides literally slept upon their arms.

During the night there was some reformation of lines. Our troops threw up temporary breastworks of logs and rails, behind which Thomas's command awaited the attack which it was expected the rebels would make early in the morning. At daylight Rosecrans rode the line. He ordered Negley to join Thomas, for with his keen military intuitions he was convinced that the first attack would be made on that flank. Negley delayed in obeying this order, Rosecrans was greatly irritated, gave peremptory orders, and Wood's division was at once placed in front.

In the early morning a heavy fog obscured the movements of both armies. Bragg before daylight with his staff took position immediately in the rear of the center of the line. He sent a staff officer to Polk, ordering him to make a speedy attack. Polk was not with his troops, having spent the night on the east side of Chickamauga Creek. A message was sent to him there. Bragg, impatient at the delay, proceeded in person to his right wing, but found the troops wholly unprepared for the movement. Finally Polk appeared and was ordered to make a vigorous attack at once.

At half past nine the rebels made a tremendous assault on Beatty's brigade of Negley's division and drove it back in disorder. The Confederate troops under Helm and Cleburne advanced on Baird, but our troops behind their breastworks poured a terrific fire of canister and musketry into them and drove them back.

Other Confederate divisions attacked successfully the Union forces under Johnson, under Palmer and under Reynolds. These attacks were maintained with fierceness for two hours and each time the Confederates were hurled back by the splendid fighting of our troops.

In another part of the field Davis was overpowered by the immense numbers of the rebels and was compelled to retire.

The right of our army was broken to pieces and five brigades were cut off entirely from the rest of the command. Bragg in person directed a movement to envelop the exposed left flank of Thomas's command and strike it in the rear. His movements were repulsed by Baird's, Johnson's and Palmer's divisions.

On Horseshoe Ridge, where Thomas had placed Brannan's division, the Confederates charged again and again with fresh troops, but were always repulsed.

The battle was great and brilliant, but not destructive. But for the masterly maneuvering of Rosecrans it would have been lost to the Union forces. It was conceded by both sides to be practically a drawn battle.

On the 20th the right wing of the Army of the Cumberland was swept from the field of battle. Rosecrans, broken in spirit, retired to Chattanooga. But Bragg's victory was barren of results. His army was so cut up that it was impossible for him to follow up his apparent success and secure possession of the objective point of the campaign—Chattanooga. This great gateway of the mountains remained in the possession of the Army of the Cumberland.

Gist, the historian, pronounces the battle of Chickamauga for the forces engaged the hardest fought and the bloodiest battle of the rebellion.

Hatreds are not hereditary. Antagonisms die with individuals. The vendetta never flourished among the Anglo-Saxon race. Today the veterans of both armies ride in trolley cars to the summit of Lookout Mountain, where once they battled above the clouds, or ride in autos side by side over the field at Chickamauga where thousands of Federals and Confederates "climbed the red path to immortality."

AS THEY SEE MR. BRYAN ABROAD.

When Mr. Bryan accepted the responsible post of Secretary of State of the United States he had no knowledge of the diplomatic service, for the simple reason, which was sufficient to him, that it was beyond the range of his political interests. It may be doubted whether he could have named offhand a half dozen ambassadors and ministers. Any secretary of legation, any military attache, for that matter, knew more about the traditions and methods of the service than he did. Nor did Mr. Bryan set himself assiduously to study international relations when he moved into the department. He had hardly opened his desk before he shut it and went out on the road to preachify and orate about local issues.

The truth is that as Secretary of State Mr. Bryan is a fit subject for the ironist at home and the humorist abroad. He is being analyzed contemptuously by correspondents of British and continental newspapers. In a very recent article in the London Times he is thus summed up:

"Everything that he has touched has gone awry. His 'grape-juice banquets,' his establishment of a moving-picture apparatus in his office so that the West might see him 'transacting affairs of state with foreign diplomats,' his refusal to stay at his desk at a time of considerable diplomatic stress because he had a chance to supplement his salary by lecturing, have given his enemies copious material for personal attack."

The London Standard reflects the opinion of a great many Americans of all parties when it says:

"One cannot be surprised at the amateurishness in American diplomacy when one remembers that it is under the supervision of a statesman whose best energies have been reserved for the platform and the press."

Now, remarks the New York Sun, a man might be a lecturer and a producer of copy for a monthly periodical, his own, for instance, and yet be an authority upon foreign affairs, but that cannot be said of Mr. Bryan. He is essentially a parochial statesman. True, he has made a tour of the world, but he did not learn enough, or be diplomatic enough, to refrain from talking and writing like a tyro about the colonial policy of the greatest of colonial powers and the best friend the United States has among the nations—just the same bad break that that other unstatesmanlike statesman, Mr. Roosevelt, made in regard to England's colonial policy in Egypt.

Mr. Bryan's critics abroad do not yet seem to know anything about his use of the great office of Secretary of State as a lure to catch one-dollar-a-year subscribers for his paper, the Commoner, which is becoming a national scandal. It must be said for the British newspapers that they do not make a practice of disparaging American Cabinet officers and diplomatists, treating them usually with respect and consideration, but Mr. Bryan's is a case apart; he is not only vulnerable, but provocative. Criticism of him will out in spite of indulgence and restraint. The judgment of him abroad is not half as candid as the estimate of him at home.

Mr. Bryan is the paid servant of his country and is entrusted with the duties of its highest office next to the Presidency. It is his duty to stay at his desk and perform, if he can, or as best he can, the responsible duties of that high office, and not go wandering over the country lecturing for what he calls "political prominence," or for dollars.

Too Cordial.

SALESMANSHIP TALKS.

By Herbert N. Casson.

Stick to Facts."

[Standard Oil Bulletin:] The main thing, after all, is to have people believe you.

Some salesmen think they're smart when they can prove that black is white.

That is not what a salesman is for.

The duty of a salesman is to prove that black is black and white is white. A salesman is not a lawyer. He is not to fill his mouth full of excuses and apologies and suspicious arguments.

If he thinks for a moment that he was hired to deceive customers, he has made the greatest mistake of his life.

The difference between a lawyer and a salesman is that law means a fight and salesmanship means a bargain.

The purpose of a salesman is not to win a victory, but to win customers and to make them friends. Any Cheap-Jack salesman can land a customer once, but it takes a real professional salesman to land a customer for life.

If a young man finds that he is expected to sell goods that are worthless, there is only one thing for him to do—get another job. If a salesman finds that his boss is requiring him to be a confidence man and a bunco steerer, there is only one thing for the salesman to do—quit.

There are many good employers. There are honest goods in every line of trade, and these goods are the only ones that ought to be sold. Nothing hurts a sale more than a false claim or a silly brag. Stick to facts. Tell what you have a right to tell. Tell what you can prove. Tell what you know is true. Be sincere; and verily I say unto you, your days shall be long in the land, and your customers will rise up and call you blessed.

UNCLE WALT.

The Poet Philosopher.

The cost of living is so great we all lament together; we therefore should appreciate the fact that there's free weather. This is a blessing sweet and rare, and all our bards should rhyme it; the poorest man may have his share, free gratis, of the climate. He basks in weather rich and ripe—what luxury is sweeter? No trust can pump it through a pipe, or run it through a meter. And yet, alas, this precious boon we do not rightly cherish; in March, December, August, June, we're using words nightmarish, abusing everything that's sent, the rain, the drouth, the blizzard; we voice all kinds of discontent, from A clear through to Izzard. We ought to cry (ungrateful set!) when down our whiskers trickle the large and briny drops of sweat: "It doesn't cost a nickel!" We ought to cry when comes the sleet, when raging floods are frothing, when we have frozen ears and feet: "We're getting this for nothing!" So let us strive to mend our ways and show we're long on merit; and if they ship us beastly days, why, we'll just grin and bear it.

WALT MASON.

THE MAINE ELECTION.

[Portland (Me.) Press:] The election also shows that all hope of the Progressive party becoming the chief rival of the Democratic party in this State is dead. It has served its purpose, a useful one perhaps, but it has outlived its usefulness in Maine. Its disintegration as a party of influence in this State is now only a question of time.

[Boston Advertiser:] The Bull Moose bosses are very much worried by the analysis of the vote in Maine. It shows that the third-party movement is dying away, not in any particular locality, but in a fairly-normal average, which seems to hold good for all localities. The Bull Moose bosses are as well supplied with money as ever, but the real Progressives of the country realize that in the Republican party is the best hope the one real hope, of national progress, and they are fast returning to the Republican party, which is the real Progressive party of the country today.

[Pittsburgh Gazette-Times:] The United States is as normally Republican as the Third Maine District, almost. Ordinarily it is safely so. The Progressive vote is falling away in the rest of the country even more rapidly than it did in the Maine election. With the Progressive vote in the next general Congressional elections a poor third and the Democratic vote remaining "about normal," the Democratic majority will disappear from Congress, and with similar conditions in the election of 1916 Democracy will disappear from the White House. That is what the moving finger has written in Maine.

THE DISCOVERY OF LOS ANGELES CHINATOWN.

BY JAMES MARSHALL WARNACK.

It is funny how you can live with a thing for a long time without seeing it. I have discovered Chinatown after three years in Los Angeles.

The Chinese are truly a quaint people. They have the strange habit of doing everything backwards. They begin by living on the other side of the world, which is utterly contrary to our idea of a place to live on this globe. A few of them have drifted over to this side and settled in Los Angeles and San Francisco, as bees settle on the comb, but even these are bad enough, for they continue to be of a different color, to speak a different tongue and to use a different literature. When they write they scribble their crazy characters up and down instead of across the page. When they talk they sing, and when a bunch of them sing it sounds like a meeting of members of a Political Equality League when they are electing a president—of the league. (Of course I allude to the stone age, ere the light of civilization had dawned upon the lords of creation.)

I ate dinner at a Chinese cafe yesterday. I tried to be polite and eat as they did, but it was a task for which I had not bargained. As a rule it is easy to do as the Roman does when one finds himself in Rome, but I would like to see the man who could be like a Mongolian when in a Chinese eating-house. They place fork, spoon and chopsticks at the left of the plate. They put the dish up to their mouths and rake the food in, and they throw tea down their gullets as if trying to extinguish an internal blaze. They serve dessert first and other things afterwards.

I say "other things" because no one ever knows what he is eating when he orders a Chinese dinner. He trusts to Providence. Sometimes Providence is kind—not invariably. Providence was not kind to me. I ordered chow yuk, and the Chinese waiter, whom I had never seen before, smiled diabolically and said, "All light, Jim," and waddled off to the kitchen. Soon he returned with my chow yuk. Now, as nearly as I can judge, chow yuk is composed of a little of everything under the sun, with boarding-house hash thrown over it as a sort of sauce. Yet strange to say, it is pleasant to the taste, and I ate it with gusto. I felt that the man who had never eaten chow yuk had never really lived. An hour later I knew that no one who had never eaten chow yuk had ever really died.

While in the restaurant I ate some Chinese candy. Their candy also must be made of a conglomeration of everything, but it is not bad tasting and it does not affect one like chow yuk. While I was eating I heard an awful noise above my head. I thought it was either a heavy thunderstorm or an earthquake in Mars and I was greatly frightened until a passing waiter blandly asked me how I was enjoying the concert. Concert! You should have heard it! Fiddles, gongs, sanheens, deedahs and whatnots all going at once and not paying much attention as to which way they were going. To these people discord is harmony. At least they say there is harmony in their music and that the "Melican" simply does not understand it. I would much rather take their word for it than to take a course in a Chinese music conservatoire.

Last Sunday I went to the Chinese Congregational (Christian) Church. They held Sunday-school after preaching instead of before church services. I was disappointed in the preaching. I didn't understand a word of it. The benediction was welcome.

As I left the church I saw a funeral procession passing. Their mourning colors are red, white and blue—I suppose without any intention of complimenting Old Glory. Instead of being quiet about it they seemed to try to make as much fuss as possible and they marched up and down the streets like a circus parade.

One is very fortunate in visiting an American Chinatown, because one is very likely to find handkerchiefs in a notion store and pie at a delicatessen. I suppose that in China one would naturally look for hardware at a bakery and expect to find pie at a dry goods store.

Speaking of dry goods, the women and babies of Chinatown also show their utter disregard for our customs. While not by any means forgetting good taste, they seem to dress with the utmost comfort. The Chinese babies have a fine sense of humor, but somehow our comic supplements do not seem to impress them as humorous. Not long ago I saw a group of the little yellow folk seated around a "funny paper," discussing it as seriously as a Coroner's jury might discuss the mysterious death of a millionaire. Probably they think our cartoonists are hired by the Chinese to make pictures of their dragon-gods and that they make a botch of the job.

I have been going to Chinatown every day for about two weeks, and every day I see, on a certain street corner, a little, old, wrinkled-faced Chinaman sitting with a glass bowl in his lap. In the bowl is a gold fish. The fish is for sale, price 10 cents. How long the old man has been trying to sell that fish goodness only knows. I'm sorry for him and would buy it, only I've got no use for the fish. Merely to look at it is enough. I asked the old man where he got it and he replied, "He come from China." This fish looks like a nightmare. Each of his eyes is as big as the rest of his head, he has a mouth that seems to sneer at you, and he chews cud like a cow. A few evenings ago a young woman asked me if fish ever go to sleep. She seemed to think I should know. I do not. But I would wager that this gold fish never sleeps. I know I wouldn't dare to go to sleep if I were him—I'd be afraid of dreaming about myself. But what else could one expect of a fish born in Chinese waters?

The Board Was All Right.

[Philadelphia Telegraph:] South Trimble, the clerk of the House of Representatives, merrily chuckled the other evening when one of the party referred to the easy way some people have of explaining a discrepancy. He was reminded, he said, of the proprietor of a country hotel in one of the Eastern States.

Some time ago, according to the story told by Mr. Trimble, a man was traveling along the road when he saw a sign announcing that the Rural Inn was a hundred yards further on.

"Say, old man," remarked the traveler to the landlord when he finally reached the hotel, "what's the matter with that sign of yours down the road yonder? Isn't it a trifle mixed?"

"A trifle mixed?" wonderingly responded the proprietor. "I don't get you."

"It says a hundred yards to the hotel," returned the traveler, "and if it isn't three-quarters of a mile my tape measure is twisted."

"The sign is all right," declared the proprietor with a smile of enlightenment. "The whole trouble lies with the man who put it up. He got it in the wrong place."

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES."

The Times invites clean, clear, bright expression of views on current subjects, timely, pertinent and proper. Brevity should be kept in sight. Essays personal, fictitious and personal controversies are barred. Address should be added to each letter by the signing of a nom de plume which will be either published or withheld at the owner's request. All letters intended for publication should be in "particular primer" typewriting, and are subject to editorial condensation.

"The Lure."

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 17.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am writing this as an open letter to the Women's Clubs of Los Angeles, and to the citizens of Los Angeles as an appeal to them to stay by the plays now going on in our theaters with a view to arresting the evils resulting from the hidden pitfalls and snares laid for young girls—yes, and boys, too, by older men and women, especially men, in all cities and towns.

I realize how the more refined families shrink from presenting these evils to their beloved and protected sons and daughters, but there is no safety in ignorance. It should be the part of every child's education to know the social conditions everywhere, and the time is coming when education will not be considered complete without this knowledge. How can we to keep from sinning by omission if we know nothing of that part of our city where vice is hatched and disseminated in undertows throughout the world?

Why should we selfishly consider only our own protected ones while thousands of poor children go unprotected and lured through necessity to become a menace to society? I know of many young girls just entering their teens who are fully capable of understanding the warning shown by such plays as "The Traffic," "The Lure," "Help Wanted," and others of the character.

Now is the time while they are young before the fatal thing happens is done—now is the time to save, to do the ounce of preventive.

A book that my mother put into my hands at the age of 14, entitled "Charlotte Temple" made such a lasting impression on my mind that had I been inclined to go wrong I believe this alone would have saved me. I have no young daughter, no young son to be led astray, and yet I have decided to devote my life to the work of saving girls and boys from ruin through the white slave traffic, and all other evils of like nature.

Oh, I beg of all women not to hug themselves in security because their children or other loved ones are safe, but to move in one solid phalanx toward eliminating this curse in our own land, and it can be done, if only the women will not be foolish nor selfish, and will have the moral courage to stand together and insist upon ousting the evils which have been concealed under the guise of modesty so long. Ignorance is not modesty, neither is it a sign of virtue. On the contrary, it is criminal! It is criminal to be so nice that we wilfully blind ourselves to the evils that threaten other homes than our own, and supposing our own to be safe, which we cannot count on. It will be better for our boys as well when the temptation is removed which arouses them insane with desire, better for all concerned and unconcerned.

M. E. JANES.

The Easiest Way.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 15.—[To the Editor of The Times:] We observe that several club women of your city are interesting themselves in behalf of the so-called single standard of morality, and are endeavoring to lift the burden that ordinarily attaches to the fallen woman. This is a very laudable undertaking, but it seems to the writer that a wrong construction may be put upon their efforts.

These well-meaning women should not forget that weak men and women and hungry men and women proceed along the same lines—the lines of least resistance. When an idle and vicious man gets hungry or desires that which he has not the industry to earn, he proceeds along the line of least resistance, and he steals or commits burglary. When an idle and vain girl desires fine clothing or perhaps food, and she is unwilling to work like other girls, she likewise proceeds along the lines of least resistance, and she sells herself. When a man steals he is sent to the penitentiary, and in many States, on the third conviction, he is "sent up" for life. But a woman is rarely punished. She is punished, however, by being ostracised by society, and it is certainly meet that she should not go entirely free. If she could get a living their "easiest way," which is burglary and robbery, she would escape actual punishment for a term in prison, no doubt more she would resort to that means of life, just as women resort to prostitution. Men would not worry about social ostracism. It is true, of course, that good men occasionally resort to theft, and it is also true that good women sometimes sell themselves, but this is about as rare as the other.

The man who is driven to theft by idleness and consequent starvation is rarely punished by the court, and a woman who sells herself to prevent her children from starving is entitled to the consideration of humanity.

But when a well-fed young man robs a safe of $200, and spends it in clothing in a few weeks, he should be punished, and when a girl sells herself for $300, she is entitled to little consideration. Both are birds of prey and should be punished.

We are impelled to write this card by an incident that came under our notice a few days ago in which a young woman of good family, who had been fleeced for, the time being, an article of clothing, remarked to her fashion monger as follows:

"Well, I can get it if I want it, and we should not blame girls now like I am glad for getting clothes the way they could, when their parents won't buy them."

With "The Traffic" and "The Lure" on the stage, and "The Woman Thou Gavest Me" in literature, and socialism and free love preached everywhere, it is not difficult to see whither we are drifting. Those well meaning club women who propose to the world a new "open house" for women who have fallen the "easiest way" to make a living will find that many a weakling will improve their efforts as an apology for those who violate the moral law.

WILLIAM FRANKLIN.

NAMES A JUDGE FOR PEATLANDS.

ONE CHOSEN FROM THREE BY GOV. JOHNSON.

Gives Up Private Practice to Take Seat on the Bench—Man Who Has Had Trouble With His Wife Burns Mouth With Acid but Will Recover.

SANTA ANA, Sept. 17.—Today Gov. Johnson appointed William H. Thomas of Santa Ana as the additional Superior Court judge of Orange county. The act creating the judgeship became effective on August 10, but for some reason the appointment was not made until today. There were three Progressive lawyers seeking the position, Thomas, S. M. Davis and S. S. Finley, and until the telegrams were received today from Sacramento it was not known which man would be successful.

Thomas was born in Wales in 1868, came to this country when 6 years old and was reared in Iowa. He studied law in the office of Ex-Judge J. A. Lovely at Albert Lea, Minn., and began practicing in 1899. He served a term as State's Attorney of Benson county, North Dakota, and from 1902 to 1909 was secretary-treasurer of the North Dakota Bar Association.

Thomas began practicing law here in January, 1910. During the Presidential campaign he was an ardent Progressive, and was then and still is secretary of the Progressive County Central Committee.

Attorney Thomas was building up a substantial practice here, which he gives up for the place on the bench. The Superior Court now has two departments, Judge Z. B. West presiding over No. 1. Both Thomas and West must run for office in 1914 if they continue on the bench.

Today physicians were called to the home of George M. Hoenshel, at No. 21 North Birch street, to resuscitate him from the effects of what was supposed to be a heavy dose of carbolic acid. The man was groaning and seemed to be in a stupor. The physicians found the man's lips and mouth burned, but the stomach pump disclosed the fact that none of the acid had been swallowed.

Hoenshel has a real estate office here. A few weeks ago his wife brought suit against him for separate maintenance, alleging that he was drinking heavily. A reconciliation has taken place since then. While there is reason to believe that Hoenshel attempted suicide, some of those who were called after his condition was discovered were of the opinion that he did not try to swallow the acid.

BOARD ACCEPTS.

M. R. Heninger has offered to pay the school board $500 for opening a street along the east side of the Polytechnic High School grounds, and the offer was accepted. Some of Heninger's South Side property will be opened up for further subdivision. The school board concluded to deed a strip for a new street on the south side of the school grounds for an extension of Camille street.

TRUSTEES NOT GUILTY.

J. G. Launer, W. T. Travers, W. L. Hale, L. B. Steward and L. P. Drake, trustees of the Fullerton Union High School, are on trial in Justice Cox's township court today on a charge of having failed to fly the American flag over the school buildings during sessions of the school last June. Col. Knowlton, a G.A.R. veteran, was the complaining witness. The jury quickly brought in a verdict of not guilty, the guilt being technical if at all. The trustees testified that the flag pole was new and the flag was not put up while the cement at the base was setting.

Harassed Contractor to Try Again to Fulfill His Task for City—Hottest Day in Years Drives Interior Inhabitants to the Seashore. Young Turk Enters School.

LONG BEACH, Sept. 17.—Contractor Stansbury, who for a year and a half has, under difficulties innumerable, been building the 30-foot concrete walk and bulkhead along the west beach between Hotel Virginia and the San Gabriel jetties, announced today that work will be resumed October 1, as after that time the tide-book indicates the work can be carried on with little or no interference from high water.

The tides are not especially high at present, but ground swells are running heavy and carry the water too high for work to be prosecuted. A plan is being worked out by the property owners' committee and Mrs. Stansbury whereby the walk can be carried to its completion under revised specifications which have been agreed upon and which will obviate the dangers now threatened by quicksands in the west part of the proposed work.

THE HOTTEST EVER.

Today was the hottest day in the history of Long Beach to judge by available records and the memory of the "oldest inhabitants." At 10 o'clock the thermometer registered 98 and at 11 had climbed to 105. At noon a breeze drove it down to 95, but it rose to 100 at 1 o'clock, but at 2 had dropped to 94, though some places showed higher.

Earl D. Evans, aged 35, an employee of a local lumber company, was overcome by the heat while at work on the city docks and was taken to his home in a serious condition.

As a result of the heat in the interior there was a hegira from Pomona, Covina, Riverside and Redlands, all coming to the beach to find coolness in the shade and in the surf. Many of them were those who left here a week ago, having concluded as they expected, their summer outing.

TURKS TRANSPLANTED.

Louise Vahanian, aged 20, and Charles Vahanian, aged 11, have just ended a sixty-day journey and are the guests indefinitely of their sister, Mrs. G. S. Kashishian. The two young Armenians were warned to leave their home in Asia Minor because of conditions. The 11-year-old boy, Charles, has been studying to be a doctor and in two more years in his native country would have been able to practice as a physician. He has never studied English but reads and writes French as well as Turkish and Armenian.

Anxious to learn the language of his adopted country, the boy this morning enrolled at the Carroll Park school. He starts in the first grade, but is so bright that Prof. Huff says he will rapidly advance through the higher classes. Both brother and sister are Christians, being members of the Episcopal Church.

EQUITABLE GAS RATE.

The City Council last night instructed City Attorney Long and Gas Inspector Cline to appear before the State Railroad Commission in Los Angeles and endeavor to get an equitable rate for this city in the transportation of gas over what is known as the Los Angeles-Long Beach trunk line. They will seek to get a proportionate rate on the amount of pipe line utilized.

The gas company claims that the line is a direct one to Long Beach and therefore a higher rate is applicable, while Long Beach claims that Compton, Watts, Wilmington and San Pedro are all served from the same line. Should the city succeed in getting the proportionate rate the City Council will then take up the matter of a lower gas rate for city consumers. At present the rate is $1.

HOME FOR TURTLE.

The Council last night accepted the proffer of the skin, head and shell of the 1200-pound Japanese turtle tendered it by Capt. Dan Kane, the man who caught it a few days ago, and instructed the Chamber of Commerce to have the reptile mounted by a taxidermist at a cost not to exceed $50. The stuffed specimen will be a companion for the big whale.

TO SELECT MANAGER.

The Board of Education will meet in executive session tomorrow night to select from thirty-five applicants a business manager for the school district. The new position, which pays $125 a month, will require a man of many parts. Among other things he will be purchasing agent and truant officer, and also will be in charge of a small motor truck which the board expects to purchase to save drayage bills.

GOOD DRAWING CARD.

Advices from the World's Fair stock company, which left here a month ago to play an engagement in Honolulu, are to the effect that Manager John Wray, who is also leading man, purchased an auto on his arrival and the first day broke his right arm in two places from back-fire while cranking. He had the bones set and appeared in the opening performance that night.

An industrial city on the banks of Lake Nahwel Huapi, 500 miles from civilization in little-known Patagonia, is one of the things located and plotted as part of the plan for the Argentine Republic by De Witt L. Reaburn, former Angeleno, and aqueduct engineer, who arrived at the Lankershim yesterday fresh from the strange lands to the south of the Tropic of Capricorn.

Though Reaburn emphatically denied last night that he had seen any of the gigantic Patagonians, whose lineaments are familiar to all who have perused maps of the days of Vasco de Gama, he saw other things in the country that is so close to the "windy passage of the Horn," which convinced him that in far-sightedness the Latin-American rulers of the pampas are more than abreast of their Anglo-Saxon neighbors of North America.

BUILDS CITY.

An instance is the industrial city which Reaburn laid out in all its completeness of streets, sites, railroad yards, and the like, facing the snow-capped Andes, and with 100,000 horse powers of available electrical energy in mountain streams as its sole reason for anticipated existence.

"That is more electrical energy," said Reaburn, "than the whole aqueduct project will develop."

He is the man who located and built the Saugus division of the aqueduct, the only division of that mammoth water-bringing project to be completed under the supervision of one man. He was four years an engineer for the Mississippi River Commission, eight years an attache of the government geological survey, one year with the reclamation survey.

Reaburn left here a little over a year ago on a vacation and was drafted into the service of the Argentine Republic through the operation of circumstances, and at the earnest solicitation of an old geological survey friend, who had been placed in charge of railroad building by the Argentine government.

IN THE PAMPAS.

South to Valparaiso he went, then to Santiago, where he joined a contingent of Americans, including "Big Bill" Pemberton, former Stanford football star, for the long journey across the wind-swept Andes, into the pampas, on the Atlantic side of the "backbone of the continent."

Arriving at a collection of huts which at that time was the only town on the shores of Lake Nahuel Huapi, Reaburn was placed in charge of the location work on 125 miles of proposed railroad leading eastward from the Andean foothills.

"The railroad is the San Antonio-Nahuel Huapi, built from tidewater at San Antonio into no-man's land to the west," said Reaburn last night. "It is a project of the government to open to settlement a vast region to the southwest of the Colorado, Rio Negro, and Salado rivers.

COLD AS ALASKA.

"Cold! It was as cold as Alaska part of the time; and I know something of Alaska, for I was perhaps the first white man to reach the foot of Mt. McKinley. Coastward, it warmed up one degree to the mile until at tidewater it is hotter than it was today in Los Angeles.

"Vast English syndicates control much of the land, for sheep and cattle-raising, but more is controlled by the republic, which is holding it in anticipation of vast influxes of the land-hungry n years to come.

"The road completed—or rather, the lines run—I was sent to the lake to locate an industrial city on all-comprehensive lines, where, from the start the 100,000 or more horse powers of electrical energy now tumbling down the streams will be made to go to work. It is a big work, a work that the republic is figuring on in terms of centuries, not years."

ASSISTANT COMING.

During most of this work, Reaburn was assisted by J. Glenn Morgan of this city, who was formerly principal assistant engineer to Col. Ockerson on Colorado River work. Morgan is now on his way home from a vacation in Europe, and is expected here about October 1.

Reaburn expects to temporarily locate in this city. He believes he has a "few good things coming after a strenuous year in the far South."

The Toll.

FOUR INJURED; MOTORCYCLISTS.

WOMAN AND MAN MAY DIE AS RESULT OF CRASH.

Two Machines Come Together on Washington Road—Both Trying to Pass Autos—Victims Picked Up by Passing Cars and Rushed to Receiving Hospitals.

A night "joy ride" to Venice on motorcycles may result in the death of two persons who were injured in a collision at Washington road and Crenshaw boulevard at 9 o'clock last night. Two others were less seriously hurt at the same time.

Mrs. Delia Fox, 25 years old, living at No. 631 Miles street, sustained a broken left leg, a possible fracture of the skull, a deep cut over the right temple and internal injuries. Receiving Hospital surgeons said last night she probably will die.

She was riding at the time of the accident with W. E. Starr, a dairyman living at Florence Station. He was bruised and cut on the left leg and suffered from a concussion. He will recover.

Al Sponsler, No. 1115 East Pico street, was unconscious when brought to the hospital. He sustained internal injuries and was bruised and cut about the face and head. He is thought to have sustained internal injuries and up to a late hour had not recovered consciousness.

Sponsler was riding with Miss Delphia Cornell, No. 1138 East Twenty-seventh street. Miss Cornell was thrown to one side of the road and aside from a sprained wrist is uninjured.

The motorcycle ridden by Sponsler and Miss Cornell was coming from Venice, the other was going in the opposite direction. Each machine had turned from the road in an effort to pass an automobile in front of them. The riders each turned in between the car tracks and apparently were unable to avoid the collision.

The force with which the two machines came together completely wrecked the motorcycles. W. A. Coons, No. 1002 Bonnie Brae, passing in his automobile, brought two of the injured to the hospital, while Henry Valk, No. 3027 Reservoir street, brought in the others.

AN INTERNATIONAL BUILDING.

Shelters Both Canadian and American Postoffices, but the Mails Have to Go Many Miles by Railroad.

[The Argonaut:] Probably no other place in North America has a postoffice of the unique proportions of Beebe Plain, Vermont. There a simple wooden building shelters the offices of two countries. The structure is cut diagonally by the Canada line, being almost equally divided by the imaginary boundary. The northern half contains the postoffice of Beebe Plain, Canada, and the southern half the office of Beebe Plain, Vermont. They are separated only by a ten-foot corridor, using this passageway and the same door in common. George H. House, postmaster, looks after the mail of the two offices. As a result of red tape in the postal regulations regarding the transfer of mails a letter mailed at the Vermont office for the Canadian office across the hall travels 200 miles before delivery. A letter posted at Beebe Plain, Vermont, for Beebe Plain, Canada, will go south on the Boston and Maine Railroad from Beebe Junction, Vermont, to White River Junction, 111 miles on the same route, and thus continues its way to Sherbrooke, Canada, thirty-four miles further. There it is again transferred and returns to Beebe Plain, Canada. That is, after having a ride of twenty-four hours and going 290 miles it arrives at its destination, ten feet from where it started.

I Should Worry.

[New York Evening Post:] The ranks of opponents of slang have hitherto been filled with mere philologists and lovers of good English, with the unsatisfactory results that must be expected from so anemic an array. Now, however, a recruit has appeared who has changed the situation at a stroke. In a quarrel between two women in St. Louis, neighbors, over a dog, one of the combatants repeated "I should worry" so many times that her antagonist became irritated and struck her with a milk bottle. The affair was then taken to court, where the judge sought expert evidence regarding the connotation of the expression. The defendant held that it was "a deliberate slur. It means, 'I don't care what you say or think.' No respectable person would use it." The other woman disagreed with this opinion, declaring: "It is a playful remark, and is a meaningless popular saying of the day." Other experts were similarly divided. But it took the jury only ten minutes to return a verdict for the defendant. Thus this bit of slang is labeled unparliamentary.

WITNESS OUT OF THE STATE.

SO LAWYER LADD MAY ESCAPE PROSECUTION.

District Attorney May Be Unable to Prove Charge That Public Document Was Altered Unless He Can Persuade a Client of the Defendant to Testify.

Attorney Charles Burton Ladd, better known as "Habeas Corpus" Ladd because of his propensity to institute habeas corpus proceedings upon the slightest opportunity, was again under prosecution in a charge of altering a public document.

Mary C. Bailey, widow of Franklin R. Bailey, the most important witness for the State, is missing from her home, No. 3922 Brighton avenue. A representative of the District Attorney's office, who called at that address yesterday, was informed that Mrs. Bailey has gone to her home in New Jersey.

There is no way of getting witnesses outside of the State to return here unless they do so of their own free will. Mrs. Bailey is apparently not anxious to prosecute Attorney Ladd, who was legal adviser for her in the settlement of her husband's estate.

Deputy District Attorney Veitch, who was assigned to prosecute Ladd upon the indictment returned against him, will use every legal means to get Mrs. Bailey to return here.

Her testimony before the grand jury cannot be used in a trial. Arrangements were made to take her testimony, but she slipped away, breaking her word to the representatives of the District Attorney.

Attorney Ladd was anxious to secure a speedy settlement of the Bailey estate. He asked Judge McCormick for an order setting aside the property to the widow. But when the judge glanced over the inventory he saw the estate was appraised at $2100. A court can only make such an order when the value of the estate is below $1500.

Shortly after, according to the allegations of the prosecution, Ladd went to the probate department and secured the papers. Later a clerk discovered that some alterations had been made, fixing the estate at $1100.

The matter was taken before the grand jury. It is understood that Ladd admitted making the changes in the interest of his client. It is believed that he said he was not aware he was violating any code provision.

THEATER MAGNATE STAGES "MOVIES"

DANIEL FROHMAN TO FILM "CAMILLE."

"Tess of the D'Urbervilles" With Mrs. Fiske in the Title Role Will Be Shown the Coming Week at Tally's—All the Great Stars of the Theater World Will Follow.

BY BONNIE GRESSIES.

With the announcement by T. J. Tally, owner of Tally's Broadway Theater, that he has closed contracts with the Famous Players Film Company for the exclusive rights to show the pictures of famous plays which it is making, one of the most interesting bits of motion picture gossip given out in many months is bared.

Realizing the great trend in the motion picture business has made to its well-filled coffers, the theatrical trust has at last come into the open prepared to wage war against the "movies" that have taken a steady stream of nickles and dimes away from legitimate drama.

Fighting with their own weapons the theatrical trust, headed by Daniel Frohman, has entered the field of the "canned drama," and armed with the greatest actors and actresses of the stage, it plans by the very magnitude of its productions to hold the small one reel concerns out of business. Whether the average picture audience prefers the big spectacular pictures of well-known plays and books to the pictures that have held them in the past, remains to be seen.

The first of the Famous Players films to be shown in Los Angeles will be, "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," in which Mrs. Fiske has the leading role.

"Tess of the D'Urbervilles" will be shown for the first time in Los Angeles at Tally's Broadway Theater next Monday afternoon, and will run for a week.

Each week a different play will be shown and these plays will be run exclusively at this theater. Such attractions as James O'Neil in "The Count of Monte Cristo," Mary Pickford in "The Bishop's Carriage" and "A Good Little Devil;" Mrs. Fiske in "Becky Sharp;" Lillian Lorraine, James K. Hackett, Henry E. Dixey, Julia Marlowe and many other of the world's famous players will be shown on the screen.

Thirty famous American plays will be brought here during the year, and in addition reproductions of the most noted European plays and operas produced by the celebrated Pathe Freres. The first of the foreign pictures to come will be, "The Fly Throthed," a remarkable six-reel version of Alexander Blasco's famous work. "I Promessi Sposi," with its beautiful Lake Como as a background, the scenic effects of this film must be marvelous.

Thus with pictures in the making of which no money has been spared and for which the scenic spots of the world have been chosen as the background, the theatrical trend hopes to win back the laurels, likewise the money, they have lost to the ever-popular "movie."

pearls, a heavily embroidered girdle and long court train. Lilies of the valley nestled in the tulle veil, which fell to the hem of her gown. Her bouquet was of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Florence E. Marlowe of Detroit, Mich., assisted as maid of honor. She was gowned in a creation of deep lavender crepe de chine and shadow lace made entrain. With this she wore an aigrette head-dress and carried an arm sheaf of fluffy yellow chrysanthemums, to which was attached a shower of yellow rosebuds.

The bridesmaids, Miss Hazel Landers and Miss Mabel Malafsey, were costumed alike in gowns of yellow peau de peache, with trimmings of shadow lace and chiffon rosebuds and made with short fish trains. They carried crooks topped with pale lavender orchids and twined with smilax. James S. Jarrott supported the groom. The ushers were A. Orlo Janes and Herbert E. Engstrom.

Miss Pearl I. Malafsey rendered an organ recital while the guests were assembling. The "Lohendrin Wedding March" announced the arrival of the bridal party.

An elaborate reception followed at the Smith home, Roxbury avenue. The living-room had been turned into a bower with white rosebuds, palms and ferns and a color scheme of lavender and yellow prevailed in the dining-room. A mound of yellow rosebuds adorned the center of the table, from which were festooned pale yellow satin ribbons to the favors which were tiny yellow baskets filled with lavender bon-bons. Place cards were hand painted suggestive of the occasion.

Following the reception, the young couple left on a tour of the State. They will be at home to friends after October 15, at No. 1816 Fourth avenue.

The bride, who formerly lived in London, Can., has made many friends during her residence in this city. The groom, a practicing public accountant here, is a native of London, England. He was educated at Woodhouse Grove, College, Yorkshire, and after making a tour of the world located in this city. Two hundred and fifty invitations were extended.

Mr. and Mrs. William S. Tebbetts of Alabama, who, with Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Bush of New Orleans, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gage of this city, will entertain informally Saturday evening with a dinner party at the Los Angeles Country Club.

Last evening former Gov. and Mrs. Henry T. Gage entertained with a family dinner at their ranch home at Downey.

From Mexico.

J. C. Elliott and family have returned from a ten-days' auto trip in the southern part of the State and Mexico and are now spending a week at Avalon.

Married Last Evening.

Mr. Byron Thomas Story, auditor of the Southern California Edison Company, was married to Mrs. Ida May Murray Downing at the First Christian Church at 8 o'clock last evening. The Rev. Russell Booker officiated. The wedding ceremony was performed with entire simplicity after the ritual of the Christian Church, and the bride, who was unattended, wore ivory crepe de chine trimmed with sprays of pink roses and old point lace. She carried a shower bouquet of Cecile Brunner roses and lilies of the valley. The decorations consisted of green palms, ferns and pink asters artistically distributed.

Mr. Story's brother, Seth J. Story, presided at the organ and rendered the "Lohengrin Wedding March" as the bridal couple entered, and as a postlude Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" was played. Mrs. J. E. Hall rendered vocally "I Love You." Messrs. P. H. Ducker and H. Ross served as ushers.

Mr. and Mrs. Story attempted to escape the congratulations of their friends, in which they were only partially successful, and left on their wedding tour directly after the ceremony. They will be at home after October 1st, at No. 3737 South Hope street.

Mr. and Mrs. Story received from the boys and girls of the Edison Company a set of Gorham table silver of the old French design.

MURDER AND MATRIMONY.

A Study in First Principles from Drama and Life.

BY HENRY CHRISTEEN WARNACK.

IT IS simply killing the way people marry. The stage is not to blame for its comedy or its tragedy when it touches these big subjects. Humanity is just as bad as it is painted and as absurd. It would be hard for a playwright to exaggerate man's crime or his folly.

People began to wed and slay a long time ago. They did not know what they were about then and they do not always understand now. The story of a marriage and one of a murder help to make the first records we have of man. Life has never been free of matrimony or murder since that lively start and it would hardly be interesting without both. If ever humanity abandons either, the result will be race suicide in fact.

It may be that Adam and Eve were not legally married, but their neighbors never talked about them. If theirs was a trial marriage they were, at least, not guilty of using it as an excuse for license, nor was it one of those hellish arrangements where a man offers to establish a woman and leaves her broken in a year to fling herself into some new despair while he devotes himself to a fresh illusion against the hour when he will be burned to a cinder without enough of his heart left to make a receptacle for his own ashes.

Some day we will have a great drama of that first marriage, with the murder of Abel at the red hand of Cain as the climax of a superb second act. Then we may understand a little better the furiously accurate relation and astounding intimacy of marriage and slaughter. It is futile to wish for what is not, yet I never think of the passing of William Vaughn Moody without being stirred by a deep regret. To my mind his poem on Eve is so vivid and primal that it held the promise of such drama as I am trying to indicate. It lifts the curtain of first things and reminds something which our decadence needs to learn afresh.

The law of the other man's wife is the pith of tragedy from the Old Testament to Shakespeare and from Dante to Pinero and Henry James. This law is as deep as heaven's dome and as the pit of hell. Passion out of place always spells death and we are blind fools not to read the lesson so long printed in blood. Such a law is obvious where it is a straight choice of open conduct, with death lurking in the trail of folly, and the logical drama and tragedy always make this point clear as the lightning's flash, but I doubt if we have yet struck the note on the stage which recognises that all prostitution is murder, that elopment is suicide and that sex irregularities are the signs of a long sickness. I do not find the play which takes into account the facts that sex is the blood of the soul and that it is not localized. Meanwhile, people continue to pour their magnetism out of their eyes and to scatter their forces with handclasps and dancing like pouring wine upon fresh-plowed earth.

Instances there are in plenty to prove the unwritten law. It has never been difficult for the builder of a play to show that when a man murders another for breaking up his home he proves himself an idealist by killing the thing that threatens his dream. In life, if not on the stage, he sometimes slays the woman as well. He loves her enough to destroy her rather than have his dream put to shame.

Oscar Wilde's Florentine Tragedy has an astounding grip because it links blood and passion after the manner of natural law. As simple and definite as murder is, it is nevertheless crude and imprudent as a general proposition. With the touch of the artist Wilde produces all the refinement of cruelty suggested by Kipling when he says, "Make 'im take 'er and keep 'er—that's hell for them both."

Of all the excellent, well-ordered murders I ever enjoyed I think the one in the "Florentine Tragedy" is the most pleasant and profitable. The woman thinks of her husband as commercial and has never taken the trouble to show him how beautiful she is. The man thinks her a pretty, silly thing bought by money and not worth winning by the passion of love. Enter the prince and a new order of facts is established. The prince comes for a light pleasure and the primitive instinct to protect his own property seizes the hunchback merchant with the hot fires that kill. First, he plays with his victim, spreading him a feast and pouring golden wine which he himself tastes not. Then in jest he exhibits a rusty old sword unsheathed for the first time since the slaughter of a common robber. That other thief also came in the night to take something at a price he never could pay and for which if a man does pay he has no profit. The robber always departs a bloody ghost, whether the killing is seen or not. The hunchback and the prince cross swords as if in jest and with exquisite pain the woman holds the lamp for the gruesome play.

The merchant strikes the sword from the hand of the prince, but does he kill him? Not yet. He has not punished the woman enough. He has the sign and seal of the executioner upon him, but he is not ready for the last blow until the woman has suffered a more poignant stab. He is clothed with the authority of death, like every wronged husband, and serene with this assurance, he proceeds to make a joyous feast of murder. The prince he provides with a new weapon, a dagger this time of wicked blade and short hilt. Another like it he takes for himself. Here we have the joy of close conflict, the madness of quick, hot breath of murder panting for its own close satisfaction. They grapple, sway and fall. The hands of the merchant close upon the throat of the prince with unrelenting grasp.

Through this latter conflict the woman stands in the dark, wracked in a hell of suspense. Her husband made the lips that would have quenched themselves with the kisses of the prince blow out the candles and the lamp that she might shrink and cringe with the hideous fear of doubt. When her soul is sick enough to make the death blow a fit climax for his vengeance and when he has baited the crawling, cringing prince to the verge of the last despair, he opens the final valve for the dissipated prince's spirit and lets what is left of it leak through a stab to the heart. Then he calls for a light that the woman may see her dead before she follows him—the dead that, in Wilde's own words in another place, dance with their dead, the dust that whirls with its dust.

At this satisfying climax life steps in to prove nature greater than death, and the mystery of woman is again justified. The woman does what all women do, she protects herself and her chance for children by choosing the victorious. It would have been so in either case, only she would have mated herself with the prince and both would have rotted. With the husband the victor, she evolves a fit courage of life that she may share his strength. One moment of fear would have been her destruction, but she feels no fear. She is too amazed to be afraid. She is astonished at her husband's strength and at the flame of his towering rage. She is lost in admiration for what she had never seen and did not remotely suspect. The blood of the prince is nothing to her except that it intensifies her desire to be possessed by the man who has cared enough to kill and who was strong enough to hold her at the point of dagger and sword. Because she could do this thing, her husband is able to see her as she is and they rush together that they may transform death into life.

I understand Wilde in this. I see that he has recognized the strange kinship of the two strongest natural instincts—to mate and to kill. Both stand for blood. Both spring from the tap-root of existence. Murder is marriage upside down. Marriage is constructive murder. It creates instead of destroys. The making and taking of life are so close that nothing but murder can ever protect marriage. We do not like to think of things as they are, but it is possible that the consequences of these two supreme incidents are not so vastly different, merely because their agreement is invisible.

At the risk of violence to all ideals, I dare not finish this without saying that I do not see how any man can marry a woman he does not love enough to kill and for whom he would not murder. I caution you to silence also in the face of a suicide pact between a man and woman. I warn you that this insanity of affection is none the less holy because seemingly out of natural order. Tread softly before them. They were mad with life, but they came amazingly close to that wondrous impulse which impels the world, which holds stars in their place—the blinding, staggering mystery and overwhelming urge which makes a rose and all the suns and which is eternally worthy of the last sacrifice.

MONROVIA ALSO.

MONROVIA, Sept. 17.—Superintendent of Schools Thompson decided today that the present weather is too hot for school and this afternoon dismissed classes in all departments of the grade and High School.

The schools opened this week with a total registration of 798, a gain of almost 100 students over the first day's figures of last year. The present indications point to a total enrollment of over a thousand pupils when the season is further advanced.

HIGH FINANCE LEADS TO JAIL.

ROOMING-HOUSE DEAL ENDS IN PURCHASER'S ARREST.

Prisoner Tendered Check Which Is Returned—Girl in Case Says She Was Promised Interest in Business and Produces Letter Proposing Marriage.

Wyckoff Burlingame, alias Jack West, who says his home is at Wilmington, Pa., is in the City Jail as a result of his efforts to buy a rooming house at No. 715 Merchant street.

Burlingame is said to have given a check for $813.75 to George Sibley in payment for the house. On receipt of his check Sibley gave possession three days ago, and Burlingame since that time is said to have collected rents and borrowed money from the roomers.

The check was presented for payment yesterday, but there was no money forthcoming. Sibley went back to the rooming house and told Burlingame.

The latter appeared astonished, insisted that he had $13,000 in the German American Bank, and requested permission to look at the check. On getting it he tore it in bits. He then proposed that Sibley go with him to the bank and get the cash, excused himself and disappeared. He was arrested late last night by Detective Zeigler.

In addition to the deception alleged to have ben practiced on Sibley, Burlingame is said to have employed Miss Bessie Andrews, who worked three days cleaning the house, with the alleged understanding she was to obtain a part interest in it.

She also received a letter alleged to have been written by Burlingame wherein he proposed marriage. Burlingame made no effort to deny the charges, his excuse being that his mother, who resides near Eighth street and Central avenue, wanted to buy a rooming house.

BIG FREIGHT SHIPMENTS.

Santa Fe Shows no Slackening of Business on Account of Other Depressions.

Depressed business conditions are not apparent from a statement issued by the Santa Fe traffic department showing that the total number of cars of revenue freight loaded on all lines of the system and received from connecting lines during August was 123,238, as compared with 119,833 for the same month of last year, an increase of 3233 cars, or about 3 per cent.

The compilation for the months shows the following handlings: Stock, 8746 cars; grain, 7333; lumber, 6886; perishable, 7007; oil, 6645; coal, 8689; other freight, 77,943 cars.

A decrease of 699 cars in the oil-handling is explained by the recent opening to "traffic" of the new pipe line from the Kern county fields over the mountains.

TO PURCHASE CARS.

Power to Issue Two Millions Is Granted Commission for New Car Equipment.

Authority has been granted the Southern Pacific by the State Railroad Commission, according to advices received yesterday at the commission's branch office here, to issue $2,010,000 of equipment trust certificates. These certificates will bear interest at the rate of 4½ per cent., and will mature serially for a period of ten years.

In sanctioning the certificate issue the commission claimed jurisdiction only over those certificates issued for equipment to be used within the confines of the State. The money to be derived from their sale will be used to purchase 148 all-steel passenger cars, 273 freight cars, ten locomotive tenders, and twenty electric street cars.

Cities and Towns South of Tehachepi's Top—Los Angeles County News

Pasadena.

OWNS MILLIONS BUT IS JAILED.

Couldn't Raise Twenty-five "Bones" for Bail.

Industrial District Soon to Become Reality.

Card of Welcome for Crown City's Guests.

PASADENA, Sept. 17.—H. W. Bailey of No. 315 South Orange Grove avenue, which street is known as Millionaires' Row, and who is one of the most prominent residents of the city, had the experience of passing last Tuesday night in jail in Los Angeles, where he was arrested for violation of the traffic ordinance.

Bailey was taken to the Police Station and there asked to furnish a bond of $25. He did not have that much money with him, and requested the use of the telephone to notify some of his friends and have them bring him the money.

He was unable to get into communication with the friends he wished to talk with, and was finally locked up in the jail. Yesterday he was fined $5.

No statement could be obtained from Bailey last night concerning his experience.

SETTING BOUNDARIES NOW.

The long-discussed industrial district is soon to become a reality. City Attorney Munger is now drafting a proposed ordinance, which will probably be submitted to the City Commission some time next week. It will determine the boundaries of the district and describe what kinds of manufacturing and other plants may be established within its confines.

The district will probably be bounded on the east by Marengo avenue and on the west by Raymond avenue, and it will lie to the south of Green street.

CITY BRIEFS.

The Board of Trade and Pasadena Merchants Association have united to issue a little card of welcome, which this winter will be mailed to all newcomers and visitors in the city. "Having noted your recent arrival," the notice begins, "the Pasadena Merchants Association and the Pasadena Board of Trade hasten to welcome you to our city and to express the hope that your stay will be most pleasant."

The petition of the policemen of the city for a day off each week has now found its way into the office of the City Attorney, who is investigating to see whether the State or the city determines the length of time that patrolmen shall be on duty each week. There has been some talk of offering them the alternative of working ten hours a day and enjoying one day of leisure each week, or continuing to work eight hours every day in the week. The police, on the other hand, declare that, salaries and time employed taken into consideration, they are not given the advantages that the police of other Southern California cities enjoy.

The Young Women's Christian Association announced yesterday that it will have a dramatice class this coming winter. Miss Marion Norris will be the instructor.

The personnel of the staff at the Hotel Huntington, which will open next December, was announced yesterday. D. M. Linnard will continue to be manager of the hotel. William G. Allen will be the assistant manager. Others who will be on the office staff are Frank Keating, E. A. Watson and E. P. Lee.

Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Gilmore of No. 345 North Catalina avenue were slightly bruised and cut, when late last Tuesday night an automobile in which they and Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Mendenhall were riding collided with Pacific Electric North Loop car No. 234. Mrs. Gilmore was driving the machine.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gerlach and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Shellhamer of this city returned home yesterday from a visit to Japan and China. They missed the bombardment of a Chinese town, where they were staying, by one day.

The enrollment of pupils at the Pasadena High School yesterday reach the 1500 mark. At the John Muir intermediate school, which is at the old High School building, 360 pupils have registered.

FIGHT NEAR REDLANDS.

Man Seriously Slashed in Dispute Over the Alleged Diversion of Water.

REDLANDS, Sept. 17.—As the result of an altercation between Dan Oliver and Byron Van Leuven, in which the latter was severely slashed, a complaint has been filed before Superior Judge Pitman of San Bernardino, charging Oliver with assault in an attempt to commit murder. Van Leuven was cut to such an extent that it took twenty-eight stitches to close his wounds when he was taken to the Loma Linda Hospital. Most of the wounds are on his abdomen and legs, and the end of one thumb was cut off.

The trouble occurred last Sunday at Redlands Junction. Van Leuven is a pioneer orange grower there. Oliver is employed by C. A. Puffer, a prominent orange grower of the Mission district. Puffer has bought some Mill Creek water, over the title of which there appears to be a dispute. The fight occurred when Van Leuven diverted the water after it had been turned in a ditch for carrying it to Puffer's grove, according to the report.

PROPOSED BONDS.

President Chubb of the local Chamber of Commerce and I. Ford went to Yucaipa this morning in response to an invitation to attend a meeting of Yucaipa residents to discuss the proposed bond issue of $1,500,000 for the building of roads in this county. The Yucaipa people wanted to improve and pave the present road between this city and Yucaipa, but a compromise was reached and it was tentatively agreed to make a connection with the proposed new road from this city to Beaumont instead.

The plan is to branch off the Beaumont road at the top of Reservoir Canyon and make a connection with the Yucaipa road at or near the eastern terminus of Sand Canyon. About a half mile of new road will have to be built, but the grade will be better and the route to Redlands shorter.

LONG BEACH AGAINST BONDS.

Series of Elections Being Held to Provide Funds for Public Utilities. Auditorium Defeated.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONG BEACH, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The proposition to issue $15,000 worth of bonds to build a reinforced-concrete auditorium was beaten decisively here today. In favor of the measure 1123 votes were cast, while 1509 were cast against it. This was the fourth in the series of bond elections.

Sewer and water system extension bonds were voted, the other project defeated being the Devil's Gate pier.

Tomorrow a $200,000 bond issue for a City Hall will be voted upon. On Friday a $60,000 issue for a picnic pavilion will be submitted to the people, and on Saturday the last election on the programme will be held, the project at stake that day being the issuance of $400,000 in bonds for the erection of what would be the biggest concrete horseshoe pier in the world.

HARDWARE DEALERS.

FRESNO, Sept. 17.—The California State Retail Hardware Dealers' Association is holding its second semi-annual convention in this city today about thirty-five delegates being present. The visitors were taken on an automobile trip this morning and at noon were banqueted at a local grill. President L. C. Walker of San Francisco, called the business meeting to order this afternoon. Papers were read by C. H. Williamson and W. G. Deal on the employers' liability law and discussion followed. Delegates will be the guests of local hardware merchants this evening and the session will close with another banquet tonight.

STABBER CAPTURED.

SAN BERNARDINO, Sept. 17.—Luis Alvarez, wanted in Los Angeles since July 6 for fatally stabbing two persons and injuring a third, was captured tonight at Chino and brought to the County Jail. He was working as a laborer at Chino, the officials having been tipped off as to his presence there by another Mexican. A posse composed of Under Sheriff Charles Ward and Deputies Amarias, Harry and Tebo made the arrest, surprising him where he was living. Los Angeles officers will come for him tomorrow. He is also wanted in San Diego and Phoenix for crimes.

Democrats Alienate More Votes.

[Washington Star:] John Skelton Williams, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, has forbidden women clerks to take handbags, purses or other sort of a carry-all into the money-counting rooms. This leaves no place but the stockings for a powder rag.

The stocking wouldn't be so bad, the women say, but there are men in the rooms. Besides, it's a man-made order, and men don't understand. More than 300 of the 800 women employees have signed a protest against it.

"This department has been going on for more than 100 years, and there never was such an order before," declared one woman. "It's awfully inconvenient. One's nose must be powdered ever so often."

The Bells of London.

[London Chronicle:] Other bells than those attached to churches used to disturb the slumbers of Londoners. Prior to the institution of watchmen, every parish had its bellman, who used to stalk the streets all night. At irregular intervals he would ring his bell loudly and cry out, "Take care of your fire and candle, be charitable to the poor and pray for the dead." If he met any malefactors, he rang unceasingly until the neighborhood was roused to his assistance. A copy of verses published in 1683 by Isaac Ragg, "Bellman in the parish of St. Giles-in-the-Fields," describes his duties as:

To see your doors and windows are all fast,
And that no villainy or foul crime be done
To you or yours in the absence of the sun.
If any base lurker I do meet,
In private alley or in open street,
You shall have warning by my timely call.

AUTO JOYSTERS UNDER CHARGE.

Detention Home Girls Accuse of Wrong Treatment.

Steal to Clandestine "Date" With Family Men.

Accused Mexican Is Freed of Murder Charge.

SAN BERNARDINO, Sept. 17.—Fred T. Hendee, a local automobile man, and [illegible] Greenleaf, a driver employed by Hendee, are under arrest facing a serious charge, that of contributing to the delinquency of two minor girls, Irene Fortin, aged 14, and Isabelle Dustin, aged 17, both inmates of the County Detention Home.

The men were arraigned this afternoon before Justice Pittman, and their bail fixed at $2000 on each of the two counts against the two men. Greenleaf is facing a charge of assault on the Dustin girl, and complicity in the charge against Hendee of having attempted an assault on the Fortin girl. In addition Hendee is charged with complicity in the case against Greenleaf.

The arrests followed a joy ride late last night after the Fortin girl had left the Detention Home, and called Hendee to meet her at a secluded spot. The machine soon after broke down and the girl walked back to the Home where she later confessed to having been out with Hendee.

It is said the probation officers have had the men under observation for some time. Both have families and both at times in the past have been connected with the local police force.

Both will secure bail and their liberty pending the preliminary hearings. It is said both girls have made damaging statements against the men.

SELF-DEFENSE.

P. Mauzanar, who was being held as the slayer of A. Macarry in a row among the Mexicans at Cucamonga several days ago, was today discharged by Justice Belden after the preliminary, the evidence having conclusively shown that he shot in self-defense after having tried his best to get Macarry to go home and avoid a quarrel. Mauzanar after the shooting himself notified the Sheriff and gave himself up.

TO USE THE CULLS.

W. Akers, representing Boston interests, is here with a view to establishing a large factory for making various products from oranges and lemons, it being the plan to utilize much of the cull fruit. He is planning on a plant to cost probably $100,000, which will employ a large number of hands six months out of the year.

HIGHWAY GOING WEST.

Work has been commenced on the State highway west from this city and within a few days it is expected the contractors will be throwing dirt at a live rate. Preliminary to the actual tearing up of the road surveyors are setting the grade stakes. This is the first of the State highway work out of this city. Contracts for the balance of the Foothill boulevard work will be let immediately.

VIOLATES PAROLE.

Smith Jones, paroled a month ago after having been sentenced to three years for passing worthless checks, must serve his sentence. He violated his parole, and was ordered sent to prison today by Judge Oster.

BITTEN BY RATTLER.

R. P. Spring is in the Ramona Hospital here suffering the effects of a rattlesnake bite. He is night Santa Fe operator at Summit, and enjoys gathering natural history specimens. He saw a snake which he mistook for a young gopher snake and picked it up to put in a box to keep for observation. He failed to notice the rattles, and when he touched the reptile it bit him on the hand. He first killed the snake, then applied first-aid remedies. He was rushed to the hospital here, and will probably recover.

POOR COLLECTOR.

H. J. Tanking, discharged a few days ago from the city police force, was arrested on a charge of disturbing the peace of G. W. Smith, a local money lender. Smith was trying to collect $140 alleged to be owing him by Tanking.

Chimney Sweeps Are Passing.

[Baltimore American:] In the royal palaces of England, the old-fashioned coal fires have been to a great extent retained, and their care requires the constant attention of chimney sweeps throughout the year. Thus, in Buckingham Palace alone, there are considerably over 400 chimneys, every one of which is duly numbered, while the chimneys of the royal kitchen at Buckingham Palace are swept regularly once a week by men who climb up the chimneys in the old-fashioned manner, their eyes blindfolded, and who do the work entirely by feeling. The King's chimney sweep says he finds it extremely difficult to get any boys willing to become apprentices, the result of their school education being that they insist upon a cleaner trade.

The chimney sweep, with his grimy habiliments, his sooty face, has been for centuries so familiar and picturesque a figure, alike in fiction and in actual life, that his disappearance will be regarded almost as much as that of some popular landmark. This is the case not only in the United Kingdom, but also on the continent

Good Time Now for Blood Health

Blood Disorders Gone to Stay.

A few doses of that wonderful blood purifier, S. S. S., will start activities in the cellular tissues of the body and soon show decided changes in the skin. The skin is but a fine network of tiny blood vessels, and the specific action of S. S. S. is declared to be a pronounced stimulation of the activity of these cells. Certain it is that in a surprisingly short time any skin eruption shows a most remarkable change; it begins to dry up; the skin scales off in tiny flecks, and soon a layer of clear, healthy and firm tissue results.

The reason for this is in the peculiar stimulation of S. S. S., which enables the cells in the skin to select from the blood the nutriment it requires for regeneration.

You can obtain S. S. S. at any well stocked drug store, if you insist upon it, but be sure you are not talked into something "just as good."

S. S. S. is prepared by the Swift Specific Co., 139 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Write for their illustrated book on skin diseases.

No More Gold Bricks.

[Saturday Evening Post:] The latest kink in gold smelting is to cast the gold in conical shapes instead of bars and bricks, with the express purpose of making it difficult for a thief to walk away with a cone. The cones are molded to almost any size, one measuring a foot or perhaps a foot and a half in diameter on the base. Such a shape is extremely unwieldy. Slings and tongs have been designed to facilitate handling them in the smelting works because they are so clumsy.

A thief provided with such a sling would have an embarrassing time getting away with a cone in contrast with the ease with which a bar or a brick may be covered up to give it an appearance that will not arouse suspicion.

Some slight advantages in molding have also been obtained by using this shape in the Arizona smelting works, where it has been adopted.

Hottest Day Yet.

been used as building material, the city could have had a crystal palace almost big enough to house the administration.

And this all according to statistics, for the 2000 ice-cream dispensaries here, according to the manufacturers, used up 50,000 quarts of frozen flavor.

Fifty thousand gallons of soda was sold.

And, at an average of 10 cents the drink, Los Angeles invested $75,000 in quenching that thirst which was quenched only by the non-intoxicating beverages.

Five thousand soda clerks here worked as they had never worked before.

And, on the basis of 300,000 servings, half of the city's population visited the cooling emporiums.

FORECAST IS "WARMER."

PASADENA, Sept. 18.—Yesterday was Pasadena's hottest day. The mercury rose to 102 degrees early in the afternoon. This is the highest temperature that has ever been recorded in the city. On August 29, 1909, the next warmest day, the maximum temperature was 106 degrees. Last Tuesday it was 105 degrees.

The forecast for today is for still warmer weather.

The unusual heat caused a general exodus from the city. Early in the day a procession of automobiles was headed for the seashore and the vanguard of the returning parade did not put in an appearance until late in the evening.

A party of laborers who were spreading hot asphalt in Oak Knoll, when asked by forest rangers if they would not go into the mountains to fight the forest fire in Tejunga Canyon, agreed that the work there couldn't be much worse than that they were doing and seriously considered the proposition. Most of the pavements of the city were soft and the soda water places and ice cream stores were crowded.

SAN DIEGO SWELTERS.

TWENTY-FIVE-YEAR MARK.

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 17.—San Diego today sweltered under the fiercest heat recorded in twenty-five years, the hot wave, which appears to be general throughout the State, being augmented by the wind blowing off the great brush fires to the north and east. The official figures give the temperature as recorded at the weather bureau in the Federal Building as follows: At 12 p.m., 78; 2 a.m., 74; 4 a.m., 82; 6 a.m., 75; 8 a.m., 85; 10 a.m., 100; 11 a.m., 107; 12 m., 102. The thermometer in the Plaza in the center of town registered 110 at 11 o'clock and at 2 o'clock went to 120 and refused to register higher. The saving feature was the fact that the humidity was the lowest ever recorded here, according to Weather Observer Nimmo standing at about 5 all day. Had the humidity advanced the heat would have become unbearable. At 11 o'clock all traffic officers were relieved from their positions and took up a stand on the shady but scarcely less heated corners.

Two prostrations, both of elderly persons, were reported, but these were more in the nature of collapse due to constitutional disease. By order of Duncan MacKinnon, Superintendent of Schools, all classes were dismissed at noon. Business was practically at a standstill after 1 o'clock.

ONTARIO ON LAWNS.

HEAT FROM DESERT.

ONTARIO, Sept. 17.—Last night was the warmest ever experienced in the history of this city, according to the statements of Ontario pioneers today. The minimum temperature registered was 79 degrees. This was about 9:45 p. m. At shortly after 10 o'clock a hot desert breeze shot the thermometer up to 90 degrees and it continued to hover between 89 and 90 for the remainder of the night.

Hundreds carried their beds to the lawns in front of their homes, but even there little relief was to be found. Old residents are firm in their declaration that never before in they known a desert wind to strike the city at this season of the year. The dry wind and the extreme heat is said to be damaging the late fruit crop, while truck farmers suffer great loss.

Today the thermometer registered a maximum heat of 103 degrees in the shade and what little breeze there is from the desert. Residents are looking forward to another disagreeable night.

SOUTH PASADENA.

COOL OFF IN BASEMENTS.

SOUTH PASADENA, Sept. 17.—On account of the intense heat, the city board called a meeting and ordered Superintendent Bush to dismiss the schools for the afternoon, and to call daily sessions from 8 to 12 until cooler weather prevails.

The majority of the residents spent the day in their basements.

WALNUT GROWERS ANXIOUS.

WHITTIER, Sept. 17.—Whittier had its first taste of really truly warm weather today, the mercury registering 106 in the afternoon. Usually tempered by the ocean breezes and protected from the hot winds from the west by the Puente hills not much temperature as was experienced here today causes the oldest inhabitants to take notice.

Walnut growers were placed in an anxious state for fear the extreme unusual temperature might hasten the proper ripening of the walnuts. Some days will be necessary to determine if there are any adverse effects of this kind. The local lighting company reported that the high temperature had slackened their wires to such an extent that considerable trouble had resulted. The night trouble force was on the job out afternoon running down and adjusting difficulties caused by slack wire.

COOLER WEATHER PREDICTED.

Heat Wave Extends from San Francisco South With Highest Temperature at Santa Ana.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 18.—Warmer weather than that of yesterday prevailed in some parts of the State, but temperatures generally were lower today. Along the coast from San Luis Obispo to San Francisco it was considerably warmer today than yesterday. In San Luis Obispo a temperature of 110 degs. was recorded; in Los Angeles 106 degs.; Santa Barbara, 104 degs.; South Riverside, 111 degs.; San Bernardino, 107 degs.; Riverside, 108 degs.; and San Diego, 110 degs.

In the Sacramento Valley the maximum temperature recorded today was 104 degs. It was 106 degs. in the San Joaquin Valley and 107 degs. in the Santa Clara Valley.

The forecast for tomorrow is for fair with probable fogs in the morning. Brisk west and south winds.

VALUABLE PAINTINGS BURN.

LORDSBURG, Sept. 17.—The only fire in this city in a year occurred today when the dwelling of A. Kloha, a two-story structure, was destroyed with its contents. The fire is supposed to have started from a defective stove. Paintings valued at $5000 and many valuable relics and heirlooms in the collection of a local man were burned. Insurance on the house and contents had lapsed only a few months ago.

ANGELENOS RESCUED.

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 17.—Lost in the Pacific, for two days without provisions, two Los Angeles men were picked up by the cruiser Birmingham this morning in the midst of the twenty-five miles south of the Coronado Islands. They gave their names as S. D. Pond and McGehee. They were turned over to the police boat at the entrance to the harbor. According to their accounts they sailed from San Pedro for San Diego and lost their way. They were out longer than they had expected it to be and their meager supply of provisions failed them.

Oxnard.

SERIES OF ACCIDENTS KILL TWO, INJURE ONE

OXNARD, Sept. 17.—Stanley Seymour, 4 years old, was killed at noon today by taking hold of a live wire carrying 2300 volts. His father heard his faint cry when the shock struck him and ran to him. The father grabbed the wire and the boy and narrowly escaped himself.

The shock knocked him down. He dragged the boy from the wire by his clothing. Friends found him running about crying for help, with his son's dead body in his arms.

When the brakes on his truck refused to work as he was bringing a five-ton load of pipe down the Conejo grade, Edward Telfer, driver for the Auto Security Company of Los Angeles, attempted to run the truck into the bank. It veered off and went on the side of the grade. Telfer was caught under the machine. He died in a few minutes after he was rescued by his companions.

Four other men riding on the pipe escaped uninjured. Telfer's last words were a warning to them to look out.

Joseph Scheil, 6 years old, son of a wealthy rancher near Conejo, was kicked by a colt and his leg was shattered. The bone on the other side was crushed to small pieces. Splinters of it entered the brain. He is conscious, although his condition is precarious.

Venice.

THOUSANDS LIE COOL ON SEASHORE SANDS

VENICE, Sept. 17.—No relief from the hot spell was found by the thousands who jammed Pacific Electric trains and autos to come to this beach until 8 o'clock tonight, when the temperature, which had been around the 100 mark all day, dropped fast in the face of a breeze from the ocean. At 10 o'clock the mercury registered 73 with indications that it would go lower.

Thousands slept on the sands, finding peaceful sleep under the stars with a gentle ocean breeze blowing. Chief of Police Lingo has lifted the ban on outdoor sleeping, and not only visitors from the interior but beach residents brought their blankets and pillows to the shore.

It was the hottest day since the birth of Venice and the starting of the meteorological bureau by the Kinney Company, the temperature reaching 102 at 1 o'clock. This was caused by the prevailing land breeze. The crowds, which came here in search of a cool breeze, disappointed, roamed from one spot to the other on the beach or went into the surf. The bath house reported the largest week-day business this year. Bath suits were used again and again without being dried.

POLICE INVESTIGATE

Police are investigating the burning of Dr. J. B. Sands's handsome home at Walgrove, on the Santa Monica road, this morning at 2 o'clock. The home had just been finished, and the physician was about to move in with his family. Dr. Sands believes the fire to have been of incendiary origin. The theory of the contractor is that the heat exploded oil-soaked rags used by the painters in part of the work according to the physician, for it is stated the house yesterday and found no rubbish of any kind.

PINE FIXTURES.

Ill nature is more a matter of healthy feet than any other cause, said Dr. T. J. Howell in a recent talk before the Pedic Society of Southern California, forty chiropodists being in attendance at the meeting at Hotel Alexandria this afternoon. It was declared that the world would be considerable better if people paid as much attention to their feet as their teeth. The pain of corns, bunions and pedic ailments were served a tempting luncheon at noon by the Misses Wells and Howell.

GROUND UP IN CRANK-PIT.

Engineer on Steamer Santa Barbara Who Wed Los Angeles Girl Meets Violent Death.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] William Swan, first assistant engineer of the steamer Santa Barbara, which arrived here this morning from Willapa harbor, met a violent death at sea yesterday. He was ground to pieces in the crank-pit in the engine-room of the vessel. The mangled body was taken off at the seawall, where the steamer put in this morning before proceeding to Oakland. Capt. Sadders of the Santa Barbara made an investigation of the accident. He said that from all he could learn, Swan, while working on the oil-covered floor in the engine-room, slipped and fell into the machinery.

Swan was alone in the engine-room at the time. The fireman, it is said, did not see the accident, and it was twenty minutes before it was discovered that the body of the engineer was in the machinery. The vessel was here for two hours.

Swan, who was 55 years old, recently married a Los Angeles girl twenty-four years younger than he. His shipmates say that he and his wife did not get along well, and that Swan had talked of suicide.

The accident—if it be an accident—will be investigated by the Coroner, a deputy being sent to the Oakland side this morning to get a detailed statement from the officers and the crew.

Capitalists of San Francisco Launch Corporation With Heavy Capitalization to Take Pictures of California Subjects and Supply Weekly Service in the East.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Thirteen millionaires of San Francisco and vicinity have formed the California Motion Picture Corporation, a $1,000,000 enterprise. Most of the directors live on the peninsula, and their magnificent country estates will be at the service of the company.

The idea was launched by Herbert Payne, capitalist, identified with the rich Payne Estate Company. Originally he intended to form a small company for exploiting San Mateo county, but other men were interested in the project and it was decided to go ahead on a mammoth scale.

California, particularly that section north of the Tehachepi, will be featured in twice or three times a week releases, for use all over the world. Particular attention will be given to depicting early pioneer history, although films dealing with a wide variety of subjects will be made.

Among the directors are Henry T. Scott, president Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company; R. P. Schwerin, vice-president and general manager Pacific Mail Steamship Company; Walter S. Martin of the Martin Estate Company, Thomas Magee of Thomas Magee & Sons, real estate; George Lewis, president Shreve & Co.; James Woods, manager St. Francis Hotel Company; Thomas A. Driscoll, director of Hibernian Bank; Baldwin Wood, attorney-at-law; Clarence Payne, president Payne Real Estate Company; Thomas R. Eastland, vice-president Coast Realty Company; A. M. Johnson, attorney-at-law; Robin Y. Hayne, capitalist.

Material for a studio to cost several thousand dollars, and to be erected on the 200-acre Payne estate of Menlo Park, one of the most fashionable society colonies of the Peninsular region, is on the way here from New York. In the meantime, films are being put out advertising California events by means of a weekly service at temporary laboratories in San Francisco.

"Our studio will cover the space of about a city block and will be up-to-date in every particular," said one of the directors today. "We will have a representative in Europe arranging for bookings, and will rush work of erecting the studio and securing the necessary company of actors and actresses so as to make our initial release before the first of the new year."

SETTLE UNDER ROSEBERRY ACT.

Nearly Thousand Hurt in California Industries Take Advantage of Roseberry Act.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 17.—Death or disability claimed 10485 victims employed in the industries of California during 1912, according to the annual report of the State Industrial Accident Board, filed today with the Governor. Of the 10,485 accidents reported, 412 resulted fatally and 534 accidents made permanent cripples of victims. The average impairment of physical power in the case of those permanently injured was 25 per cent. Two were totally disabled.

The number of persons temporarily disabled was 8631. These suffered injuries incapacitating them from one week to six months, but resulting in complete recovery. The physical impairment of these temporary injuries averaged 92 per cent.

The board's statistics show that thirty-five years was the average age of those killed in industry, while those permanently hurt averaged thirty-two years. The average age of temporary victims was thirty-four.

Of the total injured during the year 4311 received financial assistance. Nine hundred and twelve of these settlements were made under the Roseberry insurance law.

The board reports that 503 persons employing 45,000 men and women, accepted the compensation provisions of the Roseberry act between September, 1911 and December 31, 1912. Of the 503 acceptances only 24 were from public service corporations.

WIDNEY DENIES GIRL'S STORY.

Los Angeles Man Declares White Slavery Accusation Grows Out of Vivian Lyons's Shooting Case.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17.—Denying all of the statements made by Miss Noel Murphy, his former friend, A. B. Widney of Los Angeles, charged by the girl with a violation of one of the State white slave laws, accused her of perjury today when he took the stand in his own behalf at the preliminary examination. He stated emphatically that he never received money from her and that her story was made out of whole cloth for reasons which she knew best.

Judge Robert E. Widney, who is conducting his son's case, took the stand in the young man's defense today, told of his character and stated to Judge Shortall that the Murphy woman's charge was one of a long series of persecutions that had come since his other son, Robert E. Widney, Jr., was shot and seriously wounded several months ago while occupying the same living quarters with Vivian Lyons in this city.

Mary E. Vaughn, who has represented herself in the case as acting in the interests of a woman's political league, was charged by Judge Widney with having approached him for money in the case. He said that he gave her a note for $800, which she subsequently returned to him with a request for $5000.

Dist.-Atty. Charles M. Fickert announced in court that he would lay Judge Widney's story before the grand jury tomorrow night and ask for an indictment of the Vaughn woman.

Summons Three Socialist Street Speakers at Seattle to Purge Themselves of Contempt.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) Sept. 17.—Superior Judge John E. Humphries today cited Millard Price, Kate Sadler and Herman F. Titus, Socialist street speakers, to appear before him September 25 and show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of court.

The order was based on an affidavit of Attorney H. E. Foster, special prosecutor appointed by Humphries, which declares that Price, Titus and Mrs. Sadler called a public meeting in City Hall Park and advised their adherents, who would be affected by Judge Humphries's retaining order, against speaking at Fourth avenue and Pike street, to hold meetings.

WILD APPEAL LAND CASE.

Federal Judge Declares Alleged Frauds Should Be Investigated by Interior Department.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) Sept. 17.—Declaring that alleged land frauds should be investigated by the Interior Department rather than by the Department of Justice, Federal Judge Edward E. Cushman overruled today a motion of Charles F. Riddell, United States Attorney, asking that the court decree that fraud had been committed in connection with the acquisition by Stone and Webster of patents to valuable water power sites on the Nooksack River, Washington.

Riddell, who was acting under instructions from Washington, D. C., reserved an exception and intimated that an appeal would be taken to the higher court.

CAST THY BREAD UPON THE WATER.

It has been said that the rewards of life are automatic, and that the man who renders a service to society will have a service of equal value rendered to him.

From the standpoint of boosting Los Angeles, no better service can be performed than for each man and woman in the city to send to some out-of-town friend a copy of the "Pictorial History of the Aqueduct."

The 100 photographic reproductions of various parts of the Aqueduct contained in this book alone are worth several times its cost, and the historical sketch of this wonderful engineering project should be read by every patriotic citizen.

The author of the work, Captain Allen Kelly, has described the Aqueduct, which is the largest in the world, in simple, non-technical language, and he has woven about Los Angeles' master achievement, a very fascinating narrative.

The price of the book is 50 cents, and it can be purchased at The Times-Mirror Printing & Binding House, 118 South Broadway, The New Times Building, First and Broadway, The Times Branch Office, 619 South Spring St., and all other book stores.

Nerve Up to Date.

TWO ENGINES WRECKED TO AMUSE THE PEOPLE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 17.—Thirty thousand people were attracted to the State fair grounds today to see the widely advertised head-on collision between two locomotives. Traveling at an estimated speed of twenty-five miles an hour, the sixty-ton locomotives crashed together almost directly in front of the grand stand and afforded the vast throng which packed the stands and overflowed to the infield of the race track, a thrill many will not soon forget.

The engines were started from opposite ends of the enclosure and the engineers jumped. With whistles blowing they came together with a boom. One up-ended partially after tearing its way into the boiler of the other.

The strain of waiting all afternoon in the heat to see the attraction was intensified to such an extent during the minute the locomotives were rushing toward each other that several people collapsed. Despite the curious hundreds who insisted on viewing the collision from a close point of vantage, no one was injured.

More than 3000 automobiles were checked through the gate today and hundreds were denied admittance.

SANTA CLARA BEAUTY MISSING.

WAS MAID OF HONOR TO QUEEN AT RECENT CELEBRATION.

Town and County Officers Begin a State-Wide Search for Gertrude Bettencourt, Who Left on Late Train Tuesday for San Francisco With an Unknown Woman.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN JOSE, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Gertrude Bettencourt of Santa Clara is missing, and town and county officers today began a State-wide search for her, after exhausting every clew which could be furnished in the mission town. Tonight Constable George Lyle worked on the theory that a girl who left on a late train Tuesday afternoon for San Francisco with an unknown woman was Gertrude Bettencourt. He believes that a white slaver may have met the girl on the street and persuaded her to leave town.

Miss Bettencourt is a Santa Clara beauty. She was maid of honor to the queen at the Portuguese celebration held last June and, although she is but 15 years old, appears to be two or three years older.

Yesterday afternoon she returned from school and changed her clothing for second best. Then she went to a grocery store to make some purchases for her mother. Acquaintances saw her in front of the store, but there is none who remembers having seen her since.

Several clews were run down today. One was that she had been taken into an automobile by two men. This proved to have been built on another episode.

The girl wore a lightweight white serge skirt with a white middy blouse trimmed with blue. She had white shoes and did not wear a hat. Her mother and father are frantic with anxiety.

ASTRONOMER DISPIRITED.

And All Because Oakland Is So Well Lighted He Cannot Photograph the Heavens.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The science of astronomy and the progress of Oakland are at outs. Prof. Charles H. Burkhalter, observer at Chabot Observatory, is sad and dispirited.

The reason for it all is the large number of new lights in the business section of the city, the bright arc lights in the tower of the City Hall, especially, and the large number of electric display signs on the downtown streets. All these combine to light up the sky so brightly that Burkhalter no longer is able to make telescopic photographs of the heavens.

The work of making these photos for slide purposes, to be used in lectures in astronomy at the State University and other seats of learning, has occupied most of Burkhalter's time for years.

READING TAKES SHARP UPTURN.

RISE FOLLOWS BIG JUMP IN THE LONDON MARKET.

Union Pacific, Seaboard Issues, Great Northern and Petroleum Stocks Share in the Increase While New Haven Touches New Low Record, Yielding Two Points.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The spectacular performance of Reading stood out conspicuously today in the stock market, which otherwise displayed little animation. The rise before the opening here of over 3 points in London following the sharp upturn in the market recently caused active speculation in the stock. The first transaction was a block of 12,000 shares at 170¾ to 170¾. The highest figure of the year, a total over 10 points above last week's low, and a gain on the day of 7 points. Then the price fell back a point, and trading grew quieter. The general market was affected unfavorably by these greatness. It was said that Reading's rise was expected mainly a result of the dividend action. Following a little evidence of great public interest put out concerning increased business. When Saturday is Reading, command increased proportions there was a corresponding improvement in the tone of the market. Union Pacific, the dividend issues, Great Northern Ore, and the petroleum stocks led in the rise, with some shorting of Reading. Contrary to the expectations in the announcement that only the regular dividend had been declared by the Reading directors, the stock sold what was left of the day's sale, and some other were left behind shares were especially heavy, and the collateral loans on Reading. Northern Pacific touched a new low record during the day, yielding over 2 points, to 97¾. Wheat money was in demand at 7@7½ per cent. Time loans, firm; sixty days, rising to 5¼ per cent. Bonds were steady. Total sales, par value, were $1,500,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call.

Reading Proves Feature of Trading. Market Is Influenced by Talk of Gold Imports.

[Furnished by Logan & Bryan, Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges, Bradbury building, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The Evening Post in its financial review today said: "The stock market situation today was influenced by the talk of gold imports, a possible increase in the Reading dividend and the time-worn stories touching on Union Pacific's probable generosity toward its stockholders. None of these factors was important enough to cause any violent price changes, but the market displayed a good deal of strength, following a moderate movement, soon after opening. Reading was easily the feature again, 'ruling' active and strong throughout the day under the influence of heavy buying by speculators. The rest of the market moved up and down, but the tone most of the time was strong, with moderate buying of the standard shares. The movement continued largely professional and although there was a little investment buying of the seasoned dividend paying stocks, this inquiry was insignificant compared with the order given by professional operators.

"Resumption of the hearing by the Massachusetts Public Service Commission touching New Haven's $37,552,000 bond issue gave rise to further rumors, most of which were unfounded, concerning the financial status of that company, and the complications which might follow rejection of the road's proposal. The stock was weak again, but the movement was not important enough to suggest liquidation by actual holders.

"On fairly heavy selling the market declined sharply in the last hour, many shares reacting below the level of yesterday. This movement was general and affected Reading, Union Pacific, Steel and all the active issues. The feature of the decline, however, was the heavy selling of Rock Island issues which were offered steadily during the day. The preferred shares declined nearly 5 points, while the common lost 2 points. There were various rumors circulated to explain the movement, but none of the stories was verified. In the final trading the market became a trifle more quiet, and except for the large offerings of Rock Island, there was no general unloading of any shares.

"Reading reacted nearly 2 points from the high level of the day after the traders made sure of the fact that no action will take place with reference to increasing the dividend. The Southboard Air Line issues were strong features, being well taken during the period when the rest of the market was weak.

"The market abroad was irregular, but generally cheerful in tone. So far as the gold import rumors were concerned, nothing developed to suggest actual engagements in the immediate future."

New York Cotton Market.

[Furnished by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, 115 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—In response to the most bullish cables of the season, the market opened at about $1 per bale up and held the advance practically throughout the session. Liverpool reported European trade buying, and said that the bear party there had given up the fight, and were covering freely. A better demand for "actual" was reported from the South, and crop advices were decidedly less favorable in the central belt, with Texas wires stating that damage from rain and high winds had been underestimated. It hardly seems conservative to bull prices just as marketing is coming to its heaviest stage, but the tone is good. The prospective supply and demand position is strong, and the long side appears to have the best of the argument.

Consolidated Mines Shows Strength on News of Good Clean-up—Union Oil Stronger.

With the exception of a good show of strength in Consolidated Mines, the market was rather featureless and less active yesterday. The clean-up of the Consolidated Mines for the month of August yielded 179 ounces of gold, from about seventy tons of ore treated, it is stated, and this was the principal cause ascribed for the advance. Shares traded in aggregated 19,000.

In the industrials, U.S.L.D.T.A.T. was stronger. Twenty-five shares of Home Telephone preferred went at $21.

FUSSINESS IN MEN.

One Would Not Allow a Barber to Mix the Hair Cut From His Head With That From Others.

[Pittsburgh Press:] A big, blonde man aboard one of the ocean liners in New York Harbor the other day kicked up a ferocious row because the ship's barber by accident had mixed his hair cuttings with those of a man whose locks were dark. Bloody had told the barber he wanted the cuttings saved, to go into baseball gloves for the children, but an assistant blundered and the red hairs got mixed with the black, which so enraged him that he kept the boat in an uproar for an hour and wasn't appeased until the barber had promised to have the mixed hairs separate, one by one. He was too angry to explain why black hairs wouldn't make quite as good glove stuffing as red. Perhaps he thought the family heirs wouldn't be happy without family hairs. But you know the type—fussy, quick-tempered, irritable, utterly lacking in a sense of humor; no more fun in them than in a vitrified brick. Aren't they nuisances, though, when traveling? One who was seen recently on a train berating the conductor for minus, because politely told that he couldn't on one ticket occupy an entire seat when women were standing. Nothing but the conductor's being a kindly and patient soul prevented that passenger from being hoisted on a boot toe and deposited with the other brambles alongside the track.

Performs a World Service.

[Indianapolis News:] Out in the wilds of Norway there is a man to whom the world owes its gratitude, yet the world withholds its thanks in complete ignorance of its obligation. Close to the old Angvaldraes Church, on Karmeon Island, there is a stone pillar about twenty-five feet high, called "the Virgin Mary's needle." It leans toward the church, and tradition has it that when the toppling tower touches the church the world will come to an end. This is where the local pastor comes to the rescue. When the pillar topples a little more, or seems to the good man to topple a little more toward the building, he climbs up and chisels a bit off.

Ocean Greyhound.

NEW TRADE LANE TO THE PACIFIC.

THIRTEEN BIG SHIPS TO FLOW WAY TO THE COAST.

Contracts Closed for Passage Through Canal and Dockage Here and in San Francisco—Shipping Men Pleased With Proposed Facilities of Our Harbor and Trade.

Thirteen greyhounds of the deep will be threading the Panama Canal on a new trade from European to Pacific Coast ports following the opening of the Panama Canal, according to positive word brought here yesterday from San Francisco by D. F. Robertson, who went north last week for consultation with E. J. M. Nash, American representative of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company.

The fleet will be made up of nine vessels of 16,000 tons each, to be operated by the Royal Mail from London; two of 18,000 tons each, to be operated by the North German Lloyd from Bremen, and two of uncertain tonnage, to be operated from Hamburg by the Hamburg-American line. Two of the Royal Mail's fleet are now building at the Cramp yards at Philadelphia; the others are building at Belfast and Glasgow. The fabricating of the German boats is, of course, taking place in German yards.

"Nash closed all arrangements in San Francisco last week for dockage and other facilities for the Royal Mail," said Robertson. "This makes this fleet a certainty. The Germans closed negotiations some time ago.

"The coming of these vessels into this harbor depends on whether or not we are willing to put up freight and passenger guarantees," continued Robertson. "At least that is what Nash told me. He has seen our harbor and he knows conditions and tonnage possibilities, but, as he pointed out, it costs money to stop these big boats, and his company wishes to be assured that it will be a paying proposition."

The proposed route of these vessels, according to Robertson, will be via the Azores and the South Atlantic lane to the West Indies, then to the canal entrance and on up the Coast.

CHILI PEPPER CROP.

Garden Grove Ships Large Amount of Hot Stuff Besides Beans, Tomatoes and Beets.

GARDEN GROVE, Sept. 16.—All previous records for shipments of produce over the Pacific Electric lines have just been broken in the sending out in one day of fourteen cars of chili peppers, tomatoes and sugar beets. The beets went to the Santa Ana factories while the other produce went to the Los Angeles markets. The bean crop is only fair, owing to the heated term as the crop was maturing.

A new chili pepper dryer is being pushed to completion. There are two buildings, each 40x100 feet in dimension, which will be used for handling produce and drying peppers for the market. The plant will cost $7000 and will be completed by October 1, and in time to handle the immense crop in this section. Frank Mills and W. Mitchell are at the head of the enterprise.

Would Discount Notes.

An application to issue $250,000 in notes with a maximum maturity of eighteen months has been made to the State Railroad Commission by the Tulare County Power Company. The commission is also asked to permit a $50,000 discount of these notes.

Red Metal.

COPPER MARKET DAILY REVIEW.

LONDON, NEW YORK AND BOSTON QUOTATIONS.

Metal Market Shows Easier Feeling at Home and Abroad—Phelps-Dodge Copper Properties Produce Over Hundred Million Pounds in Eight Months—Record Output.

London copper opened easy with spots at £74 12s 6d, off 5s 6d, and futures at £74 2s 6d, off 2s. The opened weak with spots at £1295, off 5, and futures at £1295, off £1. Lead opened at £20 12s 6d, up 5s 6d. Copper closed quiet with spots at £74 15s 6d, off 1s 5d, and futures at £74 7s 6d, off 1s 5d. The closed quiet with spots at £1295 10s, off 5s, and futures at £1297 10s, off 5s. Spelter closed at £21 5s, unchanged.

Trade in New York copper was sluggish. There were no transactions. The tone was easy with spot at 42.00@42.75; lead, 4.70 bid, and spelter at 5.75@5.85.

The Boston News Bureau recently stated that approximately $300,000 bonds was all that stockholders of Consolidated Corporation Company subscribed for at par of $3,000,000 offered. Attention was at the time called to the fact that this amount was just about sufficient to meet floating debts of constituent companies. Upon a recent visit to New York one of the prime movers in the formation of this company, which took over eleven, expressed dissatisfaction with this statement insofar as it did not point out that sufficient working capital had been pledged to carry on development work on a larger scale than heretofore. It is understood that $1,000,000 has been guaranteed the Consolidated Company by some of its directors and large stockholders, who will take as security for this loan some of the company's 6 per cent. bonds.

For the first time on record the Phelps-Dodge & Co. copper properties have exceeded 100,000,000 pounds production in an eight-months' period. The total to September 1 was 100,790,648 pounds, a gain of about 11,000,000 pounds over the corresponding period last year. This increase has been due entirely to better returns from the company's own mines. In the face of Montana troubles the Shannon mine has turned out a new high-record total, although the aggregate gain for that period was due chiefly to Copper Queen's good improvement.

The value and quality production has run ahead of tonnage yield, due to the enlargement of the mill at the Nichols plant, which reduces all of this product. Many of the copper was destined "forward out" to other refineries during the trouble, but the normal monthly output has not been so yet regained.

The recent stripping in Cananea Consolidated to 77½, a rise of 20½ points from the year's low point (it sold at low as 39 last year,) reflects the expectation that within a very few months the company will be in position to show earnings at the rate of between $15 and $20 per share. If present anticipations are realized, the company on January 1 should begin to distribute from new profits from properties at the rate of $6,000,000 annually, thus practically doubling the stockholder's present income. Against this new output the high wage is satisfactory that the company felt justified in writing off $3,000,000 to depreciation.

Under the management of Frank M. Leland the Bakkiala copper property of the First National Copper Company has been making preparations to resume operations after a two years' shutdown. This will be possible, it is expected, through the installation of the Hall furnace for the smelting of smaller fumes. Against these fumes the farmers of Shasta county, Cal., have been fighting for years. A practical demonstration of the Hall installation may be looked for daily as representatives of the eastern management have gone West to be present at the try-out. Fumes for the New York mine of the company has not been advised of any test run, but it is expected that the smelter will shortly blow in part capacity.

...only capital charge is $1,800,000 6 per cent. convertible bonds, exchangeable into stock at par, $100, the balance of the sums necessary to make this big improvement is to be provided from earnings. At the present time Granby has outstanding only 152,000 shares, and for the year ended June 30 showed profits of practically $9 per share, or $1,367,981. This was on a copper market which averaged the company not far from 16½ cents. The new Hall Creek mine, on a 17-cent copper market, when given time to open up to full efficiency, should produce annual earnings of $1,368,000, or $10 per share. It requires no stretch of the imagination therefore to figure prospective Granby earnings of $20 per share. In the newly-acquired property Granby has blocked out between 8,000,000 and 9,000,000 tons of ore, in sufficient to last between ten and fifteen years, with the smaller treating 2000 tons per day. Granby has "come back" in no uncertain fashion. To make good the sudden descent of declining ore reserves as its Grand Forks (British Columbia) mine, it started at once to secure another mine, and in acquiring the Hidden Creek it has secured a property far more valuable than the original property.

The 4.13 per cent. on the common earned by American Smelting and Refining in first half of this year, compared with 4.76 per cent. for the same six months in 1912, would indicate that 1913 might reasonably be expected to show the common 4 per cent. dividend earned twice over. Smelters earned 4.76 per cent. on its common in first six months of last year, but the whole year showed 11.47 per cent. That Smelters earned its common dividend in first half of its fiscal year would seem to be the answer to rumors of possible dividend reductions. Supporting this notion is the clear that earnings have been maintained with no little falling off that year in spite of Mexican troubles, and that this was possible because heavy expenditures on properties and developments in this connection have been charged to Profit and Loss. The same depreciation item in the common would show for the year 6 per cent., or at rate of about 6½ per cent. for present half year. Smelters is also making expenditures, Safe Harbor is reported to make depreciation a variable quantity, adjusting same and contracting with good and evil winds of trade. In 1913 extraordinary expenditures have been made at Tacoma, Selby and Perth Amboy, and it is expected that the charges will be considerably reduced in the last half of the year.

Boston Copper Market.

[Furnished by Logan & Bryan, Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges, Stephens Bldg., Los Angeles.]

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—With no news to account for it, there was more liquidation today. This was especially true in the New York market, where the transactions were very heavy. The close was comparatively weak in all branches, both in the face of the decline in New York and the local market acted very well. Shannon, Lake, Old Dominion, Arizona Commercial and Shattuck showed advances, while East Butte, Greenly, North Butte and Range were fractionally lower. There was no change in the metal situation. The price was apparently firmly established at 17 cents.

New York Curb Stocks.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Curb stocks were irregular. United Cigar Stores and British-American Tobacco were under pressure. Cigar Store dropped, though 90. Butte & New York was exceptionally strong. Coppers were steady. Tonopahs sold off. Ohio Copper rose to 2½@2¾. Boston Coppers opened with a good tone, owing to the improved metal condition in this quarter. All sellers have advanced the price to 1 point. Prices not much changed after the early trading. On the rise of the forenoon selling was slow. Butte & Butte advanced to 37½, only to lose the afternoon. Just before the close the market sagged sharply.

Company Claims Loss.

Application has been made to the State Railroad Commission by the Glendale and Eagle Rock Railway Company for permission to discontinue the sale of twenty-ride commutation tickets between the two terminals of the line. The plea is that these tickets, which are sold for 50 cents, are a source of loss to the company. The hearing is set for 1 p.m. Tuesday, before Commissioner Loveland, sitting in the Supreme Court rooms in the Bullard building.

The Times is the only newspaper in Los Angeles that does not make a practice of publishing separate, newsboys and dealers' returns (small copies of its issues). Neither does it misbrand or predate its editions, or indulge its circulation by printing more copies than are actually necessary to supply the patronage.

The Times' entire circulation is practically net, and it is more genuine and superior in every respect to that of any other newspaper in Los Angeles.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The Southern Pacific has succeeded in getting from the City Treasury the $40,000 held up by City Auditor Myers in the hope that the railroad could be made to pay the difference between its rate on aqueduct steel and the rate made by the Santa Fe but withdrawn before it was officially accepted. The City Attorney has held that there is not sufficient legal ground for the city to stand upon, although he admits Myer's contention that there rests upon the Espee an "implied moral obligation."

The Public Utilities Committee of the City Council announced yesterday that it will confer within a few days with representatives of the power companies to finally determine whether they will sell or lease to the city their distributing systems.

San Pedro property owners yesterday petitioned for the formation of a large sewer district that will provide sewers for every lot south of Fifth street at the harbor.

The City Council yesterday denied a turn-out track permit on Washington street for the Los Angeles Railway Corporation, thus putting a quietus on the plans for establishing car barns on that thoroughfare between Reed street and Pacific avenue.

The Public Utilities Committee of the Council will have a hearing tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock on the petitions for delay on the Arcade Depot project until elimination of grade crossing plans are adopted.

The mother of one of the principal witnesses for the prosecution fainted yesterday during the empaneling of the jury in the Bixby contributing trial.

At the City Hall.

ESPEE GETS ITS HELD-UP MONEY

CITY ATTORNEY CANNOT FIND SUFFICIENT LEGAL BASIS.

Auditor Reluctantly Relinquishes Forty Thousand Dollars Retained Pending Decision as to Municipality's Prospects Should Case Go Into Court.

The Southern Pacific has at last secured from the city treasury and tucked safely into its strong box a cool $40,000, over which it worried quite a bit before the money was in its hands.

This $40,000 represents the payment for freight hauls on aqueduct steel, which were withheld by City Auditor Myers for many months, while he sought for legal methods to compel the Espee to make its freight rate on this class of materials meet the offer made by the Santa Fe company, but which was withdrawn before the Board of Public Works gave it official acceptance.

The story is old, but briefly stated it is to the effect that when the Southern Pacific bid on hauling the aqueduct steel it offered to meet any rate that was made on such a haul. Then the Santa Fe made its offer, which would have amounted to a difference of about $40,000 on the total amount of such freight to be hauled to the desert. The withdrawal of the Santa Fe's offer before its final acceptance is the point on which the question hinged as to whether the Espee could be made to meet the Santa Fe rate.

Myers held up freight bills, pending a decision as to the city's attitude on the subject, until such a time as they accumulated to an amount approximating the difference in the two rates on the total bulk to be hauled, and appealed to the City Attorney.

The City Attorney held that there is not sufficient legal grounds on which the city might stand in a test case at court, although he admits the contention of Myers that there is a "moral obligation implied."

The result is that the City Auditor has been compelled reluctantly to deliver the warrants for the freight bills and the city has paid for aqueduct steel hauling $40,000 more than it might have paid had the Board of Public Works taken speedy action in closing with the Santa Fe's offer of a lower rate.

NEW POLICY.
PRECEDENT ESTABLISHED.

Hereafter the Board of Public Works will allow full salary to the employees of its department or those coming under its jurisdiction when such employe is sick or meets with an accident that incapacitates him for labor. Heretofore employees have lost their pay when they met with accident, unless some special allowance was made to meet their cases.

The new policy was decided upon yesterday, when three applications for relief were before the board. One of these was from A. Jackson, a street sweeper, who had his collarbone broken while at work on the streets July 10; another case was that of R. E. McCall, a steam-roller engineer, who was injured while on duty on August 13, and the third case was that of William Short, a sewer maintenance man, who was struck by a wagon of the East Side Brewery. The two former were allowed full pay while unable to work, but as the brewery has paid Short $235 as an offset for his lost time and his injuries, the board decided it would not make an allowance, the payment amounting to more than Short's regular salary would have totaled for the time lost.

Commissioners Handley and O'Brien agreed that hereafter the policy outlined above will be followed.

APPLICATION DENIED.
CAR BARN PROJECT KILLED.

A great storm of applause broke out in the Council chamber yesterday when the Council voted unanimously to deny the application of the Los Angeles Railway Corporation for a turn-out track on Washington street, between Reed street and Pacific avenue. The acquirement of this privilege was precident to the proposed establishment of car barns on the Foy property occupying almost an entire block, and this was strenuously opposed by the residents of the vicinity. They were present in large numbers, and were headed by officers of the West Washington Improvement Association, with Herber Goudge as their spokesman.

While many of the protestants were primed with speeches, the Councilmen began to express their condemnation of the car barn project for Washington street before they had the opportunity to deliver their addresses, and a unanimous vote to deny the application speedily settled the subject.

STATION PROTESTS.
ALL GO TO COMMITTEE.

The City Council yesterday referred to the Public Utilities Committee the various petitions and resolutions from clubs and civic organizations asking for delay on the Arcade Station project until such time as a comprehensive plan for elimination of grade crossings, or elevation of tracks, on Alameda street is adopted.

This committee will meet at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. It is probable that a large delegation, representing many organizations, will be present at that time to urge delay until the movement for better crossing conditions is worked out.

Must Have Safety Clutches.

The protest of the People's Welfare Committee against allowing the Angels' Flight Incline Railway to resume operation without safety clutches being attached to the cars was before the City Council yesterday, and was referred to the Public Utilities Committee for consideration tomorrow morning.

Councilmen expressed surprise that the safety clutches have not been provided, and Councilman Snowden declared: "We must insist upon the use of safety clutches. This is a serious matter and we cannot afford to overlook it."

Subway for Employees.

The City Attorney was directed by the Council yesterday to prepare an ordinance granting to the Southern Pacific Company the right to construct and maintain a subway in Alhambra avenue, to connect the street with the railroad yards and shops, so as to allow employees to pass underneath the tracks, where constant movement of engines and trains is in progress.

Indorses "Clean-Up Day."

The Fire Commission yesterday indorsed the proposition of the Southern California Editorial Association's Fire-Prevention Committee to announce a general "clean-up" day for Southern California cities. The Fire Commission will co-operate in every possible way in this movement to eliminate fire hazards.

Week's Fire Losses.

The estimate of the Fire Chief of loss by fires for the past week, as reported to the Fire Commission yesterday, was $17,015. The total number of fire alarms turned in was sixty-three, of which nine were false alarms. There were nineteen grass fires and there were sixteen fires in which the loss was merely nominal.

Want an Understanding.

Either during the last days of this week, or early next week, the Public Service Committee of the City Council will confer with representatives of the power plants on the question of their selling to the city their distributing systems.

Council Betkouski, who was a member of the committee appointed by the old City Council to negotiate with the power companies, said yesterday that the forthcoming conference would be final, insofar as any attempt on the part of Councilmen to negotiate with the power companies is concerned, and that the Council committee proposes to learn definitely whether the power companies will sell or lease their plants to the city. A clear understanding of the situation is desired before further steps are taken towards the proposed bond election for next November.

Natural Gas Hearing.

The Board of Public Utilities has set tomorrow at 2 o'clock for the hearing on natural gas situation, as requested by the City Council. Representatives of the gas companies have been requested to be present at this hearing.

Fertilizer—No Smell.

The Pioneer Boiler and Machine Works yesterday filed with the City Clerk a request to the Council asking for permission to establish and operate for not exceeding six months and for experimental purposes a mechanical dryer for the reduction of animal offal and other nitrogenous substances to commercial fertilizer. The company undertakes to forestall objections by declaring that there will be no odor arise from the drier. The site of the plant is No. 1153 Palmetto street.

Large Sewer District.

San Pedro property owners yesterday filed with the City Clerk a petition asking for the establishment of a sewer district bounded by Fifth street, Gaffey street, Nineteenth street, the United States Government Reservation, Hamilton avenue, Leland street and the westerly city boundary, to connect with the Santa Cruz-street sewer system on the north and the Point Firmin district sewer system on the south, so that every San Pedro lot south of Fifth street shall be sewered.

CORRIDOR GOSSIP.
MINOR CITY HALL NEWS.

The Public Safety Committee of the Council recommended yesterday that the applications of the Clark Hotel for permission to build a marquee over the sidewalk on Hill street to the curb line and asking for changes regarding fire escape provisions as applied to that building, be denied.

Francis J. Haley was appointed by Mayor Rose yesterday to a place on the Humane Animal Commission made vacant by the expiration of the term of James Calderwood.

The Public Safety Committee has decided to postpone further hearing on the ordinance proposed to regulate the use of sidewalks by merchants in handling their goods, until Wednesday, October 1, or as soon thereafter as Councilman Snowden returns from his vacation, if he is not here on that date. Snowden will leave next week for a trip to Oregon.

The City Council yesterday unanimously decided to purchase for its exclusive use a Pierce-Arrow six-cylinder, seven-passenger automobile. The car is to cost the city $5210.20. The Council has also authorized the purchase of seven Ford automobiles at a total cost of about $4000.

A penny apiece from the three members of the Board of Public Works will assuage the grief of M. Rabmovitz of No. 1139 Angeleno street. Rabmovitz dropped three pennies into a slot machine at Second and Broadway yesterday and failed to get ice water. He appealed to the board for restitution.

HELD TO ANSWER.

Justice Forbes held H. L. Johnson to answer to the Superior Court yesterday on a charge of driving an automobile while in an intoxicated condition. Earl Rogers, his attorney, decided to withhold evidence for the defense until the case comes up before a jury in the higher court. The evidence showed the defendant's machine collided with another automobile on Washington boulevard. The police made an investigation at the time. The arrest followed later.

LOOK INTO MARKETS.

Chief Deputy District Attorney Ford was asked yesterday to make an investigation of the charge alleged to have been made by farmers that hucksters have entered into a combination with commission men to temporarily cut prices so as to drive the producers out of the markets.

At the Courthouse.

JURY IMPANELED; MOTHER FAINTS.

BIXBY TRIAL TO BE OPEN TO THE CURIOUS.

Defense's Request to Bar Public Denied—Number Spectators Limited to Seating Capacity of Court. Woman Witness Located—Notorious Principals Take Stand First.

The full panel of jurors was obtained late yesterday afternoon to try the case against George H. Bixby, the Long Beach millionaire, who is charged with having contributed to the delinquency of two young women.

Deputy District-Attorney Keyes, without making an opening statement, will proceed at once with his witnesses. Helen Cleo Barker probably will be the first witness for the State. She will be followed by Marie Brown Levy. Several other former inmates of the Hill-street apartments maintained by Mrs. Emma Goodman will be asked to testify.

At the morning session the defense attorneys asked Judge Bledsoe to bar spectators from the courtroom. After taking the noon recess for consideration, the court announced that he believed such a course would be unwise, in view of the notoriety given the grand jury investigation and subsequent developments.

The number of spectators will be limited by the seating capacity of the courtroom. As soon as the seats are filled the bailiff will close the doors. The curious will not be permitted to loiter in the corridors.

During the morning session, Mrs. Elizabeth Lacy, mother of Marie Brown Levy, fainted.

Detective Boden located Grace Redwine, one of the State witnesses, yesterday. She maintained apartments at two different rooming houses. All other women witnesses are supposedly kept in seclusion until wanted by the prosecution.

The jurors are: W. Mollenkoff, Monrovia; Elmer B. Teague, San Dimas; P. F. Griswold, Covina; S. C. Buehn, Artesia; H. L. McCabe, Lankershim; B. Miller, Covina; S. T. Thurman, El Monte; H. Humphrey, Pasadena; D. L. Crane, Whittier; James Moyle, Artesia; Edward Feckler, Pomona, and A. Comstock, Bassett.

HUSBAND MAKES APPEARANCE.

Suit to have the court revoke the letters of administration granted Mrs. Anna Riecker on the estate of her sister, Lillian E. Austin, who died December 6, 1912, was begun in the Probate Court yesterday by Stewart & Stewart, attorneys for Charles E. Schofield, a business man of New York, on the ground that he was her husband and is entitled to administrate the $82,000 estate.

When the case was called by Judge Myers, Attorney Paul Stewart stated that he had proof that Schofield had married Miss Austin twenty-nine years ago, and there had been no divorce. Mrs. Riecker, it is said, had never known of her sister's alleged marriage. The court granted a continuance until October 10, giving Mrs. Riecker leave to file an amended complaint. Meantime depositions will be taken in New York among old friends and acquaintances of Schofield and Miss Austin to learn if they knew of the marriage.

The petition of Mrs. Riecker for letters of administration sets forth that she was the only heir of her sister. The contest started by Schofield, on the ground that she had married him, gives him half of the estate if the relationship is established.

LOVES HIM.
MUTE WON'T TESTIFY.

Notwithstanding the wrong she says 17-year-old Mauro Sandovel is responsible for, Josephine Garcia, 15, and deaf and dumb, declares she loves Mauro and is willing to marry him. Mauro, who denies the charge, was arrested, charged with having contributed to the girl's delinquency. At the hearing yesterday the girl refused to testify against him.

Josephine attended the Deaf and Dumb Institute at Berkeley, and now resides at Lamanda Park. Her testimony was interpreted by Miss Bessie Reeves of the Jefferson-street school. In view of the seriousness of the charge and Mauro's denial, Judge Taft continued the case until next Wednesday for further investigation.

SENSATION.
SUIT FOR DIVORCE.

Mrs. Sarah A. Wall of the Huntley apartments has filed suit for divorce against Samuel W. Wall.

She alleges non-support and cruelty, the latter consisting, it is alleged, of her husband's attentions to other women. Some of these women are said to be socially prominent. Their names will be made known at the trial.

The Walls married twenty-eight years ago, have one child, who is in the custody of the mother. The couple separated eighteen months ago. Mrs. Wall, a striking brunette, has made a success in business. Wall was formerly in business in Alaska.

OTHER WOMAN.
FAILURE-TO-PROVIDE CASE.

Another woman appeared yesterday to figure in the failure-to-provide case against John Trinkaus, arrested for neglecting his children—Florence, 13, and Myron, 10 years of age.

Judge Jackson questioned Trinkaus and discovered that he was "bachling it" but that a woman visited him.

"If you can keep another woman you can provide for your children," the court admonished. Trinkaus was bound over.

GANGSTER GOES.
SENTENCED TO IONE.

Charles Weaver, a member of the auto-bandit gang, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Taft in the Juvenile Court to Ione during his minority. He is the first member of the gang to be disposed of. Percy Ingling, 19, will be tried in Department Twelve.

During the operations of the gang it is alleged by the police that they stole equipment from approximately 250 automobiles and collected rewards from probably twenty men and women from whom they had previously stolen machines. Several hold-ups also are credited to them.

WINS DAMAGES.
AWARD TO AUTO VICTIM.

The $15,500 damage suit of Oliver S. Barnum, an automobile repairman who was struck and injured by an automobile driven by Frederick C. Silent on West Seventh street, June 25, 1911, was tried yesterday by Judge George L. Jones of Nevada City, who found judgment for Silent.

Testimony showed that Barnum was crossing Seventh street, and, seeing the auto approach, stepped back.

In the court's opinion the sudden and unexpected turn of the machine by Barnum was the cause of the accident. Silent had endeavored to pass between Barnum's machine and another auto.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.
BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

WANTS SEPARATION. Mrs. Elizabeth Settles, in a separate-maintenance suit against J. Calvin Settles, alleges that he deserted her December 6, 1912, and previously repulsed her efforts at affection. She alleges he desired to be free. She asks the court to give her $75 a month alimony and to have Settles restrained from disposing of cash in bank and a contract for the sale of land worth $1500.

LETTERS TESTAMENTARY. Letters testamentary were granted yesterday to Mrs. Alice McManus, widow of Joseph McManus, who died at his residence, No. 745 California street, Pasadena, August 29, and to her son, Edward J. McManus. McManus's property in this county is worth $30,000 and consists of stocks and bonds. He was a furniture dealer at Elizabethport, N. J., and owned more than $50,000 in that State. The petition was represented by Attorney W. A. Freeman.

ALIENATION SUIT. George C. Gilson is made defendant in a $50,000 suit, charging alienation of the affections of Mrs. Addie Chapman. In a complaint filed yesterday, M. A. Chapman states that he was married at San Bernardino, August 19, 1912, and that Mrs. Chapman was a faithful wife until the advent of Gilson, whose interference compelled Chapman to separate from her August 20, last.

GUILTY OF ASSAULT. Ralph Goleta was found guilty of assault with a deadly weapon in Judge Willis's court yesterday. Deputy District Attorney Doran prosecuted the case. The defendant was charged with attacking Miss Lena Siler of Long Beach. A train came along and the defendant ran away. He was arrested by Constable Way from a description furnished by the girl. The incident occurred at Burke station on the Long Beach line. The defendant will be sentenced tomorrow.

BANKRUPTCY ALLEGED.

Involuntary Petition to Federal Court Charges That Laundry Corporation Is Insolvent.

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed against the Berlin Dye Works and Laundry Company in the United States District Court yesterday. The petitioners are S. N. Clark, C. B. Dodge and the Commercial Motors Company. It is alleged that Clark is the assignee of a note dated March 15, 1913, for $14,500, for money borrowed of the Merchants' National Bank of this city; that Dodge is the owner of a claim of E. A. Featherstone, calling for the payment of $506.84, and that there is due the Commercial Motors Company $366.77.

It is charged that the corporation is insolvent, and that within four months of the filing of this petition it had committed an act of bankruptcy on May 23, 1913, in paying a claim of Chandler & Lyon, a creditor, amounting to $200, and had further violated the law on August 14, 1913, while insolvent, in transferring certain real estate to Oscar Greenbaum, also a creditor, valued at $2000.

TRAFFIC EXPERTS COMING.

High Officials of Harriman Lines to Inspect Facilities Hereabouts Following Salt Lake Conference.

B. L. Winchell, by many considered America's foremost traffic expert, is due here Saturday at the head of a party which will include Vice-President J. A. Munroe of the Union Pacific traffic department, W. H. Bancroft, first vice-president of the Salt Lake and vice-president and general manager of the Oregon Short Line, and perhaps President A. L. Mohler and Passenger Traffic Manager Gerrit Fort of the Union Pacific.

Winchell, who was formerly president of the 'Frisco system, is now director of traffic of the Harriman lines. His visit at this time is considered of significance, as he has been in conference at Salt Lake City all week with officials of the Harriman lines and of the Salt Lake on matters connected with the improvement of transportation facilities and general betterment of service in preparation for exposition year.

General Manager Nutt and General Traffic Manager Wann of the Salt Lake were present at the meeting and will accompany Winchell and party here, leaving Salt Lake City tomorrow morning and running on a special over the line with frequent stops for inspection. General Passenger Agent Peck and General Freight Agent Sloan of the Salt Lake are to leave here today to join the party somewhere in Utah.

Winchell is expected to go North from here and will probably return East either over the Central Pacific on the Oregon Short Line.

CITY PATENT THIEF?

A suit was filed in the United States District Court yesterday by George J. Henry, Jr., of San Francisco, against the city of Los Angeles, alleging infringement of an electro-mechanical water wheel governor, invented and patented by Lamar Lyndon, in 1900, of whom the orator is the successor in interest. It is claimed that the city infringed on the patent in the Owens River aqueduct project in Inyo county, where the device used by the defendants is said to have contained and embraced the invention described. The usual injunction restraining the defendants from further alleged infringement and an accounting are asked for.

SLAYER BOUND OVER.

Frank Kiser, the confessed killer of his wife and Harry Sharpley, was bound over to the Superior Court yesterday by Police Judge Cassidy on a charge of murder.

On the testimony of detectives and Eugene H. Cohn, an early arrival at the house of tragedy, Kiser was held. The two little children of the slain woman were present at the hearing. Their testimony was incriminating.

NATURALIZATION DAY.

A class of 112 persons seeking naturalization appeared before Judge Morrison yesterday. Owing to the size of the class it was divided into sections. The third section will be heard today. Mrs. Catherine Marion Grant is the lone woman in the class.

QUARANTINE FOR BUGS AND PLANTS

Safeguard Against Entry Through the Mails.

All Such Things Go to the Washington Station.

Diseased Plants Will Be Scientifically Cured.

[Washington Star:] Bugs and plant diseases that expect to stow away in the mails and thus gain entry to this country to raise Cain with the farming interests are now confronted at the Department of Agriculture with a cul-de-sac from which there is no exit except through the crematory.

The new safeguard is the "quarantine room" that has just been established in the office of seed and plant introduction. It has worked only once in the few days since it was built. That was over a shipment of South American potatoes. G. H. Wright, one of the agricultural explorers, has been gathering new varieties of strange potatoes in the Andes. His first shipment was put through the separator and enough harmful bugs were extracted to have made the potato crop of the country look like a 5-cent order of hashed brown.

The quarantine-room is a harmless-looking structure. It is just a little glass-inclosed cage about 8x12 feet in one of the big office-rooms of the new building on Fourteenth street. It is bugproof and glass inclosed, except for wire netting over the door and windows—forty-mesh netting—almost as close as cheese cloth and too small to allow the passage of anything much bigger than a typhoid germ. Every foreign plant that is mailed to the United States has to be addressed to the Secretary of Agriculture and go to this room. This is the result of the recently passed Federal plant quarantine law.

The United States belongs to the International Postal Union. Postmasters all over the world will not receive plant specimens for this country unless they are consigned to this quarantine-room.

The scheme, in fact, worked too well at first, and a lot of the official agricultural explorers in foreign lands, where there was not an efficient system of plant inspection, found they could not mail their collections home till the department had stepped in and assured the director of the International Postal Union that it was all right and that the little quarantine-room was working.

The new establishment is fitted with a couple of tables, microscopes and a tight-covered tin ash can. Whatever in the way of foreign plant specimens is received has to go first to this room in the original package. There the specimens are opened and inspected. Bugs, wrappers and everything but the plants and their labels are consigned to the ash can. At intervals this is taken out and the contents burned.

If the plants are under suspicion of being diseased instead of bug infested they are sent to a quarantine greenhouse in the department grounds and propagated there, where the disease is cured or the plants destroyed before they have a chance to get out into the country and spread crop disorders.

In fact, both these little places are as practically outside the United States as though they were located at the north pole, though the United States exercises over them what might be termed extra-territorial jurisdiction as it does over its foreign embassies and legations.

One of the first things that emphasized the need of such a quarantine station was a shipment of date palms from Egypt, received over a year ago. This was opened in one of the ordinary greenhouse work-rooms and there dashed out of the shipment a black Egyptian rat. Of course, a rat meant possible bubonic plague, coming as it did from a country where the disease prevails. So the laborer who was unpacking the dates did a graceful Craig-fail that landed him standing on top of a packing case.

The rat had him treed, and would have kept him there like a modern St. Simon stylites on his pillar, but there was an emergency call telephoned to the biological survey, and its faithful cohorts marched down on the greenhouse, where they rounded up the rat in a rusty but trusty wire trap bought for the purpose from a conveniently adjacent second-hand store.

The bureau of entomology went over the rat with a fine-tooth comb, and found not only no bubonic plague fleas, but no fleas of any sort. So the crisis passed.

But the urgent necessity for the quarantine room was demonstrated and it has now been installed. In future it will be a thin rat or any other devastator that escapes from this limbo of undesirable immigration, and the moral is that if you want to mail any strange plant specimens to this country from abroad be sure to address them to the Secretary of Agriculture, so that they will come where they will be properly cared for.

TWO GREAT RIVERS' SOURCE.

The Amazon and Orinoco Have Their Origin Near the Same Spot and Practically Interlock.

[Washington Star:] Discovery that the Amazon and Orinoco rivers both have their origin near the same spot is claimed by Dr. Hamilton Rice, the noted English explorer, and his companion, Lieut. P. P. Ritter von Bauer of Vienna, who have just arrived from an expedition into the South American jungles.

For thirty months they searched for the sources of the two great rivers, and traversed country through which they believe no human being had ever been. "The country we entered," said Dr. Rice, "was wilder than Africa at the time Livingstone entered it.

"We discovered that the Amazon and Orinoco have their origin near the same spot, in fact, their small feed streams interlock, and are not, as most maps indicate, widely separated. For fifty days at a time we did not see a human being outside our own party of twelve, but we came across tigers and tapirs which were almost as tame as a household pet."

Truly Incompetent.

[Chicago Tribune:] "Out of a job, are you, Flaxby?"

"Yes; they got my scalp finally."

"How long had you held that office?"

"About thirty years. And it's pretty tough, at my age, to have to take up some new occupation to make a living."

"Haven't you got enough to live on?"

(Looking at him in disgust.) "Flaxby, you make me tired! You're not fit to hold a public office!"

ANGELS TAKE HOT CONTEST.

Players Find Diamond Like a Hot Stove.

Baker Forgets Cracked Ice and Is Beaten.

Perritt Uses a Parasol and Palm Leaf Fan.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

The Angels and the Seals danced around on the diamond like a lot of turkeys on a hot skillet for eight and a half innings yesterday, and finished with blisters on their feet.

It was without doubt the warmest contest seen here in many a September day, and the Angels made two straight by the hectic score of 5 to 1.

Therefore, the mystery daily deepens as to what means the Seals pursued when they mauled the McCredieites so unmercifully last week.

The Angels are now licking the Seals, who beat the Beavers, who are beating the Tigers, who beat the Angels, all of which doesn't begin to tell you "Who is Whom" or "Whom is Who" in our grand but eccentric little league.

BAKER SIZZLED.

Poll Perritt and Jesse Baker were the opposing pitchers in yesterday's Plutonic affair. That is, they opposed each other at odd times up to the sixth inning, when Baker, having neglected to pack his feet in cracked ice, was compelled to retire to the refrigerator for rest and refreshment.

"Cack" Henley, who had been kept in cold storage for just such an emergency, pitched the remaining innings clad only in his B.V.D.S.

Poll Perritt, having been brought up in Texas, where they at times have some climate of their own, and being so thin that it is impossible for the sun's rays to strike him anything but a glancing blow, survived the ordeal right well. He was in some misery in the seventh, but by holding a parasol in his right hand and a palm leaf fan in his left, managed to pitch the last two innings with a fair degree of comfort.

"Dad" did much to ameliorate the heat by turning on the spray system of grass irrigators in the eighth. Art Krueger stationed himself directly over one of the squirts in right field, and found the sensation so pleasing that it was with great difficulty that he was weaned away from it at the end of the inning.

KRUEGER HIT THE BALL.

Incidentally, Art aided the climate greatly in warming the cockles of Hen Berry's heart, by clapping out a single and two doubles in four efforts. This did much to restore Hen's faith in himself as a David Harum.

With Jeremiah Downs hors du combat, auto du combat or something else, Jimmy Johnston, the sole surviving descendant of Capt. Kidd, was yanked out of center field and stationed at second, and Joe Tobin, late of Missoula, Mont., and other parts of the Clark estate, disported himself in the central conservatory.

Otherwise, the San Francisco team looked about like it did the day before.

Feverish fielding by Metzger, Goodwin, Krueger and Tobin was fully in keeping with the temperature of things generally. Krueger performed the stellar defensive catch, when he came in like a fast mail and nailed Mundorff's fly back of first in the fifth.

AN ERROR HELPED.

Perritt's introduction was somewhat torrid, the Seals rattling him for three hits in the first inning, but even then they would not have scored had not an error been coupled with their clouts.

Mundorff shot a single past first, and was forced at second, Goodwin grabbing McArdle's drive in circus fashion for a fast assist to Page. Johnston hit to center, McArdle taking second. Hogan drove to Goodwin, and Claire stepped on second, forcing Johnston. He endeavored to double Hogan at first, but Jimmy got in a little strong-arm work on the sly that was overlooked by Mr. Held, and Claire's peg almost hit a lean, melancholy gentleman who had the right field bleachers all to himself. McArdle scored on the heave, and Hogan went to third. Tobin stole second, and Hogan was nipped off third by Byrnes.

Almost forgot to mention that Byrnes proved that he is jealous of

TWELVE DRAFTS FOR WILLIAMS.

Twelve drafts were placed against Johnny Williams, the Sacramento pitching phenom, according to President Baum, who witnessed the game here today. He will remain a week.

"They sprung a new system on us in the drafts back at Cincinnati," said the league head today to The Times. "Instead of putting the names of the players in the hat the teams cast for clubs and the lucky ones were allowed their first choices. For that reason the lists appear to be badly muddled.

"According to first reports, Ivan Howard of Los Angeles was won by St. Louis, but if I am not mistaken I believe Detroit took the draw and that Detroit eventually will secure the Angel utility star."

PATTERSON AND DERRICK HAVE FIGHT ON STREET.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] No official cognizance will be taken, either by the manager or the league executive, of the fistic encounter between Ham Patterson of Venice and Fred Derrick of Portland on the street corner after yesterday's game.

Derrick's friends assert that he was sitting on the curb opposite the baseball park entrance when Patterson accosted him and continued the verbal warfare, begun during the contest. Derrick started to rise, when, without warning, Patterson pasted him one on the jaw, knocking him to the curbstone and injuring his hip.

Derrick jumped to a clinch, but Lober, Lindsay and one or two of the Venice players separated them. Derrick will get back into the game tomorrow, but the attack will not add to Patterson's popularity here.

Oh, Wow!

HAP HOGAN'S TEAM FAILS TO HIT BIG BILL JAMES.

Venice Loses Second Game to Beavers by Six-to-One Score.

Portland Made Ten Hits from the Heaving of the Corpulent Roy Hitt—All McCredie's Men Back to Their Hitting Form Except Speas and Lindsay While the Tigers Are in a Slump.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Sep. 18.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Two architectural opposites—James of Portland and Hitt of Venice—hooked up in mortal combat today, and the human obelisk came out first best. James pitched one of the best games of his career, fanning twelve Tigers and allowing only three hits. The score was 6 to 1 in Portland's favor, giving the locals two straight in the series, and increasing their lead to seven full games.

A. T. Baum, president of the Coast League, was a spectator at the game. Perhaps that spurred Portland's great right-hander to greater things. Or perhaps it was his drafting by St. Louis.

At any rate, James's pitching performance was remarkable. Bill began by walking two men in the first inning, but after that he was as tight as an Armenian pawnbroker. In the fourth inning he fanned all three men, capping that in the fifth by fanning Carlisle and Kane with men lurking on second and third bases and only one out.

HIT HITT.

Southpaw Roy Hitt was tagged for ten hits, nearly everybody taking a hand in the clouting. Chadbourne tied the Coast record of twenty-six games of consecutive hitting by securing two singles. Rodgers and Doane whacked out a duet apiece, while Art Keres led his team with three hits in four trips.

Speas and Lindsay were the only Beavers to suffer crimps in their batting marks. Speas held down first in lieu of Derrick, who hurt his hip in a scuffle with Ham Patterson of Venice after Tuesday's game. Derrick will be back in action today.

VENICE STARTED WELL.

Venice got the jump on the Beavers with one run in the first inning on walks to Bayless and Kane and Brashear's hit to left which Lober played poorly.

Pessimism's poignant darts stung 2000 fans into temporary silence, but the sepulchral stuff hardly had time to settle over the broody boosters when Bedlam broke loose. Four runs the fighting Beavers herded around the sacks in the second inning, and that clinched the affray in a vice-like grip.

Southpaw Hitt endeavored with all his endeavor, and his left deltoid, biceps, triceps, forceps, etc., but the mackmen were not to be cheated.

DOANE'S TWO-BAGGER.

Doane flashed the rally sign with a two-bagger down the third-base line. Keres beat out a bunt, and advanced to second on Lober's out. Mournful of phiz, Hitt held a consultation with his catcher, "Rowdy" Elliott, and decided to walk Gus Fisher.

Never again will the 42-inch waisted Venice flinger walk Gus Fisher to get at Bill James. It might work against some pitchers, but James demonstrated that he is just as dangerous in the pinch as some of the real battera.

He glimpsed around the landscape of populated sacks, sighted one of Hitt's fast ones, and then poked it on a line into right field. James's single scored two men and gave Portland the game right there. Chadbourne's single scored Fisher, and Rodgers's hit to center registered James.

Portland scored two more in the seventh on two walks and hits by Rodgers, Doane and Keres. A sensational one-handed catch of Lober's liner by Shortstop O'Rourke, which Patsy converted into a double play unassisted, was all that kept the score from mounting to the eighth or ninth generations.

WORRY AND CRITICISM TOO MUCH FOR M'CAREY.

Fight Promoter Suffered a Complete Collapse Yesterday—He Had Just Received Word from Leach Cross That "Everything Was All Right"—Rivers-Cross Fight Is Probably Off.

As the result of a long line of worries and adverse criticisms following the death of Young at Vernon, T. J. ("Uncle Tom") McCarey, fight promoter and perhaps the best-known figure in fight circles in the United States, yesterday afternoon collapsed in the offices of the Pacific Athletic Club in the New Washington building.

The collapse of McCarey came suddenly and paradoxically, as it seems, immediately after reading a telegram from Leach Cross saying that everything was lovely and that Cross would cancel his date with Willie Ritchie in New York and would meet Mexican Joe Rivers in Los Angeles, October 14.

McCarey had just read the telegram when he suddenly seemed to wilt and fell to the floor. Dr. Carl Bryson, McCarey's family physician, was summoned and also Earl Rogers, attorney for the fight club.

Dr. Bryson ordered McCarey removed immediately to his home. He pronounced the collapse the result of too great a strain, coupled with worriment over the fight situation, and also the excessive heat of yesterday.

RIVERS FIGHT OFF.

Attorney Rogers, after a consultation with Dr. Bryson, telegraphed Leach Cross stating that the fight with Rivers was off and that McCarey would be unable to promote any fight for an indefinite period.

Rogers stated that McCarey had been suffering with nervousness for the last year and that it had been gradually becoming worse until, at the time of the Young accident, when he almost collapsed.

McCarey, who is very sensitive, suffered extremely from the adverse criticisms that followed the Vernon accident.

McCarey seemed to be failing rapidly, but insisted on going ahead and trying to match Joe Rivers and Leach Cross for the October date.

He had wired repeatedly for a week before negotiations had been closed with Cross. Then, when he thought everything was settled, came the telegraphic announcement that Cross had signed with Ritchie for a ten-round go in New York for the early part of October, which would have cancelled the Rivers date at Vernon.

TRYING TO GET CROSS.

This again worried the fight promoter and he had been keeping the wires hot trying to reach Cross and ascertain the truth of the matter. The telegram that he had just read was from Cross, settling the entire affair and agreeing to come to Vernon and meet Rivers.

Last night at his home McCarey was resting easy. A trained nurse was in attendance, and Dr. Bryson had called again. He ordered absolute quiet and would not say how long it would be before Uncle Tom could be about. McCarey himself insisted that his collapse was merely the result of the great heat and that after he had quieted down and cooled off he would be about, and that this should not take over a few days.

WARRANT FOR RIVERS.

Boxer Charged With Having Exceeded the Speed Limit in His Auto.

Abuses Deputy Sheriff.

Joe Rivers, who was once somewhat prominent as a prizefighter, is wanted on a warrant charging him with having violated the traffic ordinance.

Rivers also is accused of gross impudence to W. J. Fryer, a special deputy sheriff, when warned Tuesday night not to drive so fast along Broadday.

According to information against him, Rivers, with a gang of near-sports, was hounding traffic and when told to stop, abused Fryer and threatened to beat him. Rivers interested himself so keenly in his own "glories" that he tried to make his position more dramatic by belittling the deputy sheriff. Now he will tell his troubles to the police judge. The warrant was issued by Assistant City Prosecutor McConnell.

SACRAMENTO BEATS OAKS.

Judge Munsell Gave Senators a Scare.

Hallinan Bangs Out a Two-Bagger; Two Runs.

Lohman Finished the Game for Oakland.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Judge Munsell, who performed in the center of the diamond for the Sacramento aggregation, pitched a good game of ball today and it was far from his fault that the Oaks gathered the one run to drag out the contest. He did get by a tight situation in the first, but thereafter scattered his hits. Both teams had plenty of men on the bases in the early innings of the game.

There was no such thing as a run until the Wolves put a man around the circuit in the eighth. It was an earned run although decidedly scratchy. Lewis walked and was forced by Shinn. Lewis was credited with a stolen base, although he should have been fairly caught between first and second, Gardner's throw being off color. Tennant sent a high one to Coy and Moran tilled a safe hit to left. Clemens was slow in recovery and Shinn made the plate in safety.

WOLVES SCARED.

Oakland gave the Wolves a fright in the last of the eighth, but sewed the game up in the ninth, a gift pure and simple. Munsell walked Guest. Cook poked the ball at Hallinan, but with Kenworthy covering first and Young nowhere, he couldn't throw to second. He hesitated then changed his throw to first and Kenworthy dropped the ball. The mix-up saw Guest on third, Mitze fanned, but Zacher, batting for Ables, lifted a sacrifice fly to left and Guest came home.

Lohman, who pitched that tenth inning, was easy for the Wolves. Lewis drew a pass to first and Shinn sacrificed, Lewis with his speed going to third. Tennant was good for a scratchy infield hit and Moran with a double to center drove Shinn home. Hallinan followed with a long-distance smash that bounded over Cook's head to center and there were two more runs around.

That closed up the game. The score:

THINKS NATIONAL COMMISSION "DONE HIM WRONG."

Garry Herrmann, Charley Carr and Hedges, All Come In for a Calling Down—Loss of Pete Compton Hurts Him Very Much—Denies He Is Losing Money.

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] George Tebeau, owner of the Kansas City club of the American Association, who was in Chicago today, is all "het up" over his misfortunes, which he says are due to the National Commission and several owners who are always looking for something for nothing.

He couldn't think of enough things to say against Garry Herrmann, the National Commission, Charles Carr and Owner Hedges of St. Louis. He says Carr, who recently resigned as manager of the Kaws, was to blame for Meegan's poor condition when he joined the Reds after the Cincinnati club had paid some $10,000; that Carr was a mean guy for testifying against him (Tebeau) when the case was brought before the baseball court.

On top of this misfortune, George is on the outs with Hedges for drafting Pete Compton. It seems as though Tebeau had relied on Compton to be his best bet next season, having only recently traded Walker to the St. Louis club for Pete and a couple other athletes. Compton was the big issue in the trade, and Hedges at first refused to consent to the deal. After he agreed he lost no time in putting in a draft for Compton, so Tebeau was left holding the bag, and Hedges got a star ball player for practically nothing.

Speaking of the Federal League, Tebeau says the reports to the effect that he was losing money because of the third league's invasion, are untrue. He says the Feds are not drawing real money in Kansas City, and that on the last day of the season they had only 178 paid admissions.

A Second Atlantis.

[The Argonaut:] The fervent temperance spellbinder stopped in the midst of his campaign speech. "My friends," he said impressively, "if all the saloons were at the bottom of the sea what would be the inevitable result?" And from the rear came the loud and emphatic answer: "Lots of people would get drowned."

FREDDIE WELSH WILL FIGHT IMAGINARY FOE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

VANCOUVER, Sept. 17.—Freddie Welsh, British lightweight champion, proposes to shadow box himself into the world's championship here next Saturday afternoon, the day he was to have fought Willie Ritchie for that title. Having disposed of his imaginary opponent, Welsh said today, he will demand Ritchie's forfeit, proclaim himself world's champion and set in motion legal machinery to obtain damages from Ritchie for several remunerative matches Welsh declares he has lost through waiting for the champion. This is the British boxer's announced programme for Saturday:

"Weigh in at 12:15 p.m. at 135 pounds; hop through the ropes at the arena an hour later; shadow fight an imaginary Ritchie; land an imaginary knockout; declare himself world's champion; visit his lawyers and make a claim for the $2500 forfeit money."

Ritchie's forfeit was posted as a check on which he stopped payment before he left for San Francisco.

CLEVELAND SHUTS OUT BOSTON.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—Cleveland shut out Boston today, 2 to 0, in a game full of brilliant plays. Boston was in a position to score on several occasions, but Falkenberg refused to allow the needed hit.

TWO ATHLETIC PLAYERS HURT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHILADELPHIA Sept. 17. — Batting rallies in the sixth and eighth innings gave Philadelphia a victory over St. Louis today, 8 to 4. Manager Rickey assumed charge of the St. Louis team this afternoon. Harry Davis, the veteran first baseman and former manager of Cleveland, got into the game through an injury to McInnis. Davis drove in the first run for his club and started the rally in the eighth with another single. Three players were hurt. Outfielder Clarence Walker of St. Louis had his forehead split by running into the left-field bleachers in practice. It was necessary to take several stitches in his scalp. Pitcher Brown of Philadelphia wrenched his knee fielding a grounder in the first inning. Brown then threw wild to first and McInnis, in trying to make a one-hand catch, collided with Pratt. Brown left the field at once, but McInnis, whose left arm was injured, remained in the game until the fourth inning. The score:

DETRIOT TWICE BEATS SENATORS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Detroit inaugurated its farewell appearance of the season here today, by taking both games of a double-header from Washington, 5 to 1 and 4 to 2. Bunching of hits in two innings—the fourth in the first game and the first in the second—proved Washington's undoing. Outside of these two innings Detroit failed to score.

Detroit jumped on Boehling at the start of the second game. Bush and Bauman hit for singles, Crawford was safe on an error, and Cobb cleaned the bags with a home run. Boehling then settled down and there was no more scoring. Williams, a Detroit recruit southpaw, pitched steadily throughout. The scores:

A Seven-Goal Man.

ANOTHER NOBLE POLO PLAYER.

Lord Hugh William Grosvenor Is Coming.

Will Take Lord Reginald Herbert's Place.

Fine New Fields Prepared in Los Angeles.

Lord Hugh William Grosvenor of London, Eng., a brother of the Duke of Westminster, England's greatest sporting peer, and a captain in the Life Guards, will come to Southern California this winter to play polo.

This was learned definitely yesterday from Walter H. Dupeb of the Coronado Country Club in a letter from Lord Tweedmouth. The latter stated that his team of English peers would arrive in California shortly after New Year's, and would be prepared to enter all of the tournaments.

Tweedmouth stated that Lord Reginald Herbert, a member of the last English team to invade California, would be unable to come this winter, as he had succeeded to the title of the Earl of Pembroke at the death of his father a month ago. As he was now the head of the great house of Pembroke his time would be well taken up for the next year. Tweedmouth, however, had good news to offset this rather disappointing information. He stated that Lord Hugh William Grosvenor would come with the English team in the place of Lord Herbert, or rather the Earl of Pembroke.

STAR PLAYER.

Lord Grosvenor is one of the greatest polo players in England, being rated a seven-goal man, which is two goals higher than either Lord Herbert or Lord Tweedmouth. He has played in America several times, but has never been to California.

This will give the make-up of the English team as Lord Tweedmouth, Lord Innes-Ker, who was here three years ago, Lord Grosvenor, and a fourth who is not named, but who is vouched for as being on a par with the other three peers as far as polo is concerned.

The Englishmen this year will bring some of their finest ponies with them, as they are determined to carry away the All-American cup, which is played for annually at Coronado in March.

The fact that the English peers will return in force this winter is an assurance that the polo season will be of unusual brilliance and that the tournaments at Pasadena, Coronado and at the new Midwick Club will be well patronized.

WANTS PONIES.

In connection with the visit of the Englishmen to California there is a strong rumor current that Lord Grosvenor will endeavor to purchase the pick of California's wonderful polo ponies for the use of the English polo team during the international matches for the world's polo cup. The Duke of Westminster has been the financial strength back of the English team that played Meadow Brook, and as it is known that the Englishmen laid a great deal of the fault for their loss to the Americans to the superior excellence of the American ponies, it is believed that Lord Grosvenor will make a great effort to pick up a string of the best ponies in the State for the use of his brother and the English team.

Down at Coronado, despite the hot weather, there is a force of men at work on the three big polo fields. They have been quietly working over the turf since the last game was ended last spring. Very little practicing has been allowed on the fields, and they are being constantly sprinkled and cared for, until they resemble a smoothly-kept private lawn. It is expected that the championship field where the big matches are played will be in its best condition when the tournament time rolls around.

FINE NEW FIELDS.

At Midwick the same condition exists. A force of men have kept the two fields perpetually watered, until they resemble a great spread of dark green velvet. It is not known whether or not the fields of Midwick will be used this year. The best-informed polo men urge that they be given one more year to form a deep turf before the struggling ponies are turned loose to tear and plunge over the sod.

However, there will be at least one tournament at Midwick, if it is only for one week, but the general use of the fields will not be encouraged until one year hence.

The Pasadena Polo Club's field at Tournament Park is in excellent condition, and while it is not as desirable as a turf field, there have been some very fast matches played there.

The new Earl of Pembroke,

Pleasantly remembered in Southern California as Lord Reginald Herbert, a member of the English polo team that played here two years ago. He will be unable to come to California this winter with Lord Tweedmouth's team as he had intended owing to his accession to his father's throne.

STANFORD GOSSIP.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Sept. 16.—The Intercollegiate Rules Committee will take a final vote on the seven-man scrum clause at the next meeting, which will probably be within the next two weeks.

Field Rugby Coach Floyd Brown has been appointed instructor in the engineering department of the university of the Pacific. This will not affect his duties as coach at Stanford.

R. M. Brown, varsity fullback substitute last year, has registered, and was on the field in togs last night.

Nearly 200 Encina Hall men last night participated in the annual "pajama peerade."

For September graduation, on Friday, were conferred sixteen degrees, eleven bachelor of arts, one bachelor of laws, and four master of arts. E. E. Tincher of Long Beach, P. P. Ward of San Diego, and G. W. Jordan of Colton, received the B. A. degree, and Marvin Lloyd Darsie of Los Angeles, an M. A.

The freshmen will meet the sophomores tonight in the annual interclass game; and on next Thursday the seniors and the juniors meet.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

SALT LAKE CITY is knocking at the door of the Pacific Coast League, the same being a modest affair to enter.

Its citizens feel convinced in their own minds that they have outgrown the Union Association, a semi-circuit with which they have been affiliated in the past, and desire to become a link in the Coast League chain of clubs.

They seem to be very much in earnest, and the Utah city being quite a live burg, with pronounced sporting proclivities, said predilection running largely to bicycle racing and baseball, their plea is likely to receive serious consideration at the annual meeting of the league next winter.

Harry Berry and Ed. R. Maier, local league directors, and the principal owners in the southern end of the circuit, were rather noncommittal in sentiment when shown a dispatch stating that Salt Lake would make a strong bid for membership in the Coast League.

Neither offered any opposition to the proposition, but said that it was solely for the directors to decide at the annual meeting. Both agreed that it is only a question of time until the Coast League will expand to eight clubs, and admitted the possibility of Salt Lake being admitted when such action is taken.

No proposition has been made to date, but Salt Lake City and San Francisco are the latter city be found in the first class AA baseball, Salt Lake would be taken in and some time in the Northwest selected as a eighth city.

There has been talk of expansion for a number of years now. It may not come this year, and again not until 1914 it is believed, however, that the time is fast approaching when the league must increase its circuit to eight cities.

The eastern major league magnates have major league baseball in Salt Lake. They expect eventually to put major league baseball independents. In order to realize their ambitions they must have eight cities. If they can get in the present circuit two of the six choice baseball towns in the league will cover the Coast like a tent, and will have little fear from the majors or a competing circuit here.

That Salt Lake could support class baseball there is not the slightest doubt. The only drawback is its comparative isolation, and the intervening desert, which the teams would have to cross in making the jump. The jump to Salt Lake is approximately $60 more than from Los Angeles. This is quite a handicap half as far as Portland is from Los Angeles, and less than from San Francisco to Portland. The Coast League hasn't, and never has had, a compact circuit. The jump between Los Angeles and Salt Lake is not necessarily a handicap to the latter as a baseball proposition.

Ed. Reul a Caveat.

Commenting on the possibility of baseball coming to Salt Lake, one Salt Lake scribe waxes in glee over the prospect, as follows:

"Nobody would be some honor to have a ball in that kind of company, but after a year or two in the second division, while the Salt Lakes are being formed and matured, there is no sense in joy to skin San Francisco or Los Angeles out of the money, which would you rather do—see a game or watch 'Honest Ed' Reul and Hap Hogan on the coaching lines in a close game between Salt Lake and Venice?"

Well, I would pass up the game.

Jack Ness has taken a couple of players under his managerial wing, and endeavor next season to land them regular league berths. Pernoll Smith, third baseman, of the Pueblo Electrics, and Ed. Hall, outfielder on the same team, are the parties for whom the Ness is working great things in baseball. Hall is a Polytechnic product.

Another Great Thirst.

Baseball has launched the Ginks. Its popularity, as the name indicates, is confined to the baseball fraternity, and is responsible for numerous fines. Every baseball player nightly on Spring street wants beers are ordered at each sitting. It now boasts a proud membership of ten.

Unique Job for Altrock.

Henry Berry believes that Clark Griffith may yet relent and send him the inimitable Nick Altrock.

Nick, while not much to look at as a ball player any more, is a very valuable citizen. Among diamond comedians, he is what Harry Lauder is among hamfat humorists. Also, he knows much about pitching and has the knack of inculcating that knowledge in budding boxmen.

It is Berry's intention to install him as the club's chief coach and entertainer, and place him in charge of the young pitchers.

Even money is now being bet that Altrock, if he comes to the Coast, will make Hap Hogan back up on the coaching line.

Nick, if the deal goes through, will be the first man to sign with a Coast League club solely in the capacity of coach. Several of the major league clubs carry specialists in this line, however.

Pretty Soft for Daley.

Pete Daley hasn't been getting into the cast with the Athletics with enough frequency to display his true ability, but that isn't going to keep him from tearing off a massive chunk of that world's series lucre, and that being the case, he should worry. Tony Daley, Pete's lil brother, will go East for the big show, in the hope that Pete will at least be allowed to hit in a pinch. Who knows but that the former Angel will get a chance to be a hero. Well, if he does, and gets away with it, there's going to be a real brass band at the Arcade when he steps from the train.

May Recall Sawyer.

Henry Berry is lost in admiration for Sawyer, the third baseman of his Fresno team. Berry esteems him so highly that he is thinking seriously of recalling him at the end of the California league season, and giving him a chance to familiarize himself with class AA company.

Equals Frisco's Attendance.

"Boots" Weber, secretary of the Angels, after making a minute study of the situation, is ready to announce that Los Angeles need not take a back seat to San Francisco as a baseball town. "Boots" says that under normal conditions, Los Angeles will outdraw the Seal city every day in the week except Sunday, and that not being a week day, doesn't count. He attributes the comparatively small Sunday crowds here to the various counter-outdoor attractions. Very loyal of "Boots" to thus rise up on his hind legs in defense of our fair city's ability to support the noblest of pastimes.

Angels Take Contest.

THE ONE RUN.

As nearly as I am able to ascertain from my score book, this was the only run made by San Francisco yesterday.

The Angels reclaimed this one and added another to keep it company almost before you could order a drink.

Maggert migrated on four wide ones, and Howard's attempted bunt resolved itself into a pop fly that Baker bagged. Ellis filed to Mundorff, and still Maggert lingered at first. Baker showed further symptoms of prodigality and passed Page. Krueger here began blasting, and scored Maggert with a whistling single to right. Page paddling around to third. Krueger stole second. Baker unburdened himself of a wild pitch, and Page presented himself at the paying counter. Metzger popped to Johnston, and it was all over for the inning.

The next outburst of note took place in the sixth. Page singled, and Krueger sent him to third with a roaring double to center. Metzger dropped a "Texas Leaguer" in left that left Corhan poised on one ear. Page scored, but Krueger was nailed trying to take third. Metzger went to second on the play, and after Goodwin had flied to Hogan, scored on Byrnes's single to center. "Cack" Henley here issued forth and applied the soft pedal, subjugating the ferocious Perritt on a drive to himself.

PAMOUS HORSE DEAD.

CARMEL (Ind.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Boone Wilson, the world's famous pacing stallion, with a pacing record of 2:13¼ and a trotting record of 2:20¼, is dead at the barns of his owner, I. N. Beeson, a well-known horseman. In 1895 there was a standing offer of $50,000 for Boone Wilson. He made his pacing record on the track at the State Fair grounds. Boone was twenty-six years of age and Mr. Beeson had owned him for sixteen years. He will be given a fine burial by his owner, who will also erect a marker at his grave.

COFFROTH WANTS RITCHIE AND MURPHY IN NOVEMBER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With both Jimmy Coffroth and Eddie Graney bidding for the services of Willie Ritchie for a Thanksgiving Day match, the champion has asked for twenty-four hours' additional time in which to make up his mind what he wants to do and has promised Coffroth that an answer will be forthcoming tomorrow.

Ritchie had a long talk with Coffroth late this afternoon, following which he said that he expected another conference with Graney would permit him to reach a final decision.

Graney has the fight permit for San Francisco in November. Coffroth has no permit within the city limits, but has declared his readiness to stage the match at Colma in the Mission-street arena.

It was the champion's wish to delay a final settlement until after he had looked over the eastern field and determined just what there was in sight for him. Coffroth argued that was not fair, since he had submitted his proposition, and expected an answer one way or the other.

"Coffroth has offered me $15,000 guarantee for the bout, and Harlem Tommy Murphy as my opponent," said Ritchie. "Graney has also told me that he would like to have me fight for his club on Thanksgiving Day, but that he wasn't prepared to name my opponent. He said he would give as much or more than any other promoter. Coffroth feels that isn't altogether fair to him, since he has come out in the open with his entire proposition. I have agreed with him on that point, but want to have one more talk with Graney to find out whether or not he is prepared to make me a definite proposition. After that I will decide just what I am going to do on the date in question."

Billy Gibson has not wired a definite date for the proposed Leach-Cross-Ritchie ten-round bout, and it is surmised that he may be having some trouble in coming to terms with the New Yorker. Leach, with an offer from Tom McCarey in his hands, would doubtless be prepared to play both ends against the middle, and it is unquestionably a matter of finance that is holding off a settlement on that score.

Cannot Take Water From Sea.

[Cincinnati Enquirer:] The necessity of obtaining official permission for taking a bucket of water from the sea on the French coast has been brought to the attention of holiday makers at Pourville, near Dieppe, where a customs official prevented a young married couple from obtaining two pails of sea water for a bath for their baby.

Before water can be taken from the sea in France a written request, bearing a twelve-cent stamp, must be made to the local customs authorities fifteen days after which permission will be sent.

This formality is insisted on to prevent the illicit distillation of salt.

Stockton Club Ahead in the Pennant Race.

Hen Berry's Fresno Colts Are Fighting Hard.

Oscar Jones Victoriously Opens Crucial Series.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Stockton team with Oscar Jones in the box, won the first game from Fresno here today by a score of 6 to 4, in a series that will probably decide the 1913 pennant in the California League. Today's win puts Maier's Stockton Tiger Cubs three games ahead of the Fresno Packers and the two teams meet each other in ten more games before the season closes on September 28. They are going down the home stretch neck and neck.

The game was a corker and the importance of the week's contests has the players on their toes at all times. The Stockton attendance showed a good improvement.

Jack Thomas, the Stockton leader and the best first baseman that ever graced the local diamond, won the game for his team with three hearty hits, one of them a homer. Three of the six runs were brought in by Thomas's bat. He also led the nine in dashing style. The Fresno club was dangerous all the way. Although Jones was at his best the Packers kept nicking him for hits, especially towards the close of the game. Mueser and Fahey did some of the best stick work for Fresno. Fahey is the recruit that the Los Angeles team acquired in a trade involving Pete Daley. The deal was made with the Philadelphia Americans. Fahey made two errors and one of them helped a run across the plate.

GEORGE WHEELER PLAYED.

In the ninth inning the Fresno aggregation made a great stand. With the score 6 to 4 against his team, Pierce, first up fanned. Then George Wheeler, for seven years a member of the Los Angeles Coasters, drew a walk. Irish Mueser, the Los Angeles boy who is the fourth best hitter in the league, sent a scorching single into left field. Fahey followed Mueser with a tearing hit through shortstop. Harry Stewart, the Fresno pitcher, then stepped to the pan to bat for Sawyer. Stewart once played with Happy Hogan's team and it is well known that he bears no love for the Venice manager. However, he popped to Johnny Butler at short and then Bender flew out to right.

Stockton scored in the first frame. Schmidt singled. Then Joe Wilhelt stepped to the plate. If Hap Hogan ever made a find it's in young Wilhelt. He leads the league in hitting with .335. He is head of the run getters and base stealers. He is the fastest man on foul balls that come near his garden any league ever saw. He is the idol of the Stockton fans and they appealed to him for a hit. Wilhelt calmly leaned against one of Harkins's shoots for a three-bagger. Thomas then scored Wilhelt with a scorching single.

DUTCH HOFFMAN.

Fresno tied it in the third. Jones walked Hoffman, the Fresno catcher, who has been a member of the Angel squad. Harkins also walked. They moved up a base on Berkel's error and both scored on a hit by Irish Mueser.

In the third Stockton got a two-run lead when Schmidt reached first on Fahey's error. Thomas's hit scored him and Pittman's hit scored Thomas.

Whittier Dope.

QUAKER MACHINE BEGINS TO LOOK VERY DANGEROUS.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WHITTIER COLLEGE, Sept. 17.—With a week of work put behind them, Coach Wilson's aspirants are getting down to the hard grind. The past week has been spent in the usual preliminary workouts, passing, falling on the ball, blocking and punting practice.

Now that the men are rounding into condition Wilson will start the backs at signal drill this week, while the line aspirants will go through starting, blocking and tackling practice with the dummy.

Prospects are of the best and enthusiasm is running high on the Poet field. Chances for a championship eleven have never been better, and the Quakers are determined not to let the opportunity pass. To begin with there is a veteran squad from which to pick, and besides the bunch, which made quite a little splurge in the intercollegiate series last fall, Wilson has some stars who are due to make some of the old fans sit up and take notice.

All doubt was removed from the minds of the Whittier followers over the registration of "Speed" Brownell, when the star halfback matriculated Monday, and set the coaches' fears at rest. He will be seen at right half, and his ability at open field work, together with his long spirals, should be invaluable to the team. "Brownie" is a fast, experienced man, having been in the game so long now that to play football is his second nature.

"Kid" Mason, at quarterback, has been showing great form in signal practice this week, and will probably be used at that place. In this case Walt Cammack will be shifted to end, and it is a foregone conclusion that he will make good here, as he has all the assets for a star end.

In the line are Newlin, Lewis and Findlay, tackles; Stone, center, and Bufkin, guard. Besides these there is a wealth of line material, and others should be developed soon. There is still a possibility that Captain-elect Hiatt will return, and in this case Wilson will have nothing to fear for his battlefront.

The backfield is what is causing the coach the greatest satisfaction. With "Bull" Finch, Brownell, Mason, Cammack and Chambers, Wilson should have far and away the best set of backs in the south. All are fast, experienced men, and have proved their worth on many occasions, while Finch's passing and Brownell's kicking are the best to be had.

With a line which should hold its own, this quintette will be unbeatable as a ball-advancing machine.

There is at least one away-from-home trip assured the Quakers this year, that, a jaunt to Tucson to lock horns with the Arizona State University. This prospect seems attractive enough to lure many huskies to Hadley field at 4 p.m. every day, and Wilson has a larger squad at his command than ever before. Lively competition for positions is in order, and this alone assures a successful season, and the coach who dopes his championship chances without considering the Poets this year is making a mistake.

BILLIARD NOTES.

E. R. Morse, playing 150, defeated Ellis, 300, in the amateur handicap tournament at Nelm's billiard parlors last night, by a score of 150 to 134.

At Morley's last night Frayne beat Jim Morley, 31 to 24, in three-cushion billiards. The finals will take place Friday night.

LOUIS MANGHETTI, RACE DRIVER, KILLED

NORFOLK (Neb.) Sept. 17.—Louis Manghetti, the Italian automobile driver, who won the speed championship in South America in 1910 and 1911, was instantly killed here this afternoon in the second race of the Norfolk fall festival meet. Manghetti's car capsised on a curve throwing Manghetti headlong to the outside of the track, breaking his neck. It was a "pursuit" race, in which only one other man was entered. Manghetti, who has been known as "Mad Louie" on three continents, because of his daring, was swinging around the half-mile track at terrific speed, when the accident occurred. He was 33 years old. His wife lives in Richmond, Va.

ELLIS IS SHOT-GUN CHAMPION.

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 16.—George Ellis of Stockton, shooting at a seventeen-yard range, won the Pacific Coast handicap shotgun tournament today when he broke ninety-five out of 100 clay birds. Will P. Sears of Los Banos, was second with ninety-four, and five other tied for third with a score of ninety-three.

The preliminary handicap, begun last Saturday, ended today with H. F. Wihlon of Troutdale, Or., a winner. Wihlon's score was ninety-nine out of a possible 100. Including an unfinished run in other events on Monday, Wihlon scored 153 consecutive birds.

R. H. Bungay of Los Angeles, with a total of 337 out 350 birds, led the 140 shooters, who attended the tournament for the three-day event. Bungay last year won the Coast handicap. The tourney this year attracted experts from all over the Coast, Northwest and Rocky Mountain regions.

Fanaticism and Progress.

[New Orleans Times-Democrat:] Without fanaticism of a certain sort progress would be impossible. The minds of men and women must be encharged with love of a cause, or hatred of a wrong, else they will not put their all into the fighting. The very origin of the word "fanatic" connotes absorption in a single idea, for the word is derived from the Latin "fanum" (a temple) and the "fanaticus" was supposed to be maddened by the divinity whose fane he frequented. And it is quite certain that now, as of old, the motive power of every great propaganda is essentially religious, even though the leaders call themselves agnostics or atheists. No absolutely selfish or absolutely skeptical person can lead either the masses or the classes. At the core of the true leader's being there must be an idea to which he clings and to which he will sacrifice all else with a light heart. Parnell was cold.

ATHLETIC CLUB OUT FOR TITLE.

L.A.A.C. to Play Severe Series With Trojans.

Then to Meet Northern Club Winner.

Series Should Be Great at U.S.C. Varsity.

BY OWEN R. BIRD.

The Los Angeles Athletic Club is about to enter the Rugby field with much eclat this season. The squad is a good one, being composed of nearly all of last year's veterans besides many new battle-scarred vets recruited from the ranks of last year's Trojan, Stanford and California varsities.

But in regard to this eclat thing. The clubmen are to have some honest-to-goodness competition and also some of the same sort of honor. To start with, the L. double A. C. is to meet the Trojan varsity five times this fall. The first two games are to be practice affairs, while the last three are to be for a loving cup, donated by Mr. Silverwood for the series.

FOR THE STATE TITLE.

Besides the clashes with U.S.C. are to be several battles with the Los Angeles High School, Poly, Manual and Hollywood. With the end of the Trojan series, the clubmen are to look horns with the winner of the northern club championship, in a game that is to decide the State club Rugby title. The Olympic Club and the Barbarians are the two teams that fight it out for the northern club title, and if the L.A.A.C. squad can defeat the winner of the northern clash, the team will, indeed, be worthy of sterling mark.

We must admit that the northern clubs have a slight edge on the local organization in the matter of competition, as each team plays a series of games with the crack Stanford and California varsities, which naturally gives them some of the greatest practice in the world. Again the players on these teams are old veterans at the game, nearly all of them having served their four years on one of the big State varsities. It is always hard to beat an aggregation of seasoned veterans, when the said vets are in condition, and this is the case with the Olympics and the Barbs.

The above is merely stated to show what kind of a championship the local club is after besides the title of Rugby champs of Southern California.

But our club has the class to do it, once the team gets a proper start. With a coach like Ralph Noble, a captain like Moe Mitchell and a manager like Bob Weaver, brains and skill are big factors, and it will be upon these elements that the success of the L.A.A.C. squad must be built if success is obtained, and there is no logical reason for believing that the team will be unable to win games.

Now, in regard to the series of games with U.S.C. It would not surprise anyone out of his right mind if the clubmen should hold the fighting Trojans even or even slip over a win, as the Olympics and Barbs are doing the same thing in the north, but it is going to be a great deal more difficult this season to put anything over on these Trojans than it has ever been before. Coach Pat Higgins has instilled a spirit of battle into the hearts of his warriors that is bound to go a long way toward winning games, without taking into consideration any of the other factors that go to make up a good combination of football players.

The club veterans are not going to meet a bunch of green, inexperienced men this year, but must do battle with men trained to the minute, full of pep and ready to go to any ends to win.

To win is the all-dominant and actuating gospel on the U.S.C. field this season. There are no stars to be pampered, but there is a star team, made up of fighting units, all working for one and one working for all.

Taking into consideration all these facts, the U.S.C.-L.A.A.C. series should be one in which fast, stirring, sterling and thrilling football will win the day, and well worth knocking off for a half-day to see.

After passing through this baptism of fire—meaning the three-game series—both U.S.C. and L.A.A.C. should be fit for their struggles with the northern men of war. In fact, this series should do the Trojans a world of good, for in the past stiff competition has been lacking and the local varsity has been forced to go into the big games with Stanford and California without having passed through the acid test, which is always bad for a team and a coach. This all has been changed by the club series, and the local fans can justly expect great things from the crowdpuit heroes.

The terrible heat wave of yesterday was too much for even fire-breathing Pat Higgins, the great chief of the Trojan army, poked his nose on the field, tested the atmosphere and said we will have a little lecture this afternoon. It was a stiff talk, and every man on the squad knew just what was his trouble when it was all over.

There should be some lively scrimmages after this week on Bovard Field, when Higgins sends his second teams, three in number, against the much-harrassed varsity, but it is all for the varsity's good, so let 'em come.

STANFORD TO MEET BARBARIANS.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Sept. 18.—Next Saturday the varsity is to meet the Barbarians in the first of a three-game series, and much better results than those of the Stanford-Olympic game are expected. The forwards then lacked teamwork, but this is being fast remedied by hard nightly practice. Work in the lineouts, at dribbling, and in getting the ball out to the backs, is fast improving. The Cardinal backs have been a surprise to the fans and will undoubtedly put up some pretty passing rushes next Saturday.

The freshmen meet Palo Alto High tomorrow, and on Saturday are to play Mission High. The line-up for tomorrow's game is scheduled to be the same as that of last Saturday. Practice so far this week has included passing rushes, tackling and backward punting.

The Palo Alto High School team that will line up against the freshmen tomorrow is as follows: Wing forward, O'Laine; front rankers, Sloane, Arnott, Lock, Capt. Card; side rankers, Sherman and Gibson; breakaways, Boulware and Stevick; half, J. Risling; five-eighths, Green, and Pratt; center three-quarters, Morse; wings, Wallace and Weeks; fullback, Gallagher.

RUGBY TO REMAIN UNCHANGED IN SOUTH.

PRESIDENT MOW MITCHELL and Secretary R. S. Weaver of the recently formed Southern California Rugby Referees Committee, stated last night that the other members of the committee would not be selected until further advices had been received from Palmer Fuller, president of the Northern Rugby Union and chairman of the Referees Committee. It was also decided to allow the matter of the fourteen-man team to rest until the northern body had either accepted the new ruling or rejected it. At the present time the seven-man scrum—without the wing-forward—is being tried out by the two northern varsities and until the method has proven a success, nothing is to be officially done, either in the north or south.

Capt. Mitchell of the L.A.A.C. squad, also said that the club team would probably play the eight-man scrum this season and if a seven-man scrum was used at all, it would be with the wing-forward in the game. These facts practically settle the local Rugby situation for the season, the southern teams playing the game as it now stands.

Rooting Psychology.

PALM OF VICTORY OFTEN RESTS WITH BLEACHERS.

Mighty Cheering from the Masses in the Beachers Often Turns the Tide of Battle from Ebb to Flood. Undergraduates at California Are Being Taught to Yell and Sing at the Psychological Moment.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BERKELEY, Sept. 16.—"Get behind the team. Yell and sing! Get behind the team," are the words that are ringing in the ears of every undergraduate over the football world of America. Why all this "get-behind" stuff? Does it really amount to anything to a team? Do coaches ever count on it in building a team, and why do otherwise sane, sober beings become football fiends during the season, and maniacs at a game?

ROOTING ESSENTIAL.

Every coach regards rooting as essential to the team spirit and many in choosing a team estimates its effect upon the players. A few men are so constituted that they can play nearly as hard to empty bleachers as when they are jammed with yelling spectators, but such men are rare. "Skook" Carf, now assistant coach at California, was such a man. Thick set, broad of shoulder and with bulldog fight, he found a stimulus in the smash and crush of body against body—in the personal encounter. Of just the opposite type was Twitchell. When Coach Schaeffer appointed him on the team a chorus of "crabbing" arose unto the very heavens, and the coach was severely criticised for having made so poor a selection. But "Jimmie" said nothing, and when the big game came with its thundering bleachers, Twitchell was transformed into a veritable demon that Stanford could not stop. The coach realized the possibilities in him an dsaw all that was needed was a spark from the bleachers to make him unconquerable.

In last year's team, though Schaeffer will not mention names, were men who were selected because of the vivifying effect the bleachers have upon them. He says that in choosing a squad for an intercollegiate contest the influence of the bleachers upon a man is always an important consideration. Some are too susceptible and become confused; others need that strange power emanating from a multitude to urge them on.

Nearly half of the speed and fight of the men Schaeffer attributes to the bleachers. He maintains, "No man would go out and blindly butt his head into a stone wall, and if he did, how long would he last? And yet in every hard-fought football game some man is laid out only to come bouncing back in a few seconds, his fight and will recharged by the cheering of his classmates."

BLEACHERS AND MUSIC.

Walter Christie, after twenty-five years of experience in training track athletes, states: "I consider that one-fourth of the efficiency of a track team comes from the bleachers. A man on the track must have music and noise to key him up. I always want a band when my teams compete. The livelier and better the music the faster they can run. In my own experience I found that I could never run the 100-yard dash under 11 seconds unless there were bleachers and music. On such occasions I could travel the distance in 10 seconds.

"A peculiar thing I have noticed is that California men in an intercollegiate contest invariably slow down while passing the Stanford side of the field and speed up when in front of the California rooting section. There is no doubt of the psychological effect of rooting and crowds upon athletes."

Psychologists call this effect 'crowd-consciousness," and recognise its power on men. It is a subtle, invisible something that does bring results. It might be likened unto an electric current flowing from the bleachers into the man on the field.

MOB PSYCHOLOGY.

Every one who has seen football games knows how new life can be put into an exhausted team by cheering and shouting. Psychologists are averse to stating just what proportion of extra physical effort can be caused by incitement of this kind, but many athletes have felt it, and know that the bleachers arouse to unwonted physical exertion.

There are cases at California where men have come from hospitals and entered intercollegiate contests weak and scarcely able to walk. The case of C. F. Kleberger, now professor of physical education, is one of the most striking of recent years.

Two hours after leaving the operating table he ran the 100-yard dash against Stanford, and won it in 10 1-5 seconds. His experience illustrates what power lies in the bleachers, for he says: "When I arrived on the field the captain came to me and told me I would have to run if I possibly could. Weak and barely able to get my spikes into the holes, I lined up for the gun. Just hen a cheer broke out from our bleachers and with it came a surge of strength that carried me through to the tape in the fastest time I had ever made. It was the bleachers that won that race."

The fact that muscular strength can be increased by encouragement, is recognised by football crowds who give vent to cries of "fight, fight," and "hold that line" when the goal is in danger. But when a feat of skill is to be performed, and it is known that skill deteriorates by coaching, breaths are held and muscles tensed lest the performer be disconcerted. Does not always a silence reign when a goal is to be kicked?

William James, late professor of psychology at Harvard, has made some interesting explanations in regard to the power of an individual to increase his ability. He says that fatigue is carried to a certain point and then cast off like a heavy garment.

SPITBALL IS VINDICATED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Health Commissioner George B. Young today gave the "spitball" a clean bill of health after receiving a letter from John Stuart White, head master of the Thomas Arnold school at No. 1302 North State street.

The letter urged to co-operate in a campaign of prevention, on the ground that it is a disgusting practice of baseball players, both insanitary and unaesthetic.

"I regret," Dr. Young replied, "to be compelled to inform you that I do not feel the necessity of supporting your campaign in regard to the so-called 'spitball.'

"I do not believe that spitting on the ball by the pitcher has any more effect on the health of the player than spitting on the bait 'for luck' when fishing has to do with the size of the 'catch.'

"Unquestionably there is much to be said in behalf of your position when the question is viewed from the side of esthetics or manners."

Kaufman Claims Foul.

TAFT, Sept. 17.—After outboxing Jack Lester for eight rounds, Young Al Kaufman was sent to the floor in the ninth round of their twenty-round fight here tonight writhing in pain. The referee counted him out and awarded Lester the victory, despite Kaufman's protests that he had been fouled. Physicians who examined Kaufman gave it as their opinion that he had been struck by Lester's knee. Up to the moment of Kaufman's fall, he had had all the better of the contest.

NEW GOLF ASSOCIATION IS TO BE ORGANIZED.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

WHEN the last match had been played at the Del Monte championship golf tournament, the Northern and Southern Golf associations held a solemn meeting and agreed that Pacific Coast golf had now reached a sufficiently important stage to warrant its running alone, and that the time had fairly come when it should throw off the shackles of the rather inefficient Western Golf Association, with headquarters at Chicago, and embark upon a new era of independence and prosperity.

It was also agreed that unity is strength and that the North and South should no longer be separate entities of minor importance, but should combine forces and form one strong association for the single purpose of serving the best interests of golf for the whole Coast. (Loud applause and general amity all round.)

So there is the immediate probability that the only future golf champions of this Coast will be either the California State champion or the Coast champion ,and these events will assume all the interest and importance of a big eastern event. Indeed, after the recent highly successful meeting at Del Monte, ambition in this direction need have no limits. Players from all parts of the country took part with equal zest and much front-rank golf was witnessed. And in point of numbers the event vied with the big national tournaments, while socially it proved attractive to the creme de la creme of rank, wealth and beauty.

Ed Tufts Proposed.

At present Edward B. Tufts of the Los Angeles Country Club is the president of the Southern California Golf Association—and a pretty good president, too—and Percy Selby of the San Francisco and Burlingame Country clubs is the president of the Northern Golf Association. Edward Tufts is proposed as the first president of the enlarged organization, with Mr. Selby in the next position of honor.

A year-book will be published under the auspices of the association, setting forth the rating of every golfer on the Coast, with a few hints as to their style of play, and giving a complete list of golfing honors won by individual members in the past. It will also contain every other sort of information that can possibly be of use or interest to golfers on this Coast. Both Tufts and Selby will contribute peerless articles on subjects calculated to elevate and inform all readers.

Other officers of the association will be chosen equally from the north and the south, and special endeavor will be made to obliterate all sense of rivalry and aggression between the two sections of the State. Both northern and southern players at Del Monte have unanimously made the delightful discovery that the other end of the State contains some particularly decent fellows, with whom one can safely associate without the least loss of sportsmanlike prestige.

Women Golf Associations.

The women's golf associations will be dealt with in the same way, and it is hoped that the future Coast championship events will be held at Del Monte on neutral grounds, so that the women competitors will have the same advantage as the men. The arrangement by which the State and Coast events have been held alternately at either end of the State has proved very unsatisfactory, the transference of the title from North to South taking place with an automatic precision that robbed the contest of all semblance of a genuine competitive result.

And the women players, even more than the men, have fostered the idea of antagonism between the north and the south which has done so much to mar competitions in the past. The unwisdom, to say nothing of the churlishness, of this course is now recognized, and all good women golfers will work to the end of unity and amity. Miss Cheesebrough of Burlingame will be invited to preside at the head of the enlarged organization, which promptly presages a happy and successful future. And I think Miss Katherine Malius of the Los Angeles Country Club will be asked to undertake the secretaryship, which should make for the most amicable results.

Why Macbeth Showed.

One question that we were all asking each other at Del Monte was just why Norman Macbeth always fails to show off up there. It causes his confreres the most grievous chagrin, especially after they had given him every encouragement by backing him heavily and even purchasing him for the highest price paid in the auction pool. "Positively the best golfer on the Coast, and yet I always loose money on him," is the sort of remark one heard from the southern men on all sides.

It is certainly true that the men who made a much better showing than Macbeth in actual results have not a tithe of his knowledge of the game. He knows dozens of shots of which they never dreamt, besides having a figure that was obviously designed for golf. Yet he has nothing to show for it, and they have taken home cups galore. It is that fateful manner of graceful indifference which suits him to perfection, but which doesn't win things half so effectually as Armstrong's dogged determination.

Macbeth and Armstrong were an interesting contrast in their betting, too. The former backs his sentiments and the latter his judgment every time. To Macbeth it evidently seems almost indecent to wager against a friend, no matter how poor his chances. And equally indecent to leave a friend unbacked.

Armstrong received a great ovation at the prize-giving when he received his runner-up cup. A great many northerners professed real sorrow that the championship should not have come south. Jack Neville, the champion, is a very popular boy, but it was felt that a change this year would have met general approval. Just because the southerners made themselves so popular generally and were frankly toasted as the "life and soul of the party."

All Visited 'Frisco.

Many of them found it hard to tear themselves away, and on Sunday quite a large batch of them hied them to San Francisco to round off the trip nicely.

A lone Angel could have experienced a homelike thrill on Monday in the Bay City by encountering Edward Tufts, E. H. Bagby, Dr. and Mrs. Dudley Fulton, James Long and several others in the vicinity of Market street.

They have been filtering home in twos and threes each day, but the Del Monte finale has not quite arrived yet.

TROTTING RACES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 17.—Uneventful racing marked the fourth day of the harness meeting at the California State Fair grounds today. Guy Borden, piloted by Willie Durfee, took the 2:11 pacing event in three straight heats. In the first heat Borden took the rail and won, his driver pulling up. The same thing was repeated in the second and third heats. Borden scored his best time in the last heat when he made the mile in 2:08¼. Bradmont and Cleopatra finished second and third to Borden in all three heats.

A. L. Scott, president of the board of State Fair directors, took the free-for-all amateur trot with his Mamie Alwin. The trotter had no trouble taking the first two heats, and was then withdrawn, the owner fearing injury to the mare. The last heat was won by the Empress, with R. E. Wright driving.

The 2:20 amateur trot brought out but one starter, Dixon. The boy went an exhibition mile in 2:18½.

It is predicted that the best days of the week will start tomorrow.

WINCHESTER

"REPEATER" LOADED SHELLS

Won The Greatest Of All Shooting Events

These shells are not expensive, yet their splendid shooting qualities were proved beyond contradiction by their winning the 1913 Grand American Handicap, the greatest of all shooting events. Most of the contestants used high priced loads, but Winchester "Repeater" shells outshot them all. To save money without sacrificing your scores at the trap or bags in the field, use Winchester "Repeater" shells for they are HIGH IN QUALITY THOUGH MODERATE IN PRICE.

The Next Issue of the

SEMI-MONTHLY MAGAZINE

Section of the Los Angeles Times

Sunday, September 21st

The Romance Number of the Semi-Monthly Magazine, is packed with twenty pages of humor, love stories, articles and pictures of a romantic tang—not to say tango exactly—by Helen Green Van Campen, Kate Masterson, David Warfield, Lillian Bennet-Thompson, Carl Crow, Richard LeGallienne, Armand Both, Henry J. Peck and others.

"The Big Ballad Hit"

By Helen Van Campen.

Illustrations by C. F. Miller.

Tin Pan Alley, where most of the popular songs are made in New York, is curiously fanned and freckled with romance as seen through the eyes of Helen Green Van Campen. Love, jealousy, the mysterious disappearance of Dolly Von Linden, the agitated search for her by Benny, her song-making husband; her spectacular reappearance and footlight triumph combine to make a heart-tugging, rib-tickling and really uproarious short story.

"The Theater Nuisance"

By David Warfield.

That actors have rights, as well as audiences, is cleverly urged in an editorial by the leading character actor of America in the next Semi-Monthly Magazine. Sneezers, programme rustlers, whisperers and such selfish or thoughtless folk are not only nuisances to their neighbors, but are the bane and terror of actors and actresses, says Mr. Warfield in his scathing protest and rebuke.

"The Girl with a Past"

By Kate Masterson

Illustrations by Armand Both.

As Mark Twain said of grand opera, the Girl with a Past in this gripping, unusual story, is not so bad as she may sound or as the title might indicate. In fact, she is a pathetically good girl who is desperately hungry for romance and who goes about finding it in an extraordinary way.

"New Wrinkles"

This popular and helpful feature of the magazine will add to a well-rounded number, and will have some aids in it for every housewife.

"Team-Work in the Flowery Republic

By Carl Crow.

Chinese guides for American business may not sound romantic but Carl Crow has come back from China with a business article that reads like a romance, and yet it is chock full of illuminating facts and informative figures. There are things, even in business, that hustling American money-makers can learn to their abundant profit from gray old China.

"Fetters"

By Lillian Bennet-Thompson

Illustrations by Wilson Dexter

Real power throbs in every line of this dramatic story of a Wall-street captain who gambled for millions and for a woman's heart—and found his riches turned into dead-sea fruit. Did the woman love him for better or for worse? is the problem of the story. It's for women to solve.

"Retrospection"

"What Next"

Cover Design by Henry J. Peck.
